Roosevelt Declares Embargo Endangers Peace; 24 Senators Will Fight Repeal; Calinescu's Assassins Executed at Scene

Army in Charge As Iron Guard Slayers Are Shot in Street

By Eugen Kovacs.
Copyright by New York Times.

Bucharest, Sept. 21.—Armand Calinescu, Rumanian Prime Minister, was killed at 1:30 this afternoon by six Iron Guardists as he was returning home from his office in his car.

The assassination which occurred at Prediugiria Stirbei, one of Bucharest's busy street crossings, was intended as the prelude to a Fascist uprising but the assassins found no support and the movement was quickly smashed by police. Nine men of the band were captured and two others committed suicide.

Gen. Argesanu, commander of the second army corps of Bucharest, has been named premier. He was war minister in the cabinet preceding Calinescu's. Gen. Ion Ilcus has been named war minister. Gabriel Marinescu, prefect of the Bucharest police and under-secretary of state in the ministry of the interior is the new minister of the interior.

Bodies Lie in Streets

The new ministers have already taken the oath of allegiance to the king and ministerial council is being held late tonight. The official communique points out that the murder was entirely internal in character and has nothing to do with any foreign country. The new government will continue the same policy as the previous one. Everything is uiet in Bucharest and the rest of the country.

Tonight at 11 the nine assassins were led to the place where the murder took place and the whole event was reconstructed under the strong light of reflectors and in the presence of thousands of people. Afterwards, the military discharged a salvo into the air and the assassins were then executed on the spot. Their bodies are lying in the streets and will be left there for 24 hours.

An automobile bearing the Police number 613 cut across the path of the premier's car. A peasant's cart, which had been put there in advance, made it impossible for the chauffeur to avoid the automobile or go down another street. Thus the driver was compelled to stop his car and at that moment the premier was shot.

Policeman Shot Down

Police Agent Androne, who always accompanied Calinescu, jumped out of the car, but before he could use his revolver he was shot down by the Iron Guardists. Other members of the band kept on shooting at the premier. There were six shots from the right, one from the left and one from in front of him. Then they opened a door of the car, dragged the body out and shot him again.

The whole affair did not last longer than a few seconds. The premier was left with his head on the pavement and his legs inside the automobile.

The Iron Guardists came in two groups. One consisted of four members who were in the police car and the others in a Bucharest taxicab. They left the police car in the street and sped in the taxi directly to the Bucharest Radio Station.

There they shot the door guard

Gallup Poll on The President's Popularity

Results of the first Gallup Poll taken on President Roosevelt's popularity since the European War started will be found on Page 2 of today's Post. Sunday's Post will give the results of polls on the public's attitude toward lifting the embargo and on the cash and carry plan.

The War Today

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT asked Congress to abolish arms embargo and substitute a "cash and carry" system; called program "the road to peace."

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL denied charges that changing the neutrality act during war constitutes an unneutral act.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT published "white paper" citing reasons for war on Reich and stating that Hitler told Ambassador Nevile Henderson, weeks before Nazi invasion of Poland, that he preferred war now at 50 rather than at 55 or 56. Page 5.

PREMIER CALINESCU of Rumania murdered by pro-Nazi Guardists; nine assassins slain on spot; Argeseanu, crown council member, named successor.

PREMIER DALADIER, in broadcast, said France would fight until "complete victory is won."

RUSSIAN troops occupied Pinsk as diplomatic quarters said Russian drive in Poland may thwart any direct German drive into Rumania. Page. 9.

Bulletins

Bremen Capture Denied

London, Sept. 21 (AP).—The admiralty said tonight that "rumors" the German liner Bremen had been captured were "absurd." The admiralty appended its Bremen comment tonight to a statement saying there was no foundation to other rumors that the British ships Hood, Renown and Repulse had been lost.

Submarine Attacked

London, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—A British warship was reported from Whitstable tonight to have raced full speed into the North Sea, and the ensuing gunfire indicated possible action against a submarine.

Nazis Reach Hungary

Volovec, Hungary, Sept. 21 (AP).—German troops pushing through Poland reached the Hungarian border late today across Volovec (Volocz), about 80 miles northwest of the junction of the Polish, Hungarian and Rumanian frontiers.

Windsor at Post

Paris, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—The Duke of Windsor, now a major general of the British forces, was reported reliably tonight to have arrived at the British general headquarters in France to assume his staff duties.

Ship Escapes British

Lima, Peru, Sept. 21 (AP).—The 5,898-ton German motorship Leipzig narrowly escaped an encounter with a British man-of-war off the Peruvian coast today. The Leipzig tied up in Callao Harbor about an hour after the arrival of the 7,270-ton British cruiser Achilles.

French Massing To Meet Major Offensive; Fight To Finish Vowed

By Taylor Henry.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 21.—Premier Daladier told the world tonight that Adolf Hitler checked the peace efforts of the "highest moral and political" authorities of the United States at the same time he spurned those of the European nations now fighting him.

The French Premier's world broadcast declaring France would fight until "complete victory" crushed Hitler and Germany's dream of "world domination" was timed to coincide with President Roosevelt's message to Congress proposing repeal of the arms embargo.

As Daladier spoke, the French on the Western Front were reported strengthening their lines in German territory to withstand the shock of an offensive the Germans were believed preparing, now that the conquest of Poland, with the aid of Russian invasion, seemed complete.

Daladier said frankly that the reason President Roosevelt's appeals for peace failed was that a secret agreement on the partition of Poland had been concluded between Russia and Germany.

Shows War Strain

Until now Daladier, in an effort to avoid an open break with the Soviets, carefully had withheld official statements on the Russian invasion of Poland.

Showing the strain of the war and more sad-faced than usual, Daladier in an emotional appeal shouted to the French that "the destruction of Poland had been resolved secretly in advance."

In a reference to the abruptly broken off negotiations between Russia, Britain and France which he once referred to as a "Stop Hitler" move, the French premier declared that "Poland's destruction was being prepared by arms and secret treaties even while there was a pretense of negotiations."

The Russian army, Daladier said, struck Poland in the rear "as the result of a secret treaty."

Says Pact Was Made August 23

"In reality," said Daladier, who is his own foreign minister, "an accord for the dismemberment of Poland was concluded between Germany and the U. S. S. R. on August 23.

"Hitler had pretended that he wanted only Danzig, a plebiscite for the Corridor, an autostrade (automobile road across the Polish corridor)."

In an urgent appeal Daladier declared France would not make peace with Germany until a "solid, lasting basis" could be established.

Warning the nation against the "German menace," he said it wanted to "destroy France like it destroyed Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland."

Despite Hitler's promises Germany wanted nothing from France, he said, the truth was that "Hitler wants to destroy France" and that the war was one to prevent the death of the French nation.

Reporters See French Repel Nazi Planes Over German Soil

By International News Service

On the Western Front in the Saar Region, Sept. 21.—(Via Paris Wireless)—Four American newspapermen, including an International News Service staff correspondent, today arrived on German soil captured by the French on the Western Front.

This dispatch was written at a spot east of the Franco-German frontier, location of which cannot be disclosed, as reconnaissance planes roared overhead and the intermittent thunder of heavy firing shattered the pastoral stillness of the Saar Valley.

It is right in the heart of the area where the fighting is going on.

The American correspondents witnessed action along the front and inspected two captured German towns, Nunkirchen and—believe it or not—Hitlerdorf. The latter village in the hills north of Saareguemines east of the Saar River looked forlorn and deserted. A French corporal there gave the International News Service correspondent an abandoned Nazi swastika flag he had taken as a souvenir.

Intermittent firing could be heard throughout the day from the front lines, and it continued after dusk fell.

A French observation balloon was shot down just a few minutes before the arrival of the newspapermen by a German plane but the French observer parachuted to safety.

At another point on the frontier French aircraft was witnessed in

'One Single Hard-Headed Thought'

The full text of the President's message:

I have asked the Congress to reassemble in extraordinary session in order that it may consider and act on the amendment of certain legislation, which, in my best judgment, so alters the historic foreign policy of the United States that it impairs the peaceful relations of the United States with foreign nations.

At the outset I proceed on the assumption that every member of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, and every member of the executive branch of the Government, including the President and his associates, personally and officially, are equally and without reservation in favor of such measures as will protect the neutrality, the safety and the integrity of our country and at the same time keep us out of war.

Because I am wholly willing to ascribe an honorable desire for peace to those who hold different views from my own as to what those measures should be, I trust that these gentlemen will be sufficiently generous to ascribe equally lofty purposes to those with whom they disagree. Let no man or group in any walk of life assume exclusive protectorate over the future well-being of America—because I conceive that regardless of party or section the mantle of peace and of patriotism is wide enough to cover us all. Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace "bloc." We all belong to it.

I have at all times kept the Congress and the American people informed of events and trends in foreign affairs. I now review them in a spirit of

$100 Bid for 'Ticket' to Capitol; Guards Halt Even Legislators

Rep. Kefauver, Attorney General and Secret Service Chief Forced to Establish Identity; 700 'Peace' Marchers Get In

By Howard F. Wentworth.

All the noted gate-crashers of history would have fallen in humble defeat on Capitol Hill yesterday when President Roosevelt's special session of Congress opened with the greatest display of precautionary measures in peace-time history.

The staid halls of Congress bristled with policemen and guarded barricades. Dignified dignitaries lost their composure when asked to identify themselves and any trespasser was promptly whisked from the building. Every door and every areaway was guarded by at least four policemen. Only special passes were honored.

When a group of 700 "peace demonstrators" from Philadelphia showed up, authorities decided their number was too great to cope with and permitted them access to the Capitol rotunda where they shouted "peace" demands at passing legislators. They tried to stage a parade with placards up Capitol Hill, but police halted the procession at Third street and Pennsylvania avenue.

Most of them were women waving tiny American flags and at every one they saw they shouted "No cash and carry," "Hands off neutrality," "Keep America for Americans." One woman was arrested and released after questioning.

When Attorney General Frank Murphy arrived, he started for the office of Speaker Bankhead, but his way was barred by a high barricade. He slipped through, but an alert policeman went into a half flying tackle and collared him down the hallway. It wasn't until an attache of the Speaker's office appeared that the policeman would believe Murphy was really the Attorney General.

Col. Starling, chief of the White House Secret Service, tried to get past another gate, but had to show his badge before the zealous officer would admit him. "Good work," commented Starling.

Passes to the building were at a premium and offers to rent them ran as high as $10 "just to look inside." One man offered $100 with no takers.

So-called "family" passes were issued for the gallery. One man came into the building on the House side, flashed his pass and said the woman with him was his wife. He did this four times, each time with a different woman, but made the mistake of returning to a door through which he had already taken one "wife" and police caught up with him.

Representative Estes Kefauver (Democrat), of Tennessee, a new member of the House, couldn't convince police he belonged in the chamber and had to be identified by a House employe.

Tom Mooney, in blue suit and gray hat, left the gallery and walked through the crowd without once being recognized—except by several newspapermen, and Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Agency head, who paused to chat briefly with the man who spent so many years in prison.

Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, recently returned to the country, told a friend in the House restaurant that he kept abreast of happenings here by reading The Washington Post and New York Times while in Europe.

Lord Lothian, new British Ambassador, seemed fascinated by the President's delivery. He leaned forward and appeared to hang on to Roosevelt's every word.

All the excitement of a wartime special session proved too much for Miss Grace Sanford, of Gurley, Ala., a business school pupil here, who fainted in the House gallery and struck her head on a seat. She was revived by Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician.

Representative Ralph E. Church (Republican), of Illinois, was carried into the House on a stretcher. Recuperating from an operation, he was determined not to injure his five-year record for never missing a roll call.

Senator Norris, who voted against United States entry into the last World War, applauded the President's speech throughout.

Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador, had difficulty finding the diplomatic gallery. After walking around the corridor, he came to the press gallery door and asked for directions. Then he got caught in a jam and had to be rescued by a Capitol policeman.

A taxicab driver, seeing the Presidential procession speeding down Constitution avenue, jumped out of his cab, leaving it double-parked at Tenth street, and ran to the curb. As he arrived the rear motorcycle escort passed.

"Gee," he said in a disgusted voice, "I ain't seen him yet. He must have been hiding in a trunk."

Repeal of Embargo Might Be First Step To War, Berlin Hints

By the United Press.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—German diplomatic quarters tonight thoroughly approved of President Roosevelt's "keep America out of war" stand but disagreed with his proposed method of carrying out the policy.

Comment was declined at the foreign office, at least until Fuehrer Hitler has had opportunity to study the text of the speech.

Well-informed Germans and writers in the German press bitterly condemn the proposed cash-and-carry policy and the proposal to lift the arms embargo. They declare that these work to the exclusive advantage of France and England and therefore are not neutral but decidedly prejudiced.

First Step to War

They even argue that delivery of arms to belligerents would be the first step toward American participation in the war.

Well-informed Germans approved at first glance three other points of the Roosevelt speech—to keep Americans and American ships out of the war zone and ban war credits.

Germany never has had great hope of war credits from the United States and therefore considered the ban would affect adversely only France and England.

Hull Denies Neutrality Law Revision Would Be Partiality

Secretary of State Hull yesterday denied charges that changing the Nation's neutrality act during a war would constitute an unneutral act.

He declared in a statement that "most of the progress made in the development of the law of neutrality has been made by acts or steps taken during war."

It is common knowledge, he asserted, "that belligerents change their rules, practices, methods and policies in various directions during the progress of hostilities," and he added:

"If neutrals were required to determine upon their policy in advance of war and in advance of conditions which they cannot possibly foresee, and to hold rigidly to that policy throughout the war while the belligerents are adopting such new policies as they may see fit to adopt, regardless of their damaging effect upon neutrals, determination of the rights and duties of neutrals and belligerents would be left primarily in the hands of the belligerents."

Declaring such a concept is not in accord with his understanding of the basic principles of [illegible] of neutrality, he insisted that "this Nation, or any neutral nation, has a right during a war to change its national policies whenever experience shows the necessity for such a change for the protection of its interests and safety." The only condition imposed, he said, is that any measures taken "shall apply impartially to all belligerents."

The argument that the United States would be taking an unneu-

President Fears America May Be Embroiled if Ban Is Kept; Opponents Promise There'll Be No Filibuster

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt yesterday solemnly charged a hastily summoned, somber Congress to chart for America a course of peace through a world at war.

With a cold gravity, new to his intently quiet audience, he said this could be done by repealing the arms embargo and by enacting a positive program "to protect American lives and property from danger."

He offered a "mantle of peace and of patriotism" which he said is wide enough to cover both parties. He warned against partisan domestic bickering in a world in peril. And he brought the joint session to its feet in a two-minute ovation with his dramatic, concluding plea:

"May you by your deeds show the world that we of the United States are one people, of one mind, one spirit, one clear resolution, walking before God in the light of the living."

Pledges to Keep Out of War, if Possible

Reflecting the President's own gravity, Senators and Representatives called back from vacations to frame a peace formula, listened in a silence punctuated by cheers at each repetition of his pledge to lose neither time nor effort to keep this Nation out of war.

Galleries, closely policed and thinned by a network of Secret Service operatives; diplomats representing virtually every nation except Germany, Italy and Japan, and seated members plainly showing their divided neutrality philosophies by their applause or silence, heard the President's measured, 33-minute exposition of his plan.

Over the radio his candid admonition that war shadows may not swiftly lift and that darker periods may lie ahead was carried to a listening Nation, and in six languages to war-ravaged Europe and to neutral South America.

Leaders responded quickly to his call for swift action. A meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy and Steering Committees was called for 11 a. m. today, while both Houses recessed until Monday. The first formal meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was officially summoned for 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Senate "Trouble Shooter" Byrnes and Senate Majority Whip Minton followed the President to the White House to map procedure. To the White House also went Senator Glass, of Virginia, opponent of the Administration on many a domestic issue but now solidly behind Mr. Roosevelt's peace program.

At the Capitol, seven Democratic members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee supporting the Administration's foreign policy gathered with Chairman Pittman to discuss the new bill to be superimposed on the House-approved neutrality measure.

Isolationists Hold Conference

More ominous to the President's appeal for nonpartisan accord was a conference of 24 isolationist Senators in the office of Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, scene 20 years ago of the planned fight against the late President Wilson post-war policies. There, according to Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, the isolationists agreed to fight embargo repeal "from hell to breakfast."

Confident of committee agreement on a bill within a week, and ultimate Senate approval, Senator Pittman said he was not disturbed by the isolationist threat.

"Didn't Pastor say he would knock out Louis?" he smiled.

To Pittman's office went 8 of the 11 Democratic Senators who failed by one vote to commit the Foreign Relations Committee to action on the President's neutrality program last session. One of these said the Administration now is assured of sufficient votes to report a bill to the Senate floor.

In advance of tomorrow's meeting, the group thumbed through all major measures introduced on the neutrality issue and studied the framework of a new one embracing embargo repeal and the President's other anti-war safeguards.

Around a substitute measure offered by Pittman last spring, including each of the President's points, is expected to be built a program that will be submitted to the committee tomorrow as a working base.

The informal group compared the President's last two neutrality messages and may ask clarification on one item. He told Congress yesterday that the result of two of his neutrality points "will be to require all purchases to be made in cash and cargoes to be carried in the purchasers' own ships, at the purchasers' own risk."

While Mr. Roosevelt's former recommendations have called for transfer of title to goods before

It makes you jittery, even if you read it in the papers hours before.

The President looked thoughtfully out the window for a moment, and then turned to the ex-Congressman, ex-Young Turk.

"I've got some sons myself, Maury," he said, "and if there's a war they'll have to go."

"Well," said Mayor Maverick, "if you have to send any of 'em send Elliott first."

Pickpockets Get $248 From Man in Elevator

Pickpockets working in a crowded elevator of a downtown office building robbed Henry Alvers, 1340 Rhode Island avenue northwest, of $248, he reported to police yesterday.

Alvers said he had just cashed a check for his son-in-law when he entered the building. In the crowd, he said, he reached in his hip pocket to make sure his wallet was there. Several seconds later a man backed into him, Alvers stated, and when he got off the elevator the money was gone.

House Appears Willing to Limit Special Session

Sponsors of Bills Say They'll Not Stray From Neutrality Issue

By John B. Oakes.

The House seemed determined to limit discussion to the neutrality issue and to adjourn speedily as the special session opened yesterday.

Leaders in the fight for antilynching legislation and wage-hour revision—two of the most explosive questions left over from last session—indicated they had no intention to becloud the neutrality struggle with their pet projects.

Representative Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, told The Post yesterday that when the House reconvenes Monday, he will announce that he will not call up his antilynching bill unless the session is "unduly prolonged," or unless other nonneutrality legislation is introduced. A discharge petition to bring Gavagan's measure out of committee received the requisite number of signatures just before adjournment last month.

Stating he was in full agreement with President Roosevelt's speech, Gavagan said he thought the neutrality question should be settled and Congress adjourned within four weeks.

Fish in Accord

His Republican colleague in promoting the anti-lynching bill, Representative Fish, of New York, also agreed not to bring the measure up now. Fish, said he favored limiting the special session to neutrality and related questions.

However, Fish said it would take the Senate "two months" to complete action on the neutrality bill. He predicted that when the arms embargo issue comes before the House, "we will retain the embargo by a larger vote than last time."

One of the principal advocates last session of revision of the wage-hour law, Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, asserted yesterday that he "wouldn't be a party to any attempt to distract attention from neutrality." He indicated he thought Congress should adjourn after dealing with the neutrality issue.

Chairman Norton of the Labor Committee, who was in the thick of the wage-hour revision fight last session, said she understood there was a "gentleman's agreement" not to bring up wages and hours at this time.

Proponents of new and more liberal WPA regulations said to avoid relief issue they would not press for immediate action. Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, acting chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that handles WPA legislation, declared that he had no plans to hear WPA proposals in the special session.

Chairman May of the Military Affairs Committee said he thought he would not propose legislation at the present time, but would call his committee together to discuss Army expansion plans for next session.

Urging increases in the Navy, Chairman Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee, said, however, he would not bring forward any bills at this session unless other neutrality legislation is introduced.

House leaders intend to have three-day recesses—maximum allowed under the rules—until the Senate produces a neutrality bill. The House will meet Mondays and Thursdays.

Monday's session is expected to be very brief, and so unimportant that Minority Leader Martin, who left Washington yesterday, will probably not return until Tuesday or Wednesday. Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, will act for the minority leader in the latter's absence.

Sunday Urged As Prayer Day

A resolution urging Congress to sponsor a joint session of prayer this Sunday afternoon "for Divine guidance" in the war situation has been sent to Vice President Garner and Speaker Bankhead by the Washington Baptist Ministerial Alliance. Chaplains of the bodies would lead the services.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, said last night that no answer had been received regarding the carrying out of the resolution, passed at a meeting this week of the Alliance. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, president of the Washington Federation of Churches and pastor of First Baptist Church, heads the Alliance, and Dr. J. Raymond Nelson, Bethesda Baptist cleric, is secretary.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Popularity With Voters Up Sharply Since War, Poll Finds

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 21.—With Congress and the Nation poised on the threshold of a great debate on the neutrality issue, President Roosevelt's popularity with the rank and file of American voters has increased sharply since the outbreak of war in Europe. Coinciding with the President's "limited emergency" moves of the last few weeks and his appeal for national unity, the American Institute's monthly index of Presidential popularity shows a five-point rise since August and finds Roosevelt nearly as popular today as when he was re-elected by a landslide in 1936.

GEORGE GALLUP

Last month 56.6 per cent of major party voters in an Institute survey approved of Roosevelt as President. Today the figure has jumped to 61.0 per cent. He was re-elected in 1936 with 62.5 per cent.

Throughout the South and Far West—Democratic strongholds—the President's popularity remains about the same as in previous surveys, with slight increases, while in New England opinion is still almost evenly divided. The President's chief gains in the last month have come principally in the industrial Middle Atlantic and East Central states and in the Mid-West farm area. In those places the percentage of voters approving him as President today has jumped from 6 to 10 points.

	Approve of Roosevelt as President		Last Points
	Today	Mo.	Ch'ge
New England	53%	51%	+2
Middle Atlantic	58	54	+4
East Central	59	51	+8
West Central	60	55	+5
South	72	70	+2
Far West	65	64	+1

A question which remains to be answered is whether the increase in support for Roosevelt's present policies will have an important effect on third term sentiment. Last month's survey found that whereas 56.6 per cent approved of Roosevelt as President at that time, only 40 per cent said they would vote for him if he ran for a third term. A survey which will show the trend of third term sentiment since the outbreak of war is now being completed by the Institute.

One probable explanation for the sudden spurt in Presidential support is that the Administration's foreign policy has been one of the most popular policies of the whole New Deal. Institute studies have found that whereas the rank and file of Democrats and Republicans disagree sharply on many vital domestic issues, they are in substantial agreement over foreign policy. And in the last few weeks, foreign policy has occupied so much public attention that domestic issues, with their concomitant divisions of opinion, have been largely thrust aside.

However, the rise in Roosevelt's popularity should come as no surprise to students who in the past have observed the effect of foreign crises on the prestige of the Administration. At the time of the Sudeten crisis in 1938, when Roosevelt sent peace pleas to Hitler and Mussolini, his popularity rose six points in less than a month.

Besides indicating the number of voters who approve or disapprove of Roosevelt at the present time, today's survey attempted to measure the intensity of pro-Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt sentiment. It inquired of all voters whether they approved "strongly" or "mildly" or disapproved "strongly" or "mildly." The results show that the "strongly approve" outweighed the "strongly disapprove," indicating a greater intensity favorable to the President then unfavorable.

Approve strongly	33%
Approve mildly	28
Disapprove strongly	24%
Disapprove mildly	15

Escaped U-Boat Prowling Baltic With 16 Torpedoes

Stockholm, Sept. 21 (AP).—The Polish submarine Orzel which escaped from internment at Tallinn, Estonio, is roaming the Baltic with 16 torpedoes, it was reported today by two Estonian seamen carried off by the submersible and set adrift in the open sea.

The Estonians, on board the Orzel as guards when it broke loose from its moorings and dashed out of Tallinn harbor last Monday, were rescued today by the keeper of a lighthouse on a small island off the east coast of Gotland, Ewedish island.

For three days the sailors, a seaman and a petty officer of the Estonian navy, reported they were kept prisoner aboard the submarine before they were set adrift in a small dinghy in sight of land. Most of the time the Orzel was said to have remained submerged.

Tax Revisers May Begin Drafting Bill

Sub-Committee to Decide in Few Days On Speeding Action

Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said yesterday the subcommittee on taxation may take advantage of the special session to speed up work on tax revision legislation to be offered at the regular session of Congress in January.

The subcommittee on taxation will meet in a few days, he said, to decide whether to start work on a tax revision bill now.

The subcommittee on taxation, of which Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, is chairman, had planned to start private meetings with Treasury experts November 1 with a view to drawing up a tax bill to be offered when the regular session convenes in January.

Plan May Change

"Now that the subcommittee is here," Doughton explained, "this plan may be changed. We are going to talk it over among ourselves, and we are going to ascertain from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Undersecretary Hanes whether they are ready to present tax proposals, now."

Prominent in the picture of possible tax changes is a lowering of income tax exemptions for married persons and individuals. Other subjects under consideration include more liberal provision for carryover of business losses by corporations, increased allowance for capital losses by corporations, further concessions in the taxation of individual capital gains, removal of a swarm of minor tax irritants, reduction in high surtax rates and reciprocal taxation of future issues of securities by Federal, State and municipal governments.

Lower Exemptions Doubtful

Whether Congress will vote legislation lowering exemptions admittedly is questionable in a Presidential year.

The Treasury has been anxious to repeal so-called "nuisance" taxes whenever possible, but prospects for progress in this direction are distinctly limited owing to the Government's heavy revenue needs.

Presumably the whole question of tax revision will be reviewed in the light of prospects for a war boom in business.

Experts at Work

When Congress adjourned in August, experts of the Treasury and the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation were instructed to prepare data for presentation to the sub-committee on taxation when it resumed meetings around November 1.

Since Labor Day, Treasury experts have been conducting private hearings at which business leaders have appeared and submitted recommendations. Their testimony will be turned over to the sub-committee.

The sub-committee plans to meet privately with Treasury and joint committee experts for several weeks.

Byrd Urges Strict Cash-and-Carry Neutrality; President's Plea Draws Praise, Criticism

By the United Press.

Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, who often has opposed President Roosevelt's domestic policies, said in a statement yesterday he believed the "strictest sort of cash-and-carry" neutrality, vigorously enforced, was America's best safeguard for peace.

"The President's presentation of the Administration's neutrality plan was admirable and furnishes the basis for a nonpartisan and unprejudiced discussion in Congress of the neutrality legislation."

Party lines were ignored in the praise, adverse criticism and noncommital expressions which greeted the President's request that Congress repeal the embargo provision of the neutrality act. Heer are some samples:

The Senate:

McNary, Republican, or Oregon, minority leader—The President stated his position with clarity and force and his message is entitled to the respectful consideration of the Congress.

Glass, Democrat, of Virginia—Very conclusive.

Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana—The President has again demonstrated the necessity for revision of the act as a step toward keeping us out of war.

Overton (Democrat), Louisiana—I do not favor lifting the arms embargo.

Hughes (Democrat), Delaware—We should follow the recommendations and I hope we will not be long about it.

Holt (Democrat), West Virginia—The President could have said it in a sentence: "Give me the power and go home."

George (Democrat), Georgia—I am greatly heartened by his firm declaration that we need not go into this war.

McCarran (Democrat), Nevada—If I ever was convinced that the neutrality law should not be changed, I am more convinced now.

Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona—Candid, clear, courageous and complete.

Austin (Republican), Vermont—Assistant minority leader—I am in very much agreement with the President.

Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan—I applaud his dedication to noninvolvment for America, but I continue to disagree that he recommends the safer non-involvement formula.

Lundeen: "Road to War"

Reed (Republican), Kansas.—A temperate and skillfull presentation of his views.

Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire—I am glad the President admits he made a mistake in signing the neutrality act and that Congress made a mistake in passing it.

Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota—That is the road to war.

The House:

Speaker Bankhead—It represents today the judgment of a great majority of the American people.

Fish (Republican), of New York—I was amazed to hear President Roosevelt propose to put our unemployed back to work on war munitions for foreign nations for war profit and blood money.

Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts—The message will be terated as it was intended—a nonpartisan and highly important state document.

Col. Knox for Repeal

Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, majority leader—It voice the sentiment of an overwhelming majority of the American people.

Maas (Republican), Minnesota—I don't agree that to repeal the embargo in the middle of a war is the way to achieve that objective (to keep out of war).

Wadsworth (Republican), New York—For three years I have been of the same opinion regarding the neutrality law. I think the President expressed it well.

Other public figures:

Col. Frank Knox, 1936 Republican Vice Presidential nominee—The proposals he made are sound and I agree with them entirely.

Register for Two-Day P.-T. A. Institute Sessions

A record attendance yesterday marked the first session of a two-day institute sponsored by the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers at the headquarters of the National Education Association, on Sixteenth street. At the registration desk are (left to right) Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, fifth vice president; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, past president and chairman of hospitality, and Mrs. W. H. Spencer, assistant hospitality chairman

The District Congress of Parents and Teachers yesterday inaugurated its season with the first of two institutes for officers and members, in the board room of the N. E. A. building on Sixteenth street. The attendance was more than 200—the largest on record for such a training course of the District Congress.

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, new president, opened the meeting. The principal announcement of the session was that made by Mrs. P. C. Ellett, first vice president, of the annual George Washington Parent-Teacher Institute, November 1 and 2. This will be open to the general public for a small fee and is one in which the university and the District Congress of Parents and Teachers co-operate each year. The second of the present series of institutes will be held Thursday of next week, opening at 9 a. m.

Mrs. Ellett announced as the theme of the George Washington Institute "Vital Factors in Normal Living."

To Foster Normal Trend

This season the officers of the congress expect to emphasize the need for maintaining a normal trend of life in the community, no matter what occurs on the international scene.

They design to stress in the program the leveling of opportunities for all children of the District. Their effort will be to interest people of the better economic sections of the city in means of helping forward the work in less favored sections.

The university is co-operating in securing speakers for the institute and Mrs. Ellett is being assisted in arrangements by Miss Myrtle Moore, of Paul Junior High School, a former member of the board of the District Congress.

Those Attending

Among the presidents of local units attending were:

Mrs. H. F. Heine, Cooke School; Mrs. L. McDevitt, Cranch-Tyler; Mrs. J. A. Blaisdell, John Eton; Mrs. T. A. Martin, Langdon; Mrs. N. T. Kennedy, Peabody-Hilton; Mrs. R. P. Holden, W. B. Powell Elementary; Mrs. B. P. Donnelly, Powell Junior High; Mrs. M. L. Kinestrock, Stoddert Elementary; Mrs. T. J. Cahdollar, Stuart Junior High; Mrs. W. M. Mooney, Wallach; Mrs. P. A. Gottwalls, Whittier; Mrs. A. B. Genung, Woodridge; Mrs. W. H. Spencer, Adams; Mrs. J. P. Allison, Amidon-Fairbrother-Rossell; Mrs. George Mason, Anacostia Junior-Senior High; Mrs. H. E. McComb, Barnard; Mrs. L. D. Gray, Blair-Hayes; Mrs. L. Gartell, Bowen-Greenleaf; Mrs. L. F. Brandt, Burroughs; Mrs. C. M. Simonsen, Randall Highlands-Orr; Mrs. E. J. Uhthoff, Gage; Mrs. J. C. Viets, Hubbard; Mrs. William E. Wise, Janney; Mrs. Arthur Shapiro, Truesdell.

J. H. Elliott Heads Chest Drive in Waynesboro

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 21.—John H. Elliott was named chairman of Waynesboro's 17th annual Community Chest drive, for the fourteenth consecutive year. The campaign to raise $23,800 will take place October 22 to 30. Preliminary plans inaugurated yesterday resulted in the naming of W. J. Davis as secretary of the campaign committee. R. E. Long and A. S. Fitz are in charge of the annual workers dinner meeting and G. F. Blessing and Lee Merriman were designated heads of window display committees for the eight participating agencies in the Chest fund.

Pan Americas Stress Need Of Solidarity

Delegates to Session Agreed on a Policy Of Mutual Aid

By the Associated Press

Panama City, Panama, Sept. 21.—Delegates arriving for the neutrality conference of American republics, which opens Saturday, stressed today the necessity for continental solidarity and mutual aid in resisting political and economic effects of the European war.

Foreign Minister Alberto Ostria Gutierrez, of Bolivia, who conferred during the day with Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State and head of the United States delegation, declared it was imperative to place the rights of American neutral nations above the interests of belligerents.

He said Bolivia had delayed her neutrality proclamation until after the meeting here because she wanted to make her stand conform to the solidarity accords expected to be reached.

Foreign Minister Carlos Salazar, of Guatemala, described the Panama assembly as "test of the solidarity declarations made at the Buenos Aires and Lima Pan American conferences."

Many delegates expressed opinion that the economy of the American republics would be gravely affected by the war.

Ostria Guttierrez said that already shipping was at a standstill in many Latin-American ports.

Salazar declared the situation in his country had been complicated by the loss of the German market, which normally absorbed 46 per cent of Guatemala's coffee output.

He added that suspension of Grace Line service had left the west coast of Central America with restricted maritime transportation to the United States and without any service to South America.

By the Associated Press

Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, said yesterday the bank probably would provide credits to finance 65 per cent of the projected sale of 14 Moore-McCormack Line ships to the Brazilian government's Lloyd Brasileiro Line.

Pierson, who returned from Europe this week, said details had not been worked out as yet, but that he expected the deal to go through.

U. S. Has Legal Right to Repeal Arms Ban, Authority on International Law Declares

America's legal right to repeal the arms embargo is unassailable and should be exercised as the surest method of keeping this country at peace, Dr. Charles G. Fenwick, noted authority on international law, asserted here last night.

FENWICK

The Bryn Mawr professor described himself as "deeply concerned" over a statement published in New York by Philip Jessup and Charles C. Hyde, of Columbia University, contending that the United States is not free, under international law, to change the terms of its neutrality legislation once war has begun.

"There is ample precedent for changing the rules during a war," Dr. Fenwick said, citing America's enactment of a general embargo in 1807, during the war between Great Britain and Napoleonic France, repeal of that embargo in 1809, while the war still was in progress, and adoption in the same year of an embargo specifically aimed against England.

Held Domestic Legislation

Repeal of the present embargo would be a "purely domestic piece of legislation," based on America's right to protect its own interests, and unaffected by the regulations and duties imposed by international law, he stated.

While pointing out that his chief interest was to "set the record straight" on the legal status of repeal, Dr. Fenwick went on to say that he believed the United States could not live at peace with a victorious Nazi Germany.

Hitler triumphant would "challenge the Monroe Doctrine within five years," he predicted, declaring that immediate supply of planes to Britain and France would tip the scales in favor of the allies and thus, in the long run, serve to keep America out of war.

Advantage for Germany

"It is preposterous," he said, "that the United States should take a position which gives the advantage to Germany because of her long and careful preparation for this war and her access to Russian raw materials."

Peace is impossible "until the United States, along with other nations, is prepared to distinguish between right and wrong, between aggressor and victim," he said.

"There may be some cases where the distinction is difficult, but there are some where it is glaring, and this is one of them."

Dr. Fenwick was a member of the United States delegation to the Pan-American conference at Lima in December, 1938. He testified last spring before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in favor of repeal of the embargo.

Bus Line Extension Sought by Eastport

Baltimore, Sept. 21 (AP).—Extension of the Eastport, Md., route of the Arundel Bus Co. was asked today by 42 residents of Eastport, a suburb of Annapolis.

They asked the Public Service Commission to order the bus line, which gives intra-city service, to start its buses at Tyler avenue and the Annapolis Beck Rock instead of Tyler avenue and the Bay Ridge Railroad right of way. The petition was signed by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Elliot and 40 others.

Mary Washington Chapter No. 50, Order of The Eastern Star, holds its first meeting of the fall and winter season tonight in the Masonic Temple at Clarendon, Va., at 8 o'clock.

Duce Discusses Border Defense

Rome, Sept. 21 (AP).—Premier Mussolini discussed Italy's frontier defenses with Gen. Luigi Negri, commander of Alpine troops, today, while urging through his newspaper that Britain and France make peace with Adolf Hitler.

The government, which has been largely silent in recent days on Italy's military measures, made three announcements in praise of the border troops.

Foreman Is Named For Arundel Jury

Annapolis, Sept. 21 (AP).—Circuit Judge Ridgely P. Melvin today announced the appointment of Egbert H. Hawkins as foreman of the October Anne Arundel County Grand Jury.

Hawkins is president of the Anne Arundel County Farmers Association. The grand judy will convene October 16.

Hans Says Thar's Gold In Them Hills

D. C. Man Urges U. S. Make Relief Clients Prospectors

By Gerald G. Gross

Hans Manzenrieder vividly remembers the Munich beer putsch and narrowly escaped execution as a German revolutionary in 1920, but he prefers to talk about gold—how much this country has of it and what's not being done about it.

He was cleaning a hat in a downtown valet shop, where he has been employed the last 10 years, when asked yesterday to get his gold theories off his chest. Only they are not theories, Manzenrieder will assure you, but facts.

"Virginia, below the Rappahannock River; the Carolina, and Georgia are loaded with gold deposits," said Manzenrieder. "I know because I prospected there. There is gold in the District and nearby Virginia and Maryland but it is in solid rock and too expensive to get out.

20 Tons of Yellow Metal

"Not so the deposits in the South. Why, I prospected an 1,800-acre site in North Carolina which would yield 20 tons of gold within 25 feet of the ground surface. There it is, just waiting for jobless men to be grubstaked and put to work getting it out."

Manzenreider, who immigrated from Munich in 1926, could tell you how he was nearly killed at Chateau-Thierry and of his exploits in the marathon swimming matches at Toronto, but he'd rather expend his vocal energy in agitating for jobless relief by gold digging.

If he didn't have a mother and two sisters in Munich he would air his views on the present Reich, but even so his passion is not politics, but recognition of our neglected resources.

A Washington resident ever since he came to the United States, he prospected for gold in this region for years, until his car wore out under the punishment inflicted by rough roads. But he didn't have the equipment to take out the gold he found.

Cheap Power From TVA

With TVA to furnish cheap power and given plenty of up to date machinery, there is every reason for the Government to assist private enterprise in taking Dixie's jobless off relief and making gold miners out of them, Manzenrieder thinks. They should be organized into units of about 25 men each, he says, each unit to be provided with $10,000 worth of equipment and supplies.

"That 1,800-acre site in North Carolina could accommodate at least 20 of these groups," he declared. "Plenty of water power and lumber are available. It's the best way of solving the relief problem."

Manzenrieder lives with his wife and young daughter at 470 K street northwest.

5 Americans Flee Warsaw, Tell of Terrorist Bands

Berlin, Sept. 21 (AP).—The Berman news agency DNB tonight reported from Brest-Litovsk, Poland, that two American women and three men were recovering from exhaustion in a "terrifying" flight from Warsaw.

According to DNB, the Americans travelled afoot for long stretches and were menaced by "irresponsible bands" several times when their passports were not recognized.

In the group were Miss D. Laurel Hucheson, a New York dancer known in Germany as Delores Laurel; Joseph Panck, an intaerior decorator, and his wife Sovia, of Santa Barbara, Calif.; a machinist, Waclaw Francuk, of Lynn (no State given), and a laborer, Peter Lodzinski, of Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y.

Louisiana State Put On Probation by NYA

The National Youth Administration yesterday placed Louisiana State University on six months probation as a recipient of Federal student aid pending investigation of moves to remedy alleged irregularities.

Aubrey Williams, NYA director, said an official investigation "had disclosed evidence of political interference, inadequate work supervision and low scholastic standards" in the school's NYA program.

Equinox to Bring Fall Tomorrow

The center of the sun and the earth's equator will fraternize with each other at exactly 5:30 p. m. tomorrow.

In other words, there is going to be an autumnal equinox, which is the "go" signal for football, chrysanthemums and—for girls who like to rush the fashion season—straw chapeaux.

Shelley once wrote:

There is harmony in August, and a lustre in its sky,
Which thro the Summer is not heard or seen—
As if it could not be, as if it had not been!

No doubt Shelley was right, meteorologically, but this particular autumn won't be greeted by much harmony when it comes to earth tomorrow. What with the war in Europe, the debate-filled air in Congress and ladies scrapping over the latest modes in bargain basements, it is well that Shelley is not here to witness the havoc.

St. Dominic's Starts Novena Tomorrow

Just back from Europe, the Rev. Joseph R. Slavin, O. P., Ph.D., professor of philosophy at Catholic University, will lead the annual Rosary Novena at St. Dominic's Catholic Church, Sixth and E streets southwest, beginning tomorrow at 9 a. m.

A preparation service for the Feast of the Holy Rosary, the novena will feature three services daily, at 9 a. m., 3 and 8 p. m., and masses at 6, 7, 8 and 9 a. m. and 12:10 noon. It ends October 1. Novena prayers will be offered at all masses.

Hull's Fair Speech Today Expected To List U. S. Aims

Secretary of State Hull will give the principal address today at ceremonies marking Pan-American Day at the New York World's Fair.

The Secretary's speech, which will be given from the plaza of the Federal Building, overlooking the Court of Peace, is expected to be a significant statement on American foreign policy.

Heads of every Latin-American embassy and legation in Washington will leave for New York with the Secretary and Mrs. Hull at 8 a. m.

Copy of The Post Sealed in Stone

A copy of The Washington Post was included among newspapers and books sealed in the cornerstone of the new journalism building at the University of Minnesota, it was announced yesterday.

Contents of the cornerstone also include representative daily and weekly newspapers of Minnesota and the Northwest, magazines, materials dealing with the history of journalism, printing and the freedom of the press, and a copy of the code of ethics of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The new $275,000 journalism building is named for the late William J. Murphy, former publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune, whos bequest of $350,000 in 1919 established the university's departmen of journalism.

Sir Nevile Tells Of Tantrums Of Fuehrer

Document on Peace Negotiations Reads Like Alienist's Report

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Sept. 27.—Mental and temperamental flights of Adolf Hitler in the last frenzied fortnight before the war are disclosed today in a series of secret dispatches from Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, to the foreign office in London.

Full and frank reports of Henderson's five talks with Hitler during immediate pre-war period are published for the first time in a 200-page blue book containing messages that passed between British diplomats and the foreign office in five months after the German invasion of Czecho-Slovakia last spring.

Like the Kaiser's excitable marginal notes on state papers in the years before 1914, these coolly worded reports by the British Ambassador will be an invaluable source of material on the character of Germany's present leader and the causes of Europe's present catastrophe.

Hitler Bent on War

They show conclusively that Hitler was bent on war with Poland even at the cost of a world war unless he could have his way by another imposed "settlement." Again and again the Ambassador warned him in most forceful language that Great Britain would fight if Germany attacked Danzig or Polish territory; again and again Hitler retorted that if war came it would be Great Britain's fault.

Thus on Henderson's first visit, August 23, to deliver a written warning from Chamberlain, Hitler's defiant reply was that "Germany had nothing to lose and Great Britain had much" from another world war. Later the same day, Hitler said he was 50 years old and "preferred war now to when he was 55 or 60."

On the twenty-fifth, when London and Paris were already being darkened in preparation for trouble, Hitler sent for the British Ambassador to suggest a general anglo-German understanding after settlement with Poland. On this occasion Hitler said, according to the Ambassador, "that he was by nature an artist not a politician, and that once the Polish question was settled he would end his life as an artist, not as a warmonger; he did not want to turn Germany into nothing but a military barracks and would only do so if forced to do so; that once the Polish question was settled he himself would settle down."

Neither Was Bluffing

In a fourth talk, August 28, Hitler was more bellicose. He told the Ambassador "he had to satisfy the demands of his people, his army was ready and eager for battle and his people were united behind him," he added he was not bluffing although he admitted for the first time that Great Britain was not bluffing either.

Finally in a stormy interview August 29—only two days before German bombs began to shatter Polish towns—Hitler announced it was "unendurable" for Great Britain to try to promote a "bargain" over Germany's vital interests.

But Henderson's reports did not deal only with the fate of nations. In writing to London about these fateful interviews the Ambassador was careful always to keep his government informed of the Hitler mental state.

A Psychological Study

In consequence, his dispatches read at times like an alienist's report. They paint a picture of an erratic and unstable man alternating between periods of calm and spasms of violent passion.

On the first occasion, Henderson noted that Hitler was "excitable and uncompromising; he made no long speeches but his language was violent and exaggerated." The second time, according to the ambassador, "he was quite calm and never raised his voice once." The third time, the ambassador found him "absolutely calm and normal" and reported that Hitler "spoke with great earnestness and apparent sincerity" in outlining the basis of a possible Anglo-German understanding.

In the fourth talk, Henderson told London that Hitler "became excited only once"—when he was told that Great Britain would resist force by force. This the ambassador wrote home "evoked a tirade about the Rhineland, Austria, the Sudeten and their peaceful acquisition by the Reich."

The last interview, just before Great Britain's final ultimatum, was the most unpleasant of all and Hitler, according to the ambassador "was far less reasonable." Polish mobilization and press reports of the killing of five Germans on the Polish frontier "had obviously excited him," the ambassador told his superiors in London.

The ambassador never left London in any doubt that he was dealing with an abnormal man. At least twice in these conversations according to the ambassador, Hitler talked of the alleged castration of Germans by the Poles and repeatedly told the ambassador "he would stand it no longer."

Hitler was not the only German leader whose attitude was exposed in Henderson's reports. On May 27 early in the gathering crisis, the Ambassador had a long talk with Gen. Goering at the Karinhall, the field marshal's palatial home in the forest outside of Berlin, and had warned that Great Britain and France would go to war if Germany forced Poland to resist attack.

Goering replied, the Ambassador wrote, that he did not doubt Great Britain's readiness to fight but tried to contrast conditions of 1939 with those of 1914. Goering argued "that no power could overcome Germany in Europe, that a blockade this time would prove unavailing, that France would not stand a long war, that Germany could do more harm to Britain than the latter to her, that the history of Germany was one of ups and downs and this was one of the "ups."

Couldn't Restrain Hitler

The Ambassador also urged that "wild men" of Germany must be restrained if disaster was to be avoided, but Goering admitted he had not been able to do so at the time Czecho-Slovakia was invaded. Indeed, Goering asserted he had not known of the projected invasion before it took place; if he had known of it, he said, he would not have gone to Italy on a holiday just before it happened.

Much later, on the eve of the invasion of Poland, Goering gave even a more striking admission of his inability to restrain Hitler. On this occasion he was talking to the Polish ambassador to Berlin, Lipski, who had been instructed by Warsaw to make a last minute contact with one of the German leaders. According to Lipski's account—promptly sent to London by Sir Howard Kennard the British Ambassador to Warsaw—Goering "expressed his regret that his policy of maintaining friendly relations with Poland should come to naught and admitted that he no longer had influence to do much in the matter."

The question of Danzig was a official who figured prominently in these pre-war arguments. This was Baron Von Weizsacker, state secretary at the Wilhelmstrasse, who is revealed in Henderson's reports as a stubborn and vehement exponent of the Nazi case.

Henderson warned him more than once in July and August that if Hitler wanted war he could have it. There was still another German Weizsacker retorted that the German government simply could not believe Britain would fight for Poland in all circumstances and "follow blindly every eccentric step on the part of a lunatic." The Wilhelmstrasse official explained that this latter phrase was not his own; the Ambassador in his report left the authorship to be guessed in London.

Thanks to Weizsacker, the British ambassador knew a good deal more of what was coming than most of his public at home. For on August 16—six days before the world was staggered by the news of the German-Russian non-aggression pact and more than a month before the Soviet troops invaded Poland—Weizsacker coolly told Henderson that Russia would not only give "entirely negligible" help to Poland but that in the end Russia would "join in sharing the Polish spoils."

Poles Got Advice

The ambassador noted that Weizsacker seemed immensely confident; perhaps he suspected the reason. Perhaps too this is why Chamberlain was able to tell Commons yesterday that the Russian invasion of Poland was not entirely unexpected by the British government.

Ukraine Terrorists Accused Of Butchering Polish Refugees

By Elmer W. Peterson,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Berezki, Poland On the Hungarian Frontier), Sept. 21.—Ukrainian bands enforced a wild rule over a small section of Poland at the base of the Carpathian Mountains today as German and Soviet Russian troops drew closer to the Hungarian frontier.

Accounts received here told of day-long battles between the Ukrainians and Polish police; of Poles and Jews alike being slaughtered. Destruction started by German air raiders was said to have been completed with entire villages looted and burned.

This sudden burst of pent-up hate and violence added a new and tragic chapter to the three weeks of war in Poland.

Young Ukrainian terrorists roaming the countryside were said to have apparently picked their arms and ammunition from thin air, with guns and cartridges in plentiful supply from mysterious sources.

Polish officers fleeing across the border into Hungary told of escaping from converging German and Soviet troops only to find themselves in small villages which fairly "dripped with blood" from the activities of these bands.

Tells of Butchery

A young Polish reserve cavalry officer, speaking perfect English, gave me a vivid picture of what he and his comrades encountered.

"We fled small villages east of Lwow only two hours before the Russians arrived," he said. "Between Lwow and Stryj, to the south, we found the entrance to the village of Mikolajow barred by an enormous sign reading: 'Heil Hitler! Hail Ukrainian Republic!'

"In this village we found savage butchery of racial Poles and Jews—men, women and children alike.

"We found the proprietor of the hotel with his throat cut.

"We restored order as best we could, shooting all terrorists we could find before continuing on. It was a terrible scene of death and destruction.

"During that night as we rode south we passed several flaming villages, obviously fired by the terrorists."

The Ukrainians took possession of Lwow, Stryj and Stanislawow, reports reaching the frontier said, and for a time set up their own government.

Flee Into Hungary

One Polish officer told me that the terror outbreaks apparently were arranged to begin the moment Russian troops set foot on Polish soil last Sunday.

Meanwhile, the flight of Polish civilian and military refugees into Hungary all but stopped.

The last of the refugees were but a few hours ahead of German troops, who late today reached the border near here across from Volovec (Volocz), Hungary. This border point is about 80 miles northwest of the junction of the Hungarian, Rumanian and Polish frontiers.

A long tunnel runs through the mountains there. The Germans said they would take formal charge of the Polish-owned one-third of the tunnel tomorrow.

Before the Germans appeared, the latest advices reaching here said they were based at Stryj, about 50 miles to the north. The Russians were reported at Stanislawow, about 50 miles southeast of Stryj.

Towns Abandoned

Traveling by automobile today high up in the Carpathian Mountain passes I found all communications into Poland cut off, indicating that villages and towns in Poland not yet occupied by the Germans and Russians had been abandoned under pressure of the terror.

Remarkable scenes persisted, however, in these picturesque mountains where small cemeteries with rows of crosses indicate battle lines of 1915 between the Russians and Hungarians.

I saw Polish cavalrymen weeping unashamed as they gave up their arms and said farewell to their horses.

There were cavalcades of Polish soldiers pouring into Hungary, some in trucks and buses — all with despair and tragedy written all over their unshaven faces.

I talked with a Polish army doctor as he bandaged a fresh bullet wound in the leg of a 20-year-old Polish soldier.

"To me it is all like a bad dream, something not real," he said.

"We had a good army but we could not cope with those endless floods of tanks and planes."

Herriot Says Hitler Perils Civilization

Tells American Club In Paris Barbarism Is Challenge to Life

By P. J. Philip

Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Sept. 21.—Claiming that humanity has reached a decisive turning point of its history, former Premier Edouard Herriot, at an American Club luncheon today, denounced the Hitlerian regime and its spirit as responsible for this situation and that the "essential laws on which the government of peoples was founded has been abolished.

"Hypocrisy and ruse of duplicity have become law. No nation can be sure of tomorrow, the rights of man exists no longer. The spirit of liberty is threatened everywhere. There is no more law, no more morality. All progress due to religion and philosophy has been wiped out. Everything that gives honor and price and purpose to human life has been challenged. All that is summed up in the word—civilization is in peril. Never has such a tremendous threat to civilization bee nlaunched by barbarism."

That indictment delivered with sweeping eloquence by the President of the French Chamber of Deputies was preceded by this characterization of the German Fuehrer.

Stresses ePace Efforts

France and Great Britain, Herriott claimed, had done everything humanly possible to avoid war while maintaining their own liberty and that of others. They had fought even at the risk of weakening themselves to create a law of peace.

But "they found themselves opposed by a man who after having glorified theauthors of individual murders had organized mass exterminations invoking incoherent and utterly contradictory pretexts which were accepted by his own too passive people urging in justification at one moment the barbaric theory of race, at another the mahialistic theory of vital space, foreswearing all his promises, speaking only to deceive and to trick those of good faith by proposing negotiations only after he had rendered them impossible."

One by one, quoting from Hitler's spoken words and contrasting his acts, Herriot ran through a list of Hitler's broken pledges—Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland.

France and Great Britain had stretched their patience to the extreme limit. They had used every means to keep peace. Heads of their governments had submitted a most disagreeable attitude in their devotion of peace. Nothing availed.

Roosevelt Praised

"Look at the map," Herriot exclaimed. "This murderous madness is running all over Europe. Its temporary friendships are only risks. It seeks to enable each nation in turn. Do not be mistaken, its aim are far spread."

To President Roosevelt's efforts to prevent recourse to arms, the speaker paid warm tribute and when war broke out, he did everything possible to protect the civil populations. Now on the faith of official reports he made to his Government, he had in his letter to the President of the Polish republic, borne witness to the fact that horrible massacres had taken place.

Herriot was introduced to the club by President Max Shoop as the man who had preferred to put his desire that France should keep her international obligations above all other considerations and in so doing had lost the premiership but gained, by abiding the respect of every American citizen.

How Belgium Is Fortified

Map indicates the three lines of Belgium defenses, according to the best information presently available. (1) A sytem of trenches, blockhouses and machine gun nests along a 55-mile front, centered around forts at Eupen and Malmedy; (2) stronger line of fortifications behind the first; (3) the Albert Canal with defenses along its west bank. Approximate locations of Maginot and Siegfried lines are also included put a vigorous punctuation to similar assertions from British statesmen that the two countries did not propose to treat with Hitler simply because he had been successful in pushing his armies through Poland.

French Massing To Meet Attack

Calm Along Front

The speech followed a series of dramatic conferences with British leaders who flew to France in recent days to discuss further conduct of the war.

The sudden stalemate which developed on the Western Front where the French had been advancing until Russian intervention freed German divisions for operations in the West was reflected throughout Daladier's speech.

Tonight's official French communique told of a "calm day along the front. Activity of the enemy's artillery south of Saarbruecken. Our reconnaissance missions were carried out despite bad weather and enemy fire."

From Basel, Switzerland, came word that reports reaching the Swiss border said the French had driven deeper into the Moselle-Saar triangle just east of the Luxemburg border but the Germans had downed four French planes.

Swiss observers said the aerial warfare appeared to indicate that the Germans bold superiority in the air.

The infantry action, behind the hills on the eastern bank of the Moselle River, was described as limited by the terrain of the country to small compact forces of troops. The positions won by the French, however, were said to be of the highest importance.

In a series of sharp local actions, French troops apparently advanced their lines closer to two important German cities—Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken—in the center of the Western Front's northern flank.

Many Skirmishes Reported

French raiding parties were skirmishing with German patrols on all sectors of the 100-mile active front from the Luxemburg border, on the north, to the forest known as Bienwald, where the Rhine ceases to form a common frontier between France and Germany.

There seemed to be no heavy fighting anywhere on the front. Both armies were jockeying for position in light of the new situation created by the Russian advance into Poland, permittiing the Nazis to free large numbers of troops for action against France and Britain in the west.

German scouting operations of the last four days east of Saarbruecken obviously have been hampering French efforts to consolidate their positions. To offset this, French troops holding outposts now are reacting more vigorously.

Push Lines Forward

They were reported not only to have curtailed results of German raids, but to have pushed their own lines slightly forward.

The most important result of this was not ground gained, but that it gave the French main lines, which were being reinforced on the German side of the frontier, more "breathing space."

It meant that, should a German attack come, the Nazis would have to break through advance French positions organized in depth to absorb a larger percentage of shock before fighting could be carried to the main French positions.

Equally important, it meant that these main trenches could be deepened and better fortified without the constant danger of raiding parties; French reinforcements could be moved up in greater safety since they would be farther from German guns.

Nazi Submarine Enters Iceland

Stockholm, Sept. 21.—A range of operations of German submarines extending as far north as Iceland was revealed yesterday when a German submarine entered the port of Reykjavik, on the north coast of Iceland.

The vessel carried three injured seamen aboard who were said to have suffered from heavy seas. One of the crew was removed to a hospital to be interned for the duration of the war. After this was accomplished the submarine departed.

action against three German reconnaissance planes. The planes were flying very high, and they fled from view as black streaks and white puffs of two types of anti-aircraft shells appeared magically in the sky. It was understood one of these planes later was brought down at another point along the front.

The real thrill of the day, however, was the bringing in of a captured German officer. He was rushed in a tiny military car to a point behind the front lines and turned over to a French colonel of the intelligence corps, who, in turn, whisked him from view. The captured officer looked glum, and wore a peaked officer's cap on his straw-blond hair. From his field green overcoat and high quality boots the newspaper correspondents guessed him to be a captain at least.

The picture gathered from this first actual visit to the front and to the area directly behind the Maginot Line can be summed up briefly thus:

The French have driven the Germans back to their permanent and strongest fortifications all along the Rhine.

The depth of this advance ranges anywhere up to about 9 miles.

Casualties Run High

Casualties have run into several thousands.

While it can be seen this war is no parlor game, the real frightfulness apparently has not yet commenced.

The action so far has been limited mainly to open fighting, artillery bombardments and duels for supremacy of the air in order to maintain air reconnaissance. There also has been considerable action by tank and armored motor cars units, and a steady consolidation of captured positions.

All this could best be described as a sort of overture for the real symphony of death and destruction which could be started at any moment now, days from now or weeks from now. All is in complete readiness for anything on the French side.

General mobilization is complete—so complete the American correspondents were staggered by its enormity. The entire north and east of France is organized for war. Normal life has completely been suspended and millions of noncombatants have been evacuated from an area extending several hundred kilometers behind the lines in all directions. Every mile of this evacuated territory is integrated in this vast, smooth-working French military machine.

There are no big concentrations as in the last war because of the present efficiency of the air arm. Instead troops are widely scattered everywhere one can go for hundreds of square miles, and these units are finely co-ordinated by wireless and are highly equipped with both motor and horse transportation.

Blitzkrieg Held Impossible

This organization now has been completely carried out by the French so that it would be an utter impossibility for Adolf Hitler to employ a "blitzkrieg" (lighting war) which primarily must be aimed at preventing mobilization. Even if Marshal Goering could send his air fleet over without opposition he could not effect great military damage now, in the opinion of American correspondents.

Camouflage has been developed to its highest art, in fact so cleverly has it been employed that the newspapermen virtually ran into concealed airplane landing fields before detecting them. Scores of these fields where fighting planes were parked in cleverly scattered positions were seen.

Many British Royal Air Force officers and pilots also were seen in scattered localities. In addition troops from all parts of France were in evidence as well as soldiers from all portions of the French empire.

The American journalists were deeply impressed with the grim, deadly businesslike attitude of the French troops. The veteran war correspondents compared them with the troops of both factions in Spain, who, when not fighting, indulged in singing and horseplay. But none of this was seen among the French soldiers.

The French troops passed in villages or camps regarded the American journalists without expression. The troops have no illusions about what is coming, and they are grimly ready for it.

Germans Unaware of War

Officers and men who were veterans of the World War said:

"This has been different than the last time, but it hasn't really gotten under way yet. There'll be plenty of action when it does."

Everywhere there was grim resolution to go through with the war to the bitter end.

A lieutenant colonel of the Deuxieme Bureau (intelligence service) declared:

"The spirit of the troops is the best I have ever seen. They are fighting with intelligence as well as with deadliness. They know what it means this time and they're mad and they mean business."

French officers and men everywhere confirmed reports that German prisoners captured during the first few days of hostilities were completely bewildered. They did not know the war existed nor what they were fighting about. A captainment of German cavalry came trotting at one frontier point told how on the second day of fighting a detachting calmly up to the French positions in captured German territory. They were almost completely wiped out by French machine gunners. Captured survivors were speechless with astonishment—they did not know the war existed!

The American correspondents were not able to confirm reports gas was released by German mines in the captured areas, and military authorities at the front refused any comment along this line.

Fischer Pianos
FAMOUS SINCE 1863
New Colonial Model Spinet

Of the many spinet styles we have sold in the last few months the Fischer Colonial model has been the most popular. Distinctively styled, sturdily constructed and unusually well-toned for a small piano, it is the type of instrument that you would expect craftsmen and a factory with a background of over 100 years' experience to build. Before you buy any piano see this distinctive little spinet and the other styles of the Fischer . . . comparison will convince you of the value of their moderate price.

Syphilis Losing In Health War, Says Dr. Clarke

Pamphlet Recites Gains Over Disease In 5-Year Period

The syphilis spirochete is on the run but still unconquered, a pamphlet just published by the National Anti-Syphilis Committee of the American Social Hygiene Association, asserts.

Dr. Walter Clarke, executive director of the association and consultant to the U. S. Office of Indian Affairs, is the author of the publication, which traces the gains made since U. S. Surgeon General Thomas Parran brought the war on venereal disease into the open.

The advances, according to Dr. Clarke, include:

Passage by 19 States of laws requiring premarital examinations.

Passage by 16 States of laws requiring prenatal examinations.

Appropriation by Congress of $1,000,000 for 1938-39 and $5,000,000 for 1939-40 to aid the States in their fight against syphilis.

An increase from 50 to 140 social hygiene societies in the last five years.

In addition, he pointed out, the "hush hush" attitude has been dropped by the American press, the demand for sound sex education has "increased enormously in five years" and prostitution has been curbed or driven out in many cities.

Chief needs, he pointed out, are enlargement of the program of public information, extermination of quackery, persistence against against prostitution, increased guidance to youth, expansion of social hygiene legislation and the formation of still more citizens' groups.

U. S. Navy Ships Abroad Go to Marseille, Lisbon

The Navy announced yesterday that ships of the United States European Squadron, which left Villefranche, France, Wednesday for an undisclosed destination, had arrived at Lisbon, Portugal, and Marseille, France.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

THE KING'S JESTERS, one of the country's top-flight bands, will open for the fall in the Metronome Room of the Wardman Park Hotel on Friday, September 29. Washington dancers and the Wardman management alike rate congratulations on this engagement. The Jesters are now in Chicago busily making records before they start to Washington. Sweet swing is the Jesters' style, but they intersperse dance numbers with intimate and friendly high jinks.

The original three King's Jesters (George Howard, John Ravencroft and Fritz Bastow), were featured with Paul Whiteman for two years. They then branched out on their own, promptly reached the top.

Chet de Chastain and his orchestra, who've attained big popularity during the summer, will close for the season with a gay farewell (we mean au revoir) party on next Tuesday evening. There won't be room in Metronome, we bet, for all the friends made by Chet's boys and pretty Singer Penny Ford. Metronome will be closed Wednesday and Thursday for redecoration before the flash opening for the King's Jesters on Friday next.

EVELYN TYNER, star pianist as well as socialite, will be the headline attraction at the Cafe Caprice when it opens next Thursday, September 28. You'll remember Miss Tyner both on the radio and at the Capitol Theater. Dance music and vocals by the smart new "Swing Sophisticates" led by Bass Player Georgie Smith and including Guitarist Ray Nelson and Saxophonist Bob Seidler. There'll also be the new singing discovery, Adele Van. It's a line-up that seems to insure tremendous success and Manager Daniel Wathey, of the Roger Smith, is very proud and happy about it all.

OLGA BACLANOVA, whom you recall both as the Russian screen siren, and more recently, as the singing star of the radio and "The Cat and the Fiddle" will head the new Troika floor revue when this brilliant spot opens next Wednesday, September 28. The Troika show promises to be more beglamoured than ever. It includes Marusia Strelska, Polish chanteuse; Mara Bielinskaya, ballerina; Nick Hope and his accordeon; Vania Orlik and Lola Orlik, a pair of the finest dancers either in this country or Russia, and (for a dash of pure Americanism) Doris Jenkins, musical comedy starlet. Sasha Lukas and his Tsigane music fill out a program that sounds too, too good to be true. But it is, we'll go bond.

CLEM DOCKERY, handsome guitarist of the Three Couriers in the Neptune Room

HARVEST MOON. Fern Gardiner, the attractive hostess at Mayfair, with partner, Carmine Oddane, nabbed top honors in both the tango and rumba preliminaries of the Harvest Moon Ball. The fox trot contest at the Lotus next Monday is next on the list of Harvest Moon doings. And next Monday they'll begin to lay that big hardwood dance floor out at Griffith Stadium.

P. S.—At every Harvest Moon prelim we've seen "Rat Trap" Pratt, of the Pirates' Den, who's getting himself in the pink for the night spot season before the Den reopens next Thursday.

STUNTS IN RHYTHM. Shar-Zad Room. Hal Atkinson, of Bill McCune's band, playing the maracas and the clavellitos at the same time, also tossing in a bit of a rumba. We-ell! Even if you see it you won't believe it.

King Cole Room. The Cocomos shouting that screwy ditty, "The Cockeyed Mayor of Manakaki." It was written by Warner Baxter when he was in the islands making a picture.

Madrillon. Carr and Don going to New York via the double piano way. You could listen to them, and happily, for 24 hours.

Lotus. Buddy Shaner (bless his little heart!) singing separate ditties in honor of practically every lass at the ringside. And do they love it!

Mayflower Lounge. Patricia Ryan (and there's a girl that is a girl!) caroling "Stuttering in the Starlight." Patricia's songs may make you blush, but they'll never make you yawn.

BROWN DERBY. All the customers catching that contagious insanity of Al Simonds' and beating out "Little Egypt" rhythm on the tables. If you must go cuh-razy, the Derby is the spot ideal for losing your mind.

PRIVATE NIGHT CLUB. If you and your friends want to stage a dance with true night spot atmosphere, you'd better look at the handsomely redecorated ball room at 2400 Sixteenth street. Manager Fordyce Minnick has installed a terrace with tables and chairs so that you may sit and sip while watching the dancers. A fine departure in ballroom arrangement, we'd say.

HITHER AND THITHER DEPARTMENT. Shoreham's Barnee will be back on the bandstand next Monday after a week at Miami—his first vacation in ten years. Al Kamons has been subbing niftily for Barnee, also playing for the Shoreham's One to Two Club . . . The Rainbow Room orchestra is spending a lot of time at the tailor's. Because they're being fitted for those new dinner jackets they'll jump into on October 15 . . . Manager Huey Liang of Bamboo Gardens is thumbing the calendar, trying to pick out a date for a "gala fall opening party." He's favoring some evening around the first of October . . . Singer Angie Rodante has just broken out a new coronet coiffure, her third hair-do change in the last month, the others being a curl arrangement and a middle part a la Wally Windsor. But the coronet is the prettiest.

MARYLAND GARDENS has that club intime atmosphere. The lights are softly shaded, Lou Williams' music has a sparkle, Wanda Deane puts that appealing note into her songs, Countess Ilona de Bournet tells you all about your future that it is good to know. On Saturday even the gayeties are adjourned from the cocktail lounge to the Palm Room.

ARCHITECTURAL NOTES. Manager Larry Buttress of O'Donnell's Farms has built a new air-conditioned and vacuum-cleaned chicken house. Here the chicks are raised from butter-ball to broiler size without their dainty feet ever touching the ground. Guests are invited to inspect this pullet palace . . . That odd compartment that you'll notice in the radiator in the main dining room at Hall's is an old-time arrangement for keeping dishes hot. And a good idea, at that.

LAFAYETTE, WE'LL BE THERE! Comes the pleasant news that a new night spot will be opened in the Lafayette Hotel, with well-known "name" bands to be changed every two weeks. The opening is scheduled for September 30, with "Red" Nichols' orchestra as the probable attraction.

Pickpockets Get $248 From Man in Elevator

Pickpockets working in a crowded elevator of a downtown office building robbed Henry Alvers, 1340 Rhode Island avenue northwest, of $248, he reported to police yesterday.

Alvers said he had just cashed a check for his son-in-law when he entered the building. In the crowd, he said, he reached in his hip pocket to make sure his wallet was there. Several seconds later a man backed into him, Alvers stated, and when he got off the elevator the money was gone.

Consular Agents Leave Besieged Polish Capital

Budapest, Sept. 21 (AP).—The Warsaw radio announced tonight that foreign consular officials left the besieged Polish capital at 2 p. m. (8 a. m. E. S. T.), today under an agreement reached with the Germans.

Theannouncement failed to name the officials but it was believed they included a half dozen Americans headed by Consul General John K. Davis, veteran of 30 years in the foreign service.

Germans Fix Anxious Eyes On Congress

Goebbels Promises Holland and Belgium Won't Be Invaded

By Melvin K. Whitelesther
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 21.—Germany fastened her eyes tonight across the Atlantic on the special session of Congress which the press called "the most important event since the outbreak of the European conflict."

As the German point of view on what the United States stood to gain by staying out of the war was presented in weighty articles, these were the developments nearer home:

Minister of Propaganda Paul Joseph Goebels declared Germany "had no intention, has none now, nor will have" of sending armies through the Netherlands, Belgium or Luxemburg.

A high command communique reported that only four centers of resistance to Nazi forces remained in Poland—Warsaw, Modlin, 18 miles to the northwest; Gora Kalvarja, 23 miles southeast of Warsaw; and on the Hela peninsula in the Gulf of Danzig.

The communique said that up to yesterday afternoon 170,000 Polish prisoners had been captured on the northern front "and the number steadily is increasing."

In the south it said that 60,000 prisoners had been taken since September 10.

On the Western Front it said there was "no activity" except for the shooting down by the Germans of "three captive balloons and eight enemy airplanes."

Included in the articles on the United States was one by Karl Megerle, foreign affairs expert of the Boersen Zeitung, who said the United States had fallen heir to Anglo-Saxon world leadership.

"Dollar Falls Heir"

"With her attack on Germany," wrote Megerle, who is close to the foreign office, "England put the axe to the roots of her own world position.

"The American dollar falls heir. "What far-seeing English statesmen saw and feared begins to show. However this war may end, England will be so weak that the leadership of the Anglo-Saxon World and all that went with it will pass to the United States."

While the Congressional session absorbed official interest, Goebbels, nevertheless, took the time to appear before foreign correspondents to deny that Germany intended to send forces through The Netherlands, Belgium or Luxembourg.

Denial Is Categoric

The propaganda minister indicated that Reichsfuehrer Hitler felt reported British and French fears that Germany was preparing for such a maneuver, because of the massing of troops at Aachen, were of such a serious nature that he ought to make a denial.

"I am in a position to give a categoric, unequivocal and unconditional denial," Goebbels said. "The German government never had, does not have now nor intends in the future to violate the neutrality either of Belgium or Holland."

Asked whether this also applied to Luxembourg, he replied:

"Yes, you may also include Luxembourg."

Goebbels further denied "completely and unreservedly" all reports of uprisings in the protectorate of Bohemia and Noravia. (A British information ministry communique Wednesday night asserted a "serious" revolt had broken out in the two provinces of dismembered Czecho-Slovakia which became a part of Germany.)

Demarcation Nearly Settled

The demarcation line between German and Russian armies in Poland still has not been announced but it was said that it had been "practically settled."

Officials indicated Germany would withdraw to a line west of Warsaw, thus following Hitler's statement that the world would be surprised at how little he was demanding.

The fewest Poles possible, it was said, would be included in the German sphere of influence but it was added that the demarcation line would not necessarily mark the future frontier between Germany and Russia.

Whether the Poles would be permitted to have a state of their own—and if so under what conditions—could not be learned.

German army officials indicated that Germany had washed her hands of Lithuanian claims to Wilno (Vilna), ancient Lithuanian capital seized by Poles in 1920 and now occupied by Russians.

Nazi Thrust Blocked

Moscow, Sept. 21 (AP).—Diplomatic quarters tonight pointed out that Soviet Russia's drive into Poland apparently had intercepted any possible direct German march into Rumania from that quarter and said this fact might prove a vital factor in European war.

The advancing Soviet forces, these reports said, had cut Germany off from access to Rumania except through Hungary. Observers said this might prove important since Germany could make good use of Rumania's oil.

The speed of the Soviet army's drive was indicated by communiques which announced advances ranging up to 135 miles into Poland. In the south the Russians were said to have occupied Lwow, 90 miles from the Polish-Rumanian border and beyond the line of the junction of the two countries with Hungary.

Russia proceeded, meanwhile, with the task of converting to Soviet ideology the 11,000,000 new citizens acquired in Poland's Western Ukraine and white Russia.

Moscow newspapers said the population of the occupied territories were turning over to Sovet authorities straggling Polish troop found wandering in forests. These accounts said peasants were tying the soldiers together and taking them to the nearest Red Soviet army detachments.

A dispatch published by Pravda, organ of the Communist party, said "tollers of western white Russia are mercilessly uprooting the remnants of the landlords of Poland."

The staff of the Polish embassy remained virtually in seclusion, awaiting the staffs of the Leningrad and Minsk consulates in order to leave in a body. Their departure was expected in a day or two.

and threw several hand grenades. When they entered the room of the speaker. At that moment music was being broadcast. They interrupted the performance with the following words: "Attention. Calinescu has been assassinated. The action was carried out by the Iron Guardists." The broadcast was immediately interrupted.

The employes of the radio station took up the fight with the Iron Guardists, some of whom were immediately arrested. Meanwhile, soldiers and policemen arrived at the radio station in requisitioned automobiles and taxis and they seized the rest of the assassins.

Calinescu was first taken to a nearby military hospital, but when doctors discovered that he was dead, he was taken to his home. An alarm was broadcast throughout the city. The gendarmeries seized the telephone central station, the telegraph station, the radio and all the ministries.

Shot Themselves

Police have taken severe measures and are searching many houses. Two Iron Guardists who tried to escape fled into a house in the center of the town, jumping from roof to roof until they reached a house in whose cells they had rented a room.

They entered the apartment of a well known dancing teacher, Mme. Sybille, after forcing the maid at the point of their revolvers to let them in. However, she ran down the back stairs and called police, who surrounded the house, and when the two Iron Guardists found they could not escape they shot themselves. One of them is dead, the other is severely wounded and has ben taken to a hospital. Both worked in a photographic studio. Another Iron Guardist was found in an adjacent house, and he also committed suicide.

The whole city is extremely agitated. Calinescu had succeeded in becoming a very popular figure in a short time. His bravery, firm characte and liberal policies had won him the esteem of the entire nation. The populace is exasperated against the Iron Guardists, and it is to be foreseen that the severest measures will b taken against the few remaining members of this organization.

Carol Reads Testament

Bucharest, Sept. 21 (AP).—The testament of assassinated Premier Calinescu, read by King Carol at the crown council meeting tonight, asked that he be carried to his grave in a peasant cart drawn by six oxen.

"I beg my son to be wise and think of the name I leave him," cabinet ministers said Carol read in a trembling voice. "I leave him an honorable name I inherited from my father . . .

"I wish to be buried at Arges by the side of my father.

"I ask to be taken to the tomb in a peasant cart drawn by six oxen."

Arges is where King Ferdinand and Queen Marie are buried in southern Rumania.

Assassins Led by Lawyer

Carol ordered a huge public funeral for Calinescu. His body lay in state tonight.

A government communique said the assassination of the premier was organized by a lawyer named George Dumitrescu.

Dumitrescu was said to have succeeded the late Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Rumanian "little Hitler" and Iron Guard leader who was killed with a group of his followers in a reported attempt to escape prison November 30. Calinescu, as minister of the interior, directed the government campaign against the Iron Guard at that time.

Italy Fears Disorders

Rome, Sept. 21.—The news of the assassination of Premr Minister Calinescu of Rumania, created anxiety here in view of the delicacy of the situation in the Balkans, and the efforts which Italy has been making recently to assemble these countries in a stable neutral bloc.

It was impossible to reach Bucharest by telephone throughout the afternoon. Connections were restored in the evening, however.

There is an unacknowledged but deep seated fear in informed quarters here lest the assassination should be the signal for the Iron Guard to provoke disorders, which would provide either Germany or Russia wit han excuse to step in and "restore order." There is a general popular conviction that Russia will take the first opportunity to invade Bessarabia, whose acquisition by Rumania was never recognized by the Soviet Union.

shipments to belligerents, there has been no previous proposal that "cash" be exacted from the buyer, it was said. He did in previous recommendations definitely forbid American ships from carrying cargoes to belligerents, although this is provided in Pittman's new bill.

Participating with Pittman in this preliminary conference were Barkley, Connally, of Texas; Thomas, of Utah; Schwellenbach, of Washington; Green, of Rhode Island; Pepper, of Florida, and Guffey, of Pennsylvania.

Barkley left the group for the parallel White House conference with the President, Byrnes and Minton. He announced the decision to call today's meeting of the Senate's Democratic policy group on leaving the White House. An effort will be made at today's meeting to agree on strict limitation of the session's business to the neutrality program, he said.

We'll Win, Says Nye

Morning and afternoon conferences were held meanwhile by the 24 isolationists, noninterventionists and pacifists comprising virtually the same bloc which organized to force postponement of neutrality act revision last session.

Johnson declared the opposition group has lost no strength in the interval and claimed strong support outside the group. Whether their fight will open in the Senate committee tomorrow or await submission of a bill to the Senate floor "will depend on what is presented to us," said the veteran isolationist leader.

Leaving the second opposition conference, Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, predicted the group "will lick embargo repeal." Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, declared heavy mail received at the Capitol "shows the country is with us," and La Follette echoed that analysis of letters on the issue shows it "overwhelmingly against repeal." Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, claimed the group now counts at least 35 Senate votes against embargo repeal. With all voting, 49 is a Senate majority.

Others attending the isolationist conference included Senators Borah and Clark, of Idaho; Vandenberg, of Michigan; Capper and Reid, of Kansas; Bridges and Tobey, of New Hampshire; Danaher, of Connecticut; Bulow and Jurney, of South Dakota; Lodge and Walsh, of Massachusetts; Downey, of California; Overton, of Louisiana; Lundeen and Shipstead, of Minnesota; Frazier, of North Dakota; Barbour, of New Jersey, and Holt, of West Virginia.

Clash on Lindbergh Talk

On the stroke of noon, the special session had formally convened, as Vice President Garner and Speaker Bankhead simultaneously sounded their gavels in House and Senate. The two hours intervening before the President's address to the joint session passed in handshakes and greetings between members who only a few weeks ago bade Washington a brief farewell.

But hardly had the first gavel rapped before there occurred a Senate incident illustrative of the cleavage on neutrality methods. Senator Tobey asked unanimous consent to insert in the record Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's speech urging an isolationist United States course. Senator Pittman promptly objected, and Tobey's move for the time being was blocked. When the Senate reconvened after the President's address, Tobey informed Senators he would read Lindbergh's entire speech to the Senate if necessary to get it into the Senate. But this time the speech was allowed to go into the record without objection. Majority Leader Barkley said Pittman objected the first time because the Nevadan thought the Senate should take no action until the President had appeared before Congress.

Secret Service Strict

When the joint session convened at 2, a card admission system was so strictly enforced by Capitol policemen and secret service agents that the President faced a scene in striking contrast to the usual opening day throng. Lobbies were completely cleared. Save for Senators and members in their seats, only a few privileged standing guests gained entrance to the floor and there were unfilled seats in the galleries.

Count Jerzy Potocki, Ambassador from the Polish Republic now crushed to the point of extinction between the German and Russian vise, and Col. Vladimir Hurban, minister from the Czecho-Slovak Republic wiped off the map by Nazi forces, were there. But Hans Thomsen, charge d'affairs of the German Embassay, was not present.

After an opening burst of applause, interspersed with the "rebel yells" of Dixie's contingent, a deep silence settled over the chamber as the President opened his speech. Speaking in slow cadences, pausing frequently for emphasis, Mr. Roosevelt came to the point at once. He told members they were summoned back because existing neutrality legislation "so alters the historic foreign policy of the United States that it impairs the peaceful relations of the United States with foreign nations."

Regrets Signing Act

He voiced regret that Congress ever passed the neutrality act or that he ever signed it. It was, he said, this Nation's second deviation "from the sound principles of neutrality and peace through international law" and in the interest of American security he asked that it be sharply modified stricken from the books.

The single other deviation from international law, when Congress sought to avoid involvement in the Napoleonic Wars by passing the embargo and non-intercourse acts, he said had brought this country in its early history close to ruin and one of its results was the burning of the United States Capitol in the War of 1812.

The President pointed to the inconsistency of selling commodities equally needed by belligerents in waging their wars while withholding from them manufactured arms. He said to be consistent Congress must either cut off sales to belligerents of all products, or follow the traditional law of nations and sell all commodities to all alike. Repeal of the embargo and return to international law, he declared, are the crux of the issue before Congress.

Since 1931 the use of force instead of the council table has constantly increased in the settlement of disputes between nations—except in the Western Hemisphere where there has been only one war, now happily terminated.

During these years also the building up of vast armies, navies and storehouses of war has proceeded abroad with growing speed and intensity. But, during these years, and extending back even to the days of the Kellogg-Briand pact, the United States has constantly, consistently and conscientiously done all in its power to encourage peaceful settlements, to bring about reduction of armaments and to avert threatened wars. We have done this not only because any war anywhere necessarily hurts American security and American prosperity, but because of the more important fact that any war anywhere retards the progress of morality and religion and impairs the security of civilization itself.

For many years the primary purpose of our foreign policy has been that this Nation and this Government should strive to the utmost to aid in avoiding war among other nations. But if and when war unhappily comes, the Government and the Nation must exert every possible effort to avoid being drawn into the war.

Peace Efforts Cited

The Executive Branch of the Government did its utmost, within our traditional policy of noninvolvement, to aid in averting the present appalling war. Having thus striven and failed, this Government must lose no time or effort to keep the Nation from being drawn into the war.

In my candid judgment we shall succeed in these efforts.

We are proud of the historical record of the United States and of all the Americans during all these years because we have thrown every ounce of our influence for peace into the scale of peace.

I note in passing what you will all remember—the long debates on the subject of what constitutes aggression, on the methods of determining who the aggressor might be, and, on who the aggressor in past wars had been. Academically this may have been instructive as it may have been of interest to historians to discuss the pros and cons and the rights and wrongs of the World War during the decade that followed it.

But in the light of problems of today and tomorrow responsibility for acts of aggression is not concealed, and the writing of the record can safely be left to future historians.

There has been sufficient realism in the United States to see how close to our own shores came dangerous paths which were being followed on other continents.

War Averted Earlier

Last January I told the Congress that "a war which threatened to envelop the world in flames has been averted, but it has become increasingly clear that peace is not assured." By April new tensions had developed; a new crisis was in the making. Several nations with whom we had friendly, diplomatic and commercial relations had lost, or were in the process of losing, their independent identity and sovereignty.

During the spring and summer the trend was definitely toward further acts of military conquest and away from peace. As late as the end of July I spoke to members of the Congress about the definite possibility of war. I should have called it the probability of war.

Last January, also, I spoke to this Congress of the need for further warning of new threats of conquest, military and economic; of challenge to religion, to democracy and to international good faith. I said: "An ordering of society which relegates religion, democracy and good faith among nations to the background can find no place within it for the ideals of the Prince of Peace. The United States rejects such an ordering and retains its ancient faith."

"We know what might happen to us of the United States if the new philosophies of force were to encompass the other continents and invade our own. We, no more than other nations, can afford to be surrounded by the enemies of our faith and our humanity. Fortunate it is, therefore, that in this Western Hemisphere we have, under a common ideal of democratic government, a rich diversity of resources and of peoples functioning together in mutual respect and peace."

Unfair Operation

Last January, in the same message, I also said: "We have learned that when we deliberately try to legislate neutrality, our neutrality laws may operate unevenly and unfairly—may actually give aid to an aggressor and deny it to the victim. The instinct of self-preservation should warn us that we ought not to let that happen any more."

It was because of what I foresaw last January from watching the trend of foreign affairs and their probable effect upon us that I recommended to the Congress in July of this year that changes be enacted in our neutrality law.

The essentials for American peace in the world have not changed since January. That is why I ask you again to re-examine our own legislation.

Beginning with the foundation of our constitutional Government in the year 1789, the American policy in respect to belligerent nations, with one notable exception, has been based on international law. Be it remembered that what we call international law has had as its primary objectives the avoidance of causes of war and the prevention of the extension of war.

The single exception was the policy adopted by this Nation during the Napoleonic Wars, when, seeking to avoid involvement, we acted for some years under the so-called embargo and non-intercourse acts. That policy turned out to be a disastrous failure—first, because it brought our own Nation close to ruin and, second, because it was the major cause of bringing us into active participation in European wars in our own War of 1812. It is merely reciting history to recall to you that one of the results of the policy of embargo and non-intercourse was the burning in 1814 of part of this Capitol in which we are assembled.

Regrets Act of 1935.

Our next deviation by statute from the sound principles of neutrality and peace through international law did not come for 130 years. It was the so-called neutrality act of 1935—only four years ago—an act continued in force by the joint resolution of May 1, 1937, despite grave doubts expressed as to its wisdom by many Senators and Representatives and by officials charged with the conduct of our foreign relations, including myself. I regret that the Congress passed that act. I regret equally that I signed that act.

On July 14 of this year I asked the Congress in the cause of peace and in the interest of real American neutrality and security to take action to change that act.

I now ask again that such action be taken in respect to that part of the act which is wholly inconsistent with ancient precepts of the law of nations—the embargo provisions. I ask it because they are, in my opinion, most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace.

These embargo provisions, as they exist today, prevent the sale to a belligerent by an American factory of any completed implements of war, but they allow the sale of many types of uncompleted implements of war, as well as all kinds of general material and supplies. They, furthermore, allow such products of industry and agriculture to be taken in American flag ships to belligerent nations. There, in itself—under the present law—lies definite danger to our neutrality and our peace.

Would Aid Jobless

From a purely material point of view what is the advantage to us in sending all manner of articles across the ocean for final processing there when we could give employment to thousands by doing it here? Incidentally, and again from the material point of view, by such employment we automatically aid our own national defense. And if abnormal profits appear in our midst even in time of peace, as a result of this increase of industry, I feel certain that the subject will be adequately dealt with at the coming regular session of the Congress.

Let me set forth the present paradox of the existing legislation in its simplest terms: If, prior to 1935, a general war had broken out in Europe, the United States would have sold to and bought from belligerent nations such goods and products of all kinds as the belligerent nations, with their existing facilities and geographical situations, were able to buy from us or sell to us. This would have been the normal practice under the age-old doctrines of international law. Our prior position accepted the facts of geography and of conditions of land power and sea power alike as they existed in all parts of the world. If a war in Europe had broken out prior to 1935, there would have been no difference, for example, between our exports of sheets of aluminum and airplane wings; today there is an artificial legal difference. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of cotton and the export of guncotton. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the shipment of brass tubing in pipe form and brass tubing in shell form. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of a motor truck and an armored motor truck. Today there is.

Inconsistency Cited

Let us be factual and recognize that a belligerent nation often needs wheat and lard and cotton for the survival of its population just as much as it needs antiaircraft guns and antisubmarine depth-charges. Let those who seek to retain the present embargo position be wholly consistent and seek new legislation to cut off cloth and copper and meat and wheat and a thousand other articles from all of the nations at war.

I seek a greater consistency through the repeal of the embargo provisions, and a return to international law. I seek re-enactment of the historic and traditional American policy which, except for the disastrous interlude of the embargo and non-intercourse acts, has served us well for nearly a century and a half.

It has been erroneously said that return to that policy might bring us nearer to war. I give to you my deep and unalterable conviction, based on years of experience as a worker in the field of international peace, that by the repeal of the embargo the United States will more probably remain at peace than if the law remains as it stands today. I say this because with the repeal of the embargo this Government clearly and definitely will insist that American citizens and American ships keep away from the immediate perils of the actual zones of conflict.

Repeal of the embargo and a return to international law are the crux of this issue.

Ancient Right Denied

The enactment of the embargo provisions did more than merely reverse our traditional policy. It had the effect of putting land powers on the same footing as naval powers, so far as sea-borne commerce was concerned. A land power which threatened war could thus feel assured in advance that any prospective sea-power antagonist would be weakened through denial of its ancient right to buy anything anywhere. This, four years ago, gave a definite advantage to one belligerent as against another, not through his own strength or geographic position, but through an affirmative act of ours. Removal of the embargo is merely reverted to the sounder international practice, and pursuing in time of war as in time of peace our ordinary trade policies. This will be liked by some and disliked by others, depending on the view they take of the present war, but that is not the issue. The step I recommend is to put this country back on the solid footing of real and traditional neutrality.

When and if repeal of the embargo is accomplished, certain other phases of policy reinforcing American safety should be considered. While nearly all of us are in agreemnt on their objectives, the only question relates to method.

I believe that American merchant vessels should, so far as possible, be restricted from entering danger zones. War zones may change so swiftly and so frequently in the days to come, that it is impossible to fix them permanently by act of Congress; specific legislation may prevent adjustment to constant and quick change. It seems, therefore, more practical to delimit them through action of the State Department and administrative agencies. The objective of restricting American ships from entering such zones may be attained by prohibiting such entry by the Congress; or the result can be substantially achieved by Executive proclamation that all such voyages are solely at the risk of the American owners themselves.

Travel on Sea

The second objective is to prevent American citizens from traveling on belligerent vessels, or in danger areas. This can also be accomplished either by legislation, through continuance in force of certain provisions of existing law, or by proclamation making it clear to all Americans that any such travel is at their own risk.

The third objective, requiring the foreign buyer to take transfer of title in this country to commodities purchased by belligerents, is also a result which can be attained by legislation or substantially achieved through due notice by proclamation.

The fourth objective is the preventing of war credits to belligerents. This can be accomplished by maintaining in force existing provisions of law, or by proclamation making it clear that if credits are granted by American citizens to belligerents our Government will take no steps in the future to relieve them of risk or loss. The result of these last two will be to require all purchases to be made in cash and cargoes to be carried in the purchasers' own ships, at the purchasers' own risk.

Two other objectives have been amply attained by existing law, namely, regulating collection of funds in this country for belligerents, and the maintenance of a license system covering import and export of arms, ammunition and implements of war. Under present enactments, such arms cannot be carried to belligerent countries on American vessels, and this provision should not be disturbed.

Must Meet New Needs

The Congress, of course, should make its own choice of the method by which these safeguards are to be attained, so long as the method chosen will meet the needs of new and changing day to day situations and dangers.

To those who say that this program would involve a step toward war on our part, I reply that it offers far greater safeguards than we now possess or have ever possessed to protect American lives and property from danger. It is a positive program for giving safety. This means less likelihood of incidents and controversies which tend to draw us into conflict, as they did in the last World War. There lies the road to peace!

The position of the Executive Branch of the Government is that the age-old and time-honored doctrine of international law, coupled with these positive safeguards, is better calculated than any other means to keep us out of this war.

In respect to our defense, you are aware that I have issued a proclamation setting forth "a national emergency in connection with the observance, safeguarding and enforcement of neutrality and the strengthening of the national defense within the limits of peacetime authorizations." This was done solely to make wholly constitutional and legal certain obviously necessary measures. I have authorized increases in the personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, which will bring all four to a total still below peacetime strength as authorized by the Congress.

I have authorized the State Department to use, for the repatriation of Americans caught in the war zone, $500,000 already authorized by the Congress.

150 Added to FBI

I have authorized the addition of 150 persons to the Department of Justice to be used in the protection of the United States against subversive foreign activities within our borders.

At this time I ask for no other authority from the Congress. At this time I see no need for further Executive action under the proclamation of limited national emergency.

Therefore, I see no valid reason for the consideration of other legislation at this extraordinary session of the Congress.

It is, of course, possible that in the months to come unforeseen needs for further legislation may develop but they are not imperative today.

These perilous days demand cooperation between us without trace of partisanship. Our acts must be guided by one single hard-headed thought — keeping America out of this war. In that spirit I am asking the leaders of the two major parties in the Senate and in the House of Representatives to remain in Washington between the close of this extraordinary session and the beginning of the regular session on January third. They have assured me that they will do so, and I expect to consult with them at frequent intervals on the course of events in foreign affairs and on the need for future action in this field, whether it be Executive or legislative action.

Further, in the event of any future danger to the security of the United States or in the event of need for any new legislation of importance, I will immediately reconvene the Congress in another extraordinary session.

I should like to be able to offer the hope that the shadow over the world might swiftly pass. I cannot. The facts compel my stating, with candor, that darker periods may lie ahead. The disaster is not of our making; no act of ours engendered the forces which assault the foundations of civilization. Yet we find ourselves affected to the core; our currents of commerce are changing, our minds are filled with new problems, our position in world affairs has already been altered.

In such circumstances our policy must be to appreciate in the deepest sense the true American interest. Rightly considered, this interest is not selfish. Destiny first made us, with our sister nations on this hemisphere, joint heirs of European culture. Fate seems now to compel us to assume the task of helping to maintain in the Western World a citadel wherein that civilization may be kept alive. The peace, the integrity and the safety of the Americas—these must be kept firm and serene. In a period when it is sometimes said that free discussion is no longer compatible with national safety, may you by your deeds show the world that we of the United States are one people, of one mind, one spirit, one clear resolution, walking before God in the light of the living.

Hull Denies Neutrality Shift Is Partiality

tral step by altering its neutrality law after hostilities had broken out has been advanced by members of the isolationist forces in Congress and others.

It was further replied to by Hull when he pointed out that the present belligerents long had been on notice, in advance of the war's outbreak, that the Administration intended to ask for the revision now before Congress.

"There has never in our time," he said, "been more widespread publicity and notice in advance of the outbreak of war of a change in our policy than there has in this instance."

No Element of Surprise

To emphasize that there could be no element of surprise in revision of the law, he called attention to the numerous bills considered and the hearings held in the last session of Congress, and the agreement that revision would be on the agenda when Congress reconvened.

He called attention, also, to President Roosevelt's notice through a public statement, "which would hardly be supposed to have escaped the attention of all governments and people," that if war should occur he would call Congress back to renew consideration of the subject.

Hull Statement On Neutrality

The statement issued yesterday by Secretary of State Hull on neutrality follows:

In my testimony during the hearings before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in the early part of 1936, I made as clear a statement on that point (change in neutrality act through lifting the arms embargo following the outbreak of war) as I could, namely, that most of the progress made in the development of the law of neutrality has been made by acts or steps taken during war.

It is common knowledge that belligerents change their rules, practices, methods and policies in various directions during the progress of hostilities. The law of neutrality has been developed in the direction of recognizing greater rights in the neutral than he was formerly able to assert.

If neutrals were required to determine upon their policy in advance of war and in advance of conditions which they cannot possibly foresee, and to hold rigidly to that policy throughout the war while the belligerents are adopting such new policies as they may see fit to adopt, regardless of their damaging effect upon neutrals, determination of the rights and duties of neutrals and belligerents would be left primarily in the hands of the belligerents.

Has Right to Change

This is not in accord with my understanding of the basic principles of the law of neutrality. It harks back to the days when belligerents regarded neutrals as friends or enemies, depending upon whether they were willing to do the bidding of the belligerent.

I think that you will find from a careful analysis of the underlying principles of the law of neutrality that this Nation, or any neutral nation, has a right during a war to change its national policies whenever experience shows the necessity for such change for the protection of its interests and safety.

I do not mean to be understood as saying that such action may be taken at the behest or in the interest of one of the contending belligerents, it being understood, of course, that any measures taken shall apply impartially to all belligerents.

President Gave Notice

In advocating repeal of the embargo provisions of the so-called neutrality act, we are endeavoring to return to a more rational position and one that is more in keeping with real neutrality under international law.

The question whether such proposed action is unneutral should not, in my judgment, be a matter of serious debate. There has never in our time been more widespread publicity and notice in advance of the outbreak of war of a change in our policy than there has in this instance. This Government has given notice for well-nigh a year—at least since the first of the present year—that such a change of policy was in contemplation.

Numerous bills were introduced in Congress, long hearings were held in both Houses, and it was generally understood when Congress adjourned that this subject would be on the agenda when it again convened.

The President gave notice through a public statement, which would hardly be supposed to have escaped the attention of all governments and people, that if war should occur he would reconvene the Congress for the purpose of renewing consideration by it of the neutrality legislation that was pending as unfinished business when Congress adjourned.

Stocks React Vigorously to Neutrality Speech

San Francisco, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—The San Francisco Stock Exchange reacted aggressively to President Roosevelt's speech to Congress today.

United States Steel bounded upward with one sale at 81½ and with the closing price 80½, as against the bid of 78½, made at its New York closing, before the speech.

Southern Pacific, which closed in New York at 16⅝, sold here at 17¼; Lockheed moved from a 29 closing in New York to a sale of 30⅝ here, and Caterpillar reached 62 as against a New York price of 61.

Fractional gains also were recorded during the trading in North American Aircraft, California Packing, Curtiss-Wright, Chrysler, Sperry, Anaconda and Bendix.

Communist Vaporings

As Raymond Moley said recently, we are fast "laying the ghost that wars are caused by business interests." Our business leaders are keenly aware of the immense damage done to the industrial structure of any country by the disrupting effect of modern warfare. For the few who profit there are countless numbers who are called upon to make heavy sacrifices. Hence, spokesmen for organized business groups, such as the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and numerous heads of large industrial corporations have emphasized the interest of businessmen in the maintenance of peace.

Many of them have a keen recollection of the painful and costly readjustments that followed the last World War. Indeed, they are still feeling its effects in countless ways. The prolonged depression which followed post-war inflation was a result of that conflict, though far removed in point of time. The heavy taxes which burden industry are likewise a legacy of the war and its aftermath.

It is, therefore, rather amusing to find the Daily Worker, organ of the Communist Party, solemnly declaring that "America cannot stay out of the imperialist war if the Wall street banks have their way." No class in the country has better reason than the bankers to view with alarm the advent of a war that would subject this country to the danger of another period of turmoil and subsequent readjustment. If there are any "warmongers" in Wall street, they are being very discreet, for they well know that in the present temper of America their views carry little weight.

Just as some nervous anti-Reds detect Communists in the most unlikely places, so the Communists find it convenient to envisage Wall street profiteers waiting to grab a good share of the "loot" of the present so-called "imperialist" war. The myth of the Wall street profiteer is at least based upon a view at one time quite widely held that wars are due chiefly to the machinations of international bankers.

The sudden discovery that the present struggle is an "imperialist" war is, however, patently a face-saving device. For the pact between Soviet Russia and Germany has put the Communist Party in America in a most embarrassing position. It cannot espouse the cause of fascism after previous furious denunciations. Nor dare it criticize the alliance between Communist Russia and Germany. Hence, a way of escape from this awkward dilemma lies in pretending that the present war is merely a greedy scramble for loot in which the Western democracies are on a par with Fascist Germany.

Government Bond Drop

Since the outbreak of war in Europe the Federal Reserve System has bought Government issues in the open market on an extensive scale to cushion declines in quotations resulting from heavy liquidation. This buying tapered off as the war-induced selling pressure relaxed, and on Wednesday of this week it was reported that the Federal Reserve System had made no purchases at all that day and was preparing to let the market "seek its own level."

So long as a gradual, orderly and moderate decline in Government bonds is maintained, there seems good reason why the Federal Reserve System should stay out of the open market. But it would be most unwise to permit sharp declines or erratic fluctuations in Government issues to occur. Whatever one may think about the short-sightedness of the ultra-easy money policies that have been followed, the fact remains that billions of dollars of low-yield Government securities have been floated because of such policies. A large proportion of these issues has found lodgment in the portfolios of member banks and of the Federal Reserve Banks. It is imperative that nothing be done to jeopardize a banking system whose solvency has, as a result, become so dependent upon the maintenance of steady prices for Government bonds.

Furthermore, the Government has new financing to undertake which will become increasingly costly as the yield on outstanding Government issues rises. It is impossible to ignore the needs of the Treasury when deciding whether or to what extent Government bonds should be permitted to "seek their own level."

Any sharp drop in Government issues, or even fears of rapid declines, would also affect adversely the value of outstanding private obligations, and interfere with new capital issues. A free and unsupported market for Government bonds is, therefore, to be welcomed only if that market, when left unsupported, shows exceptional strength and stability.

Great Leadership

If cool, clear reasoning is the decisive factor in determining American foreign policy, then Congress will quickly adopt the real neutrality program which the President yesterday advocated before that body, now gathered in extraordinary session.

It is a program impervious to criticism on the grounds of logic. It is a program to which no exception can be taken by any sincere advocate of peace. It is a program which should immediately win the support of all Americans of good faith, of all who wish to see policy in this crisis based upon national safety rather than some form of personal advantage.

The one effective argument against repeal of the arms embargo, requested by Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, has been that this action might tend to make American involvement in hostilities more probable. That argument is based on experience in the last great war. Four factors, springing from the unrestricted sale and transport of war supplies, then undeniably operated to prepare the way for the actual outcome.

The President yesterday urged that each of these four loopholes for war should be blocked, simultaneously with repeal of the embargo. He urged (1) that "American merchant vessels should, so far as possible, be restricted from entering danger zones;" (2) that American citizens should be prevented "from traveling on belligerent vessels, or in danger areas;" (3) that foreign buyers should be required "to take transfer of title in this country to commodities purchased by belligerents;" (4) "the preventing of war credits to belligerents."

It is essential to realize that only the second and fourth of these safeguards are covered at all by existing neutrality legislation. It is essential to realize that contraband of war of American ownership can at present be carried in American bottoms into any war zone with entire legality. Last week, for instance, Germany defined "fuels and heating substances of all kinds" as absolute contraband. But our present neutrality legislation lays no restrictions whatsoever on American ships carrying coal or oil to France or Great Britain.

It is in no sense unneutral to take certain precautions against involvement which we have not taken. It is wholly unneutral to maintain the embargo, completely unjustifiable under international law, which we have placed in operation against Great Britain and France. If the purpose of our foreign policy is to make a tacit alliance with Hitler, as Russia has done, then the present arms embargo is justifiable. But, as the President has pointed out, no rational person can call this policy neutrality.

The President does not in the slightest degree exaggerate when he says that the embargo provisions are "most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace." They are resented, and properly resented, not merely by the British and French, but perhaps even more by the Canadians, with whom we share 3,000 miles of peaceful frontier and with whom our relations have for decades been wholly fraternal. As the strain of war increases, this Canadian resentment will, of course, become far more intense.

If there were no good grounds for such resentment it could be disregarded. Unfortunately, as Mr. Roosevelt suggests, there is all too much reason for bitterness, at present only incipient, on the part of those whom we are penalizing in most unneutral fashion. "Through an affirmative act of ours," to quote yesterday's message, we have given "a definite advantage" to Germany as opposed to Canada. Such a policy cannot be called neutral. It may very properly be called both dangerous and absurd.

It is both dangerous and absurd for another reason to which the President gave due emphasis. As is demonstrated by the contraband lists already issued by the belligerents, actual munitions are no more subject to seizure and destruction than are all the basic sinews of war. The present law permits some forms of munitions to be exported in American ships. It denies the right of belligerents to carry away other forms of munitions in their own ships.

There is simply no answer to the President's assertion that embargo advocates, to be consistent, must "cut off cloth and copper and meat and wheat and a thousand other articles from all of the nations at war."

Mr. Roosevelt did a magnificent job yesterday in clarifying the "paradox of the existing legislation." And he did it in a wholly objective, thoroughly dispassionate and beautifully lucid manner.

There was humility in his speech, as when he admitted regret over having signed the dangerous legislation for which he now seeks revision. There was a healthy appreciation of American political traditions, as when he emphasized that "Congress, of course, should make its own choice of method." And there was above all a splendid quality of leadership in the way the President clarified the issue and marshaled unanswerable arguments in the presentation of the Administration's case.

The war has added stature to the President. He demonstrated this yesterday by his masterly handling of a tangled and confusing problem, even yet little understood by the country as a whole. It was a very different, a far more admirable, exposition than some of Mr. Roosevelt's earlier messages, rightly and justly resented by the legislative arm.

Now it is up to Congress to show that it, too, can rise with the emergency—can rise superior to past blunders.

And Now Rumania

Conditions in eastern Europe, where the Nazi-Communist alliance is now feeling its oats, are well symbolized by the assassination yesterday of Premier Calinescu of Rumania.

Next to King Carol himself, the martyred statesman was the most vigorous opponent of the proscribed "Iron Guard" organization, a bund which is the Rumanian wing of the Nazi Party and which, like Nazi organizations in other countries, draws much of its financial support from Germany.

Calinescu was vice premier and minister in charge of police when Corneliu Codreanu, Iron Guard leader and "little Hitler" of Rumania, was shot with a number of associates while being transferred from one prison to another in Bucharest something less than a year ago. There were many who then suspected the official story that Codreanu was killed while attempting to escape his guards. And since that time Calinescu had certainly not been a good prospect for life insurance.

But if the manner of his death is not surprising, the moment of it is still less so. Germany and Russia are now partitioning Poland. Germany and Russia, not without goodwill on the part of Hungary and Bulgaria, are undoubtedly considering the partitioning of Rumania next. To give a veil of pretext to such action domestic disorder, threatening to the tranquillity of German or Russian minorities, must be produced. And none will deny that assassination of a prime minister is a good way to produce domestic disorder.

King Carol has lately shown himself a firm, resourceful and courageous ruler. He may be able to form rapidly a new government of national union which will be able to withstand the present terrible threat to Rumania's independence. But against him are working men who will stick at nothing, men who are anxious to reduce all of eastern Europe to servitude to Berlin and Moscow, so that Germany may face France and England with a thoroughly cowed continent behind her.

For Labor Peace

Labor unity has become a subject, like the weather, that encourages discussion rather than action. Unlike the weather, however, labor's troubles are capable of constructive solution. The fact is that an end to union controversies has been requested so many times, by so many people, that these appeals have come to be taken too much as a matter of form.

Now there is the possibility of a new and more urgent call from the President for a united front in labor's ranks. This was indicated recently by Daniel J. Tobin, president of the A. F. of L. Teamsters Union, himself a strong advocate of an end to present divisions. This fresh appeal would be addressed to the American Federation of Labor convention, soon to meet in Cincinnati, and would emphasize the emergency of war in Europe and the consequent domestic problems here.

There has always been every reason why the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. should concentrate on healing their quarrels with each other, and within their respective ranks. But this fact has never until recently budged the determination of the warring parties to fight it out, rather than settle their difference by the methods of collective bargaining on which they theoretically set such store.

In the case of the stagehands' dispute with the actors, however, the strike which would have started simultaneously with the war abroad was prevented. Frank Gillmore, president of the actors' union, announced at the time that the outbreak of war in Europe was "the deciding factor in inducing the officials of both unions to patch up their differences," as the unions did not wish "to add any strife to a world overburdened with war."

If this highly complex jurisdictional dispute could be settled in the face of far more serious problems, surely the principle can be carried one step further. It is not too much to hope that organized labor as a whole will take its cue from the theatrical unions. An appeal on the basis of national emergency should have the effect that all the others have failed to obtain.

Lindbergh Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What about Lindbergh for President? In his speech he clearly demonstrated not only his forceful thinking but his effective personality and his superiority to small partisan issues viewed in relation to the big problems at stake.

He is the only man, I believe, that might stand a chance to defeat Roosevelt. I write as a Democrat born and bred, and as one who was never a Lindbergh fan until last night. ELIZABETH B. WELLS.
Scarsdale, Sept. 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Col. Lindbergh's broadcast was a well-considered presentation of the horrible facts of war, a condition, few, if any true Americans are seeking. What I just can't understand is why the supporters of the present war-provocative neutrality law recite the horrors and expense of war as an argument for its continuance.

We wonder if Col. Lindbergh did not slip up in the following quoted statement:

"One need only glance at a map to see where our true frontiers lie. What more could we ask than the Atlantic Ocean on the east and the Pacific on the west? No, our interests in Europe need not be from the standpoint of defense. Our own natural frontiers are enough for that."

Is it possible that the colonel needs a map that shows the North and South as well as the East and West? E. M. PETERSON.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When peace angels change to war devils, it is not surprising that a famous aviator might change into an expert on international affairs and political philosopher.

Xerxes or no Xerxes, Hitler is to me Hitler, and all the beautiful words of Col. Lindbergh will not convince me that all the slaughter going on in Europe is not a shock.

'Cynical' Or 'Realistic?'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Neville the Devil has called the action of the Red army in occupying the western Ukraine and Byelo-Russia "cynical." Mauritz Hallgren in his letter to you calls it "monstrous cynicism." In your editorial of September 20 you call it "another of those cynical and tragic partitions."

What does "cynical" mean to you? I have heard it used in other strange contexts lately. Do you mean the opposite of "gullible"? Perhaps you mean "realistic." Please explain.

According to today's dispatch in your paper from Edward W. Beattie, jr., at Bucharest, "cynical" accurately describes only the Poles in exile, deceived by their own Fascist government and by the Fascist rulers of Britain and France.

The Byelo-Russians and western Ukrainians are certainly not "cynical" when they greet the Red army, or else your paper is printing lies. MARTHA A. VORHEES.

Poland And The Ukraine

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Did the "50,000,000 Ukrainians" in Europe really believe that Hitler would "liberate" the "8,000,000 Ukrainians" in Poland? Did they, therefore, "welcome" the German invasion of Poland and Polish Ukraine which borders on the Soviet Ukrainian Republic? I do not think so, but I read in an Associated Press dispatch from Pittsburgh of September 16 that Alexander N. Granovsky, "president of the American Ukrainian Liberation Committee," made such a statement. I never heard of this committee, and I hope that Mr. Granovsky has been misquoted.

Nobody in America has the right to speak for all Ukrainians in Europe. The Ukrainian people there, like others, are adherents of various political philosophies, some are pro-German, some are pro-Russian. The vast majority, however, are freedom-loving people. The national hero of Ukraine is the poet Taras Shevchenko, who championed the ideas of independence and popular government. It must not be forgotten that 100 years ago he also saw the necessity of a better international order. Most of the Ukrainian people in the United States and Canada have been espousing and practicing democracy, while hundreds of thousands of them have died on the battlefield and in prisons of Europe for the ideal of a free Ukraine, neither German nor Russian. Only a few misled leaders among Ukrainian immigrants in America actually sympathized with the Nazis' drive eastward, exasperated as they were by the Polish government's misrule of the Ukrainian minority. But these few speakers and writers did not foresee that Russia would take advantage of Poland's downfall. I know many here who love Ukraine without glorifying in the feeling of revenge against Poland. And there are some who might even forget the famine in Russian Ukraine if they could expect more civil liberties in the Soviet Union than the Polish Republic gave to her citizens. But I doubt that they can. Most of us feel that Ukraine is between the devil, the deep sea, and typhus.

American students of world affairs would perform a great service to Europe and the United States if they would study this Polish-Ukrainian-Russian triangle. Very little has been written in English about the history of Polish administration of eastern Galicia before 1914 and about the government of Ukrainian provinces forcibly annexed by Poland after the Great War, when Woodrow Wilson's ideal of Polish democracy was betrayed and defeated. I wonder how many Americans remember that he fought for that ideal at Versailles as President of the United States and at the Conference of Ambassadors of Allied Powers in 1923 as a private attorney. His program was practical. He called for a League of Nations and an independent Polish democratic republic with an access to the sea, and he emphasized that this republic should be composed of territories indisputably Polish.

Some French and some British statesmen aided and abetted romantic Polish patriots in organizing a Polish empire instead. Did some prominent Americans help them? And if they did, then why? Sometimes it seems to me that if not for them then perhaps there would be a better solution of the Polish-Ukrainian problem.

Miss Thompson And Col. Lindbergh

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was shocked at the tone of Dorothy Thompson's column in The Post of September 20.

Miss Thompson has built up a reputation and a following, during the past few years, based on her opposition to the intolerance personified by the Hitler regime in Germany. She has experienced that intolerance personally. Does she think that imprisonment of citizens and deportation of aliens for their freedom of speech is so different from branding a public figure as pro-Nazi and hence, by inference, inimical to American institutions?

If through her writings and the speech of thoughtless and less-informed private individuals, Col. Lindbergh becomes identified in the public mind as an admirer and propagandist for a regime which every thinking American would hate to see imitated in this country, Miss Thompson has done him a greater injury than Hitler has done to any of the inmates of his concentration camps.

Anyone who remembers the unenviable lot of those who were branded as pro-German during the last war, who recalls the attitude Col. Lindbergh's father had to face some 25 years ago, must regret that Miss Thompson has chosen publicly to identify Col. Lindbergh as a friend of a system with which we may conceivably be at war, and with which, however events may fall out, we as a country have nothing in common.

I do not doubt for a moment that Miss Thompson and Col. Lindbergh have the same ideal. They wish their country to remain one where their children may grow up without danger of being formed into bullies, toadies or sneaks, under Government auspices. They wish to be able to express their opinions in the circle of their family and friends without fear of secret police and dictaphones.

They wish men and women who have had wider experience and better opportunities than the average citizen to be free to voice their opinions on questions which concern their country, when they feel it is not only their right but their duty to do so. Whether this ideal can be achieved and maintained in the world as it is at present is open to considerable question. But we can never attain it if we allow free rein to personal vituperation of anyone who differs with our personal views of the means to be used.

Miss Thompson's language is, as usual, a pleasure to read. Her attitude of mind is that of a common scold calling names across a tenement house areaway. She has said recently that she found it impossible to be dispassionate in any matter where Nazism was concerned. If that is really true, those of us who have admired her for her broad-mindedness would prefer that she refrain from public utterances. We can get plenty of passion by tuning in on Berlin.

What we need from our commentators here, and what we are getting from them for the most part, is sanity and the weighing of all the evidence available. We have hard decisions to make, and after they are made we shall have hard work carrying them out to completion. Hysteria in a nation at war is ugly but understandable; in a nation still at peace and striving to continue so, such hysteria and all that conduces to it is unforgivable.

I personally do not agree with Col. Lindbergh. But I admire the courage which led him to make his speech and I respect his opinion as a man who has done great services for his country and who aside from titles and medals and a good deal of unwanted publicity has received very little from the people of that country.

It would be a calamity if we allowed ourselves to be estranged from such a character at such a time. We need Col. Lindbergh most of all, perhaps, for the qualities that in England would make him a member of "His Majesty's most loyal opposition." We need not agree with him, but we do need to hear and ponder what he has to say. I hope he speaks again and again, and that no one will turn off the radio because of Miss Thompson's barrage.

"Two Different Jobs"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to express my personal appreciation for the manner in which you presented the question of military training in CCC camps on your editorial page in The Post of September 12.

I personally have no objection to military training, but I have always felt that if the time comes when compulsory military training is desirable in the United States, it should be inaugurated on a basis that is equitable to all. Should an effort be made to mix military training with the regular work projects for which CCC camps have been established, it is my considered opinion that neither proper military instruction can be given nor a minimum of desirable work performed by the enrollees.

The Post Impressionist

Presenting Margot

CHARLEY, the Kansas City impresario, had his head on his hands when I went into his office one winter day. Also he had Margot Asquith on his hands, as I found out when I asked him to clarify the cause of his dejection. She was on her "Ameddican" tour, and he had bought a piece of same. The lady had not proved a Comstock lode at the gate. And she was due in that town the last of that week.

"She's not going to draw a house, and I'm harpooned to the air of several berries," wept Charley. "And besides, I'm going to need somebody to introduce the damn dame to whatever else is present."

"Cheer up, Charley," I said. "I'll be back in town that day, and I'll do it."

"Boy," he said, with real relief in his voice, "you just took over a job."

Instantly in my mind there sprang "(full-panoplied from the head of Jove!") exactly the right speech—approach, substance, peroration. It was a darb! I went about all week saying it over to myself.

But repetition had its usual effect—destroyed the meaning of the words, in my mind. It began to sound cheap and mean and banal. The appalling impudence of the thing was the only remnant of my first idea, and that scare me. Suppose the audience might gallantly react in a spirit of fair play toward a visiting lady of rank? Wouldn't I be the fair-haired boy running down the street reeking verbal spoiled eggs and the contumely of a mob!

My courage failed me. But to save my life I couldn't think of another speech. I simply had to use that one, and take my chances with the crowd. Dull desperation held me to the job. I went to the hall shuddering with sheer physical cold from my fear and my sense of impending doom.

In the ante room of the speaking place I was presented to the lady. I could hardly believe this was the woman I'd heard so much about. She was about the size of a 5-cent cake of expensive soap after a week's wash had been done off from it. She came about to my elbow, and looked like some sort of human hawk. All dressed in white though she was, she looked Lilliputian. She greeted me effusively.

Suddenly I saw a ray of hope of escape from the mob's violence. I said:

"Lady Asquith, it will be all right, I presume, if, after having presented you, I go down to the audience and sit where I can better see and hear?"

"Absolewtly nawt!" she exclaimed. "You must sit on the platfawm and keep your wawtch in front of you. Every time I turn to look at me notes—which I will, no feah—you must say 'Go awn!' That will be for the first houah. Awfter that, you must say how many minnits. I am undeh contract with my manageh to speak an houah and ten minnits, without fail. And I haven't the slightest idyah of the pawssage of time—I'm an idjit!"

Merciful angels, was I out of luck!

Well, we had a rough voyage to the stage. The arrangement was a sort of hybrid stepladder from the main floor to the platform, in sight of the audience. She took my arm and we started up. Now and then, when she would stop to bow, I thought I'd lost her. When we finally got to the stage I whispered:

"If ever I put you on a platform again, I'll use a shawl strap."

Arriving, she went one side, I another, of a chair. Good goin'! But I finally got her planted, and laid out my "wawtch." The crowd finished hearty applause, and I arose:

"Ladies and gentlemen," I began, with my heart in my mouth, "you see before you this evening a highly privileged lady. She is making her absolutely first appearance in my presence. You know her history. You who have read her amazingly—almost incredibly—frank memoirs, have noticed how prominently I was omitted from the roster of the great with whom she had been just like that. I may appear in her next edition if I'm not careful——"

Came a not-too-sotto voce at my elbow:

"You will, no feah!"

"This lady has hobnobbed with the great—she has achieved the Kipling ideal of walking with kings without losing the common touch. But being seen here in public tonight, with me treating her as a pal—it may go to her head so that there will be no living with the woman from now on. Honors have been literally heaped upon her in the past. Ossa has been piled upon Pelion, as it were, to do her honor. But tonight is the peak, the climax, the acme, the summum bonum, the ne plus ultra, the pax vobiscum, the nux vomica of her career—how can she ever know a greater honor than that of being presented to a Kansas City audience, and by me!"

I hadn't said a dozen of my studiedly impudent words before the crowd just let go all holds and hilariously entered into the horseplay, completely dispelling the fear that had haunted me. And the old gal was as gritty as a piece of liver rolled in sand. She grinned and, when she arose to speak, took merely a playful fling at me.

Later on I had a nice little handwritten note of appreciation from her for my "courtesy." Was Margot being sarcastic?

Fair Enough

Propaganda

EVERYBODY has been saying that we have to be on guard against disguised or insidious propaganda these days, and I will throw in with that. I will say so, too, and I think we are. You never saw the like of the mail that is received by newspaper editors and trained seals just now and, no doubt, by the radio people, too. A lot of it comes in the form of little Tom Thumb newspapers, but there are plenty of common mimeographed handouts and quite a few books that look pretty much like regular books. I guess you would have to admit that they really are regular books if it came to a question of that, because a book is a book whether it is propaganda or whatever, for that matter. "Grapes of Wrath" is propaganda, and so are the books of Winston Churchill, who can book for you in about the same space of time that it takes a cat to kitten and does so as regularly.

I often find in my mail a little paper dedicated to the unconquerable aspirations of the people of Ethiopia, and this is a curio because all the reporters that I have talked with who were in there said the Ethiopians were the scabbiest and most abysmal ignoramuses they ever saw, who really didn't gave a damn who ruled the country and, far from being up on reading and writing, couldn't even scratch their initials, if any, in the sand with a stick.

Ethiopian Paper Assails Il Duce

YET THIS Ethiopian freedom paper is not badly put together and contains a lot of truth, because, no two ways about it, the truth is on the side of the Negus. Still, I have a suspicion that somebody else, say the British or the Bolos, are putting up for the propaganda, not out of any beautiful sympathy for a people who have been wronged but to needle up a little publicity against Mussolini.

There is a paper plugging the loyalist cause in Spain, too, also with a good deal of truth, and one dealing with China, but I never noticed which side the China paper is for. Another one deals with Japan, and, although I don't bother to read it, I gather that it wants to show that the Japanese have been doing the nice nations of the world a great favor by standing off the Bolos in China.

The Dodecanesians, even, get out a dodger now and again, demanding that the right prevail and giving the Italians a fearless going-over for enslaving the proud and peace-loving natives of those islands—who are, I believe, Greeks.

THE RED PAPERS are all propaganda, and it is a pleasure to read them because the various sects hate all the other Bolo sects as angrily as they hate Bishop Manning or God. If you want to get the dirt on all of them you don't look to the record of the Dies Committee, which is hard reading, but to their own sheets.

If you think I am a Red-baiter, as the Stalin Bolos sometimes suggest, you ought to read what the Trotzky Bolos say about them and vice versa. I guess there is a good deal of truth in what they say about each other, because if there is anything which they should know all about it is Communists.

The New Deal also turns out a right smart bit of propaganda in mimeo handouts, and some of my radio friends tell me that the Government also produces platters, or pancakes, which are sent out to radio stations for use at will with a suggestion, as these friends see it, that someone in the Administration is going to be terribly disappointed if this or that station doesn't find time to give the stuff a send.

Fail To Mention Other Side's Story

UNIONS, TOO, send out publicity, and while some of it is fair and truthful, this matter, like all other propaganda, has a habit of neglecting to mention further truths which would take some of the heat off their grievances and contentions.

Most of the States appropriate money for propaganda, or publicity, and there are any number of leagues, associations, foundations, institutes and so forth which are just publicity offices, ballyhooing isms and promotions or crying boycott against various hunks of our own population and foreign countries. And, rather oddly, most of the propaganda for Americanism is actually propaganda against Americanism put out by dumb old brigadiers who want to blow off after years of repression or by churchless preachers who try to rouse people to horrible cruelties by telling them that their neighbors have been going around slandering Christ.

You can't depend on any of this material, and I think the daily press does a good job detecting and rejecting, because I handle a great deal of it and rarely see in print anything that I recognized as a handout of this type, unless it is coppered by compensating truths obtained from the opposing side. It seems to me that most of the money spent on propaganda is wasted.

Germans Act Quickly in Balkans

Calinescu's Murder Seen as Move to Get Ahead of Stalin

By Augur.

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Sept. 21.—The assassination of the Rumanian Premier, Calinescu, can be laid to the door of German agents.

Calinescu, as the right-hand man to King Carol, destroyed Codreanu's Iron Guard which was entirely an instrument of the German legation in Bucharest. The link between the Iron Guard and Germany was so strong that German Minister Fabricius went to the foreign ministry to protest against Codreanu's execution, but while he was waiting in the anteroom to be received he saw framed on the wall for his attention authentic documents proving his connection with the Iron Guard leader. Fabricius left with his protest unmade but vowing vengeance.

Calinescu was a staunch supporter of the idea of rapprochement with Bulgaria, Turkey and Great Britain and was, therefore, particularly unacceptable to Berlin. His life was menaced a number of times, but, undaunted, the little man ignored his danger in spite of urgent requests from King Carol, who valued highly his faithful services.

London sees the Germans playing at high stakes in Rumania, where they must act quickly. Russian penetration of Poland means that Josef Stalin's influence in Bucharest now is bound to grow many times to the detriment of the Germans, who now must fear the total subjection of Rumania to Russian influence.

It is learned in London that agents of Stalin have approached leaders of the Peasant and Socialist parties in Poland with offers to back the formation by them of a new government, an independent Polish state, under Russian patronage, provided they renounce allegiance to the Smigly-Ridz regime.

Also it is learned that the Russians are demanding the Germans consent to the formation of such a Polish state which would include territories with predominantly Polish population, but excluding the Corridor and also the western fringe of the Poznania Province and Silesia, which Stalin permits Hitler to retain.

Russians Got There First

As viewed from London, the defense of Warsaw and Lwow by the gallant remnants of the Polish army has served to strengthen Stalin's hand. It has prevented the Germans from reaching the Rumanian border before the Russians, who occupied the whole of southern Poland and have cut off Hitler from direct contact with Carol's territory.

At the same time the Russian army established a common frontier with Hungary—a thing which in the World War was the unrealized ambition of Czar Nicholas. The whole Ukraine now is under Russian rule and Berlin has been prevented from organizing the anti-Russian irredenta.

The German delegates to Moscow were handicapped in their negotiation with the Russians by the fact that their army was still held up before the Polish capital. It is difficult to discuss the line of demarcation when easily advancing Russians see German troops hurled back by the defenders of Warsaw.

The million-strong Russian army is advancing into Poland while Hitler thinks of removing as many troops as he can westward. Now the world is beginning to see clearly that in his hatred of Poland, Hitler completely sold out to Stalin. The latter is master of the destiny not only of the Baltic states but he equally decides the fate of the Balkan Peninsula.

Finally, when a conference meets to decide the fate of Europe, it will be impossible to keep Russia out. Indeed, it is possible to suppose that Stalin will finally be the man inflicting the knockout blow to Hitler when the latter is weakened by terrible blood-letting on the Western Front, which now is inevitably coming.

Stalin's relations with Hitler are based on considerations of momentary usefulness exclusively. The only country Russia is sincerely attached to is Turkey.

A True Alliance

Russo-Turkish relations date back to Lenin's time. Lenin exchanged with Ataturk letters constituting a binding agreement to co-operate, starting from idea that Russia and Turkey cannot partake of any political combination hostile to either of them. For 20 years now the Russians have faithfully carried out the terms of Lenin's promise. Analysis of Russo-Turkish relations shows not a single infringement of the terms of the agreement. That is why the Russo-German pact contains a secret reservation freeing Russia of obligations in case Germany is engaged in a war with Turkey. The exclusion of Germany from the Balkans by co-operation between Russia and Turkey is seen here as a real fact.

Importance must be attached to the Italo-Greek agreement to demilitarize the Albano-Greek frontier. This is taken as proof of the reality of Italian professions of a desire to maintain neutrality.

Slaying of Rumanian Premier May Plunge Balkans Into War

Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia Dismayed By Death of Friendly Statesman; Nazis Reported Displeased With His Regime

By Daniel De Luce,

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Budapest, Sept. 21.—The assassination of Rumania's premier, Armand Calinescu, by pro-Nazi extremists, threatened tonight to push all of southeastern Europe off a delicate balance between peace and chaos.

Dismay and consternation were the immediate reaction in the capitals of Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia where Calinescu was regarded as a strong friend.

The first comment in Bulgarian and Hungarian political circles was, "Rumania depended more on Calinescu than on any other man except King Carol."

Neutrality His Best Card

All the Balkans knew Calinescu was waging a grim game of diplomacy to save his country's frontiers from a possible "undeclared invasion" as his Polish allies fell under the twin onslaught of Russia and Germany.

Neutrality was Calinescu's best card. Tonight the question was whether the Iron Guard, an organization with long-acknowledged Nazi leanings, had trumped it with bullets.

Diplomats said no country at the moment at peace with the entire world was in a more precarious position than Rumania.

On the north and east, Soviet Russia, which never has been reconciled to the loss of Bessarabia to Rumania in settlements after the World War, now holds a border with Rumania from the Black Sea to the easternmost tip of Hungary.

Nazilism Aggressive

German Naziism—inspiration of the Iron Guard movement—has been aggressive since the start of the Polish war. The Germans have been pressing for Rumanian oil for the Reich's motorized army and Rumanian wheat for the Reich's vast industrial population.

In resisting exploitation of his country's resources by any foreign power which might seek to use the advantage for political profit, Calinescu was a key man.

Diplomats had believed that a peaceful, productive Rumania would be to war-pressed Germany's advantage. The sudden Russian occupation of the common Polish-Rumanian frontier ahead of advancing German columns deprived Germany of more than verbal pressure from that quarter, the diplomats had conjectured.

Reich Seem Displeased

There have been many indications that Germany has been displeased with Rumania's "lack of cooperation" in facilitating exports to the Reich.

Diplomats assert Germany frequently made use of Bulgaria and Hungary, both of which claim pre-World War territory from Rumania, to "persuade" the Bucharest government to make a show of appeasing German economic demands. That appeasement has not gone far enough has been apparent from reports of recurrent German-Rumanian consultations on trade.

Bulgaria's pet dream is to regain Dobruja. Hungarian revision centers on Transylvania.

The slightest appearance of weakness in the Rumanian government—especially if accompanied by suspicion that it originated from German-Soviet pressure—might be taken as a signal by any neighboring power for "territorial adjustments," diplomats said.

Rumania Still in Entente

Hungary, like Rumania itself, has been trying to avoid entanglement in the war over Poland. But the Transylvanian problem still remained unsettled. Like Bessarabia and Dobruja, it remained a potential battle spark.

Partly as a result of Calinescu's diplomacy, Rumania remains tied with Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia in the Balkan entente. But Yugoslavia's friendship with Bulgaria now is generally considered even stronger than her Rumanian bonds, and it is considered problematical among some diplomats how much help Turkey and Greece could or would give Rumania if it came to a showdown. Moreover, Greece and Germany's Axis partner, Italy, yesterday reached an apparent accord in which Italian troops in Albania have been withdrawn from the Greek frontier.

In the last analysis, diplomats say, Rumania's fate depends on Russia and Germany. If either marches against Rumania then Bulgaria and Hungary are likely to follow.

The inner collapse of Rumania might well be the signal to swing the war of the great powers into the Balkans.

Nazis Criticize Roosevelt Speech

every time he mentioned America's determination to stay out of war.

To the average British citizen who lives beside his radio these melancholy nights, this was his first opportunity to decide for himself whether or not the United States will fight alongside Britain. And his feeling tonight is, "they won't."

In a way this is a shock to the average Briton. There has been a tendency here to play up the United States' hatred of Hitler and at least in some quarters to minimize the strength of the isolationists. Consequently the average man is not so concerned with whether the United States sell arms to Britain as to whether the United States will fight. Tonight he is not very hopeful.

"A Magnificent Voice"

There naturally is great interest in the address in official quarters but the information ministry's only comment was the "President certainly has a magnificent voice." One spokesman said, "American neutrality is purely a United States internal question and is none of our business."

Observers here are confident that the President will win his fight for the cash-and-carry clause and they are aware of the tremendous advantage that the lifting of the arms embargo would give to Great Britain and France. The man in the street, however, is not very clear about this intricate political maneuvering. He has felt vaguely that Roosevelt is on his side but he is not so sure after listening to those Congressional peace cheers tonight.

The President's speech topped the war and the assassination of Calinescu news in the morning papers. "Roosevelt calls for the lifting of the arms ban" read most headlines. The Dailyy Express hurried thruogh this comment "Congress will determine the issue, by one test alone—the peace and interests of the United States."

Kermit Roosevelt To Be a Captain, Keep Citizenship

London, Sept. 21 (INS).—Kermit Roosevelt, son of President Theodore Roosevelt, will join the British army as a captain but will not renounce his American citizenship, International News Service learned tonight.

Roosevelt, a vice president of the United States Lines, served in both the British and American armies during the World War.

His brother, Quentin, a member of the Lafayette Escadrille, was shot down and killed by a German flier in the World War, and was buried with military honors by the Germans.

Lindbergh's Appeal

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Right To Speak

COL. LINDBERGH'S clear appeal for aloofness from the current European war has brought Miss Dorothy Thompson onto the trail in quest of his scalp. Miss Thompson accuses him of being a Nazi sympathizer. She asserts that his "inclination toward Fascism is well known to his friends! She asserts that "pity, sentiment and personal sympathy play a small part in his life" and that "cruelty does not affront him."

I don't know Col. Lindbergh. As a newspaperman I have had a mild bias against him ever since his return from his flight to Paris in 1927 because of his rudeness to members of my craft. However, I know a few pepole who know him moderately well but have not noticed that "inclination toward Fascism" which Miss Thompson says is well known to his friends.

Miss Thompson's case is built largely on circumstantial evidence. She reports that in May, 1938, at a luncheon at Lady Astor's home he "expressed very high opinion of the German air force and of Nazi organization in general," and that he "also deprecated the Russian air force." Whether he did or not, I don't know. But if he did he was in substantial agreement with other military observers.

Nazi Decoration Surprised Him

MISS THOMPSON makes much of the report that he planned to take up residence in Berlin and says that he abandoned it because of adverse comment. Maybe so. The fact is that he went to live in Paris at this time. She also makes much of the fact that he accepted a German decoration. The fact seems to have been that it was given him as a kind of surprise under circumstances which prevented his declining it without creating an ugly situation. Besides, it probably would have meant cutting himself off from further information about German aviation—information which was of great interest, perhaps value, to our own War and State departments.

When Col. Lindbergh left this country he sought sanctuary not in Germany nor in Italy but in England. According to Miss Thompson he liked the atmosphere of that great democracy so much that he considered becoming a British subject. Later he went to live in another great democracy, France. In both he seems to have been well treated.

He is, moreover, married to the daughter of a late partner in the House of Morgan, which was the fiscal representative of Great Britain and France during the World War I and has been called the chief center of Allied propaganda in this country during World War I and the ensuing years (when the British and French were trying to get out of paying their war debts).

Bias To British Would Be Natural

IF COL. LINDBERGH had come out in favor of giving the British and French all the help we could—including, if necessary, the dispatch of another great expeditionary force, nobody would have been surprised. You would suppose that his bias was in that direction.

Whatever the reasons, Col. Lindbergh voiced the doctrine of American independence of Europe which was voiced by his father. His father, of course, came to be maligned as "pro-German." During the hysteria of World War I that was the obnoxious label plastered on everybody in this country who had the courage to say that we had no vital concern in the outcome of that war. Col. Lindbergh's father had never seen a German airplane nor a Russian airplane. He had never taken lunch at Lady Astor's and he had never been decorated by Gen. Goering. He could not have been a Fascist or a Nazi sympathizer. Even the words had not yet been invented. But he did not believe that we should take part in the European war of 1914-18. He saw through the beguiling arguments and slogans that were used to draw us into that war—arguments and slogans of the same kind that are being used today, and by nobody more persistently than by Dorothy Thompson.

Stalemate Likely In Europe's War

ONE POINT in Miss Thompson's attack on Col. Lindbergh requires special note. She says that he implied in his radio talk that unless we enter the war with our full force of manpower and resources the Nazis will win the current war. Certainly he said that if we take part in this war munitions will not be enough; that "we are likely to lose a million men, possibly several million—the best of American youth."

Possibly Col. Lindbergh meant only that once you commit yourself to a course of action, it becomes almost impossible to back out on the ground that the cost is becoming too great.

Perhaps Col. Lindbergh had in mind not a Nazi victory but a stalemate. Great Britain and France are carrying on an offensive war against Germany. At present it is an offensive against a short, heavily fortified line which may be puncturable only at colossal costs in human life. Because they may be unable to bring Germany to its knees by invasion or blockade, it does not necessarily follow that the British and French will be vanquished. For their own defenses, on land and sea, are very strong.

Whatever the facts, Col. Lindbergh arrived at a conclusion which seems abhorrent to Miss Thompson: the conclusion that the United States is not a colony or in other form an adjunct of Europe.

Arms Embargo Viewpoints

A CURIOUS thing is happening in the debate over the arms embargo. Those who believe that we should lift the embargo on arms are being branded as "propagandists," despite the fact that most of them were opposed to this concept of neutrality long before any war of general European dimensions was in sight. Those who want us to keep the embargo are representing themselves as the true upholders of American interests against foreign warmongers.

In this debate there are two points of view regarding the attitude that the United States should take at this moment toward the war. The one is most clearly embodied in the letter which the former Secretary of State, Mr. Stimson, addressed to the public through the New York Times. The other has been most completely pleaded for in the address of Col. Lindbergh.

The first viewpoint is that the United States should return to the traditional law, sell arms to friendly powers who have money to pay for them, strengthen our defenses and be prepared to defend American interests at whatever point they are menaced. At this juncture we should make no hard and fast program, but do everything possible to maintain our position as a world power and as the world's greatest society of free people.

The second viewpoint is that the struggle is elsewhere and that we should maintain our attitude of complete aloofness, keeping and even perhaps extending the embargo.

Both Concepts Are Sincere

THE AMERICAN people ought clearly to realize that the proponents of both concepts of neutrality are making propaganda, since the expression of any viewpoint is propaganda. We will take one course or the other, for we can only take one course or the other. The proponents of neither policy wish us to send an army to France. On both sides there are honest men and women, and their decision will be determined by their viewpoint on the issues, their analyses of the nature of the war and the possible effects of its outcome on the United States and by their own personal biases.

The western powers certainly hope that we will take the first course, and therefore all of us who advocate the first course are supporting a policy welcome to the western powers.

The National Socialist government of Germany is concentrating its entire propaganda machine on pressing us to take the second course. Therefore, all who advocate it are advising a course welcome to Germany and her associates.

Whatever the motives, whatever the prejudices and whatever the intellectual convictions, Mr. Stimson is a propagandist for the western powers by reason of his stand and Col. Lindbergh is no less a propagandist for Germany by reason of his stand. Whatever course we take will aid one side and harm the other. That itself is a comment on the lack of reality of our isolation.

IF WE REFUSE, in defiance of international practice, to sell arms to powers, one of which has a great dominion on the North American Continent, with 3,000 miles of unfortified frontier on our own country, with both of which we have been at peace for more than a hundred years, and neither of which for more than a hundred years has ever sought to influence or change our domestic institutions, we shall definitely be aiding Nazi Germany and her benevolent assistant, Bolshevik Russia, whose philosophies of life and government do openly challenge our institutions.

There is no way in which we can avoid making a decision favorable to one side or the other. If we maintain an embargo in a distortion of traditional neutrality, England and France have at least as much reason to regard it as an unfriendly act as Germany would have if we lifted it.

Leaving sentiment, pity and personal sympathies out of account and being as "ruthless as a surgeon's knife," this is the fact.

And it seems to me that it is pertinent to point out that with all this talk about propaganda the only widespread propaganda in this country directly connected with and traceable to foreign powers and accompanied by large-scale organization of American citizens are the Nazi and the Communist.

Communist Party leaders have testified before the Dies committee that they have 200,000 members in this country, and that they are spending on an average of $2,000,000 a year. They have their own publications. The Communist Party is an authoritarian organization; it follows slavishly the line laid down in the Kremlin, and it is concentrating its whole propaganda activities now in denouncing Great Britain as a warmonger, and pinning the blame for the war upon Great Britain. By a feat of unexampled disingehuousness it still maintains that the Russian offer of benevolent aid to Germany, which, with it in his pocket Hitler marched against Poland in full realization that he was starting a general war, was an act of peace.

THERE IS a Nazi organization in the United States. It has many thousands of members and its own press. It, too, has performed a marvelous feat of volte face, since the Russian-German pact. According to the Deutscher Weckruf and Beobachter, Russia has become National Bolshevist, and "Bolshevist" means majority rule. Through meetings and through its press the bund and its fellow travelers are attempting to make a solid bloc of German-Americans and are organizing a letter campaign upon Congress.

Wednesday's issue of the Deutscher Weckruf played up the Lindbergh speech in a headline across the entire front page, "We Shall Be Deluged With Propaganda." The implication is that the Deutscher Weckruf is not making propaganda. But long before this war began this paper was a pure and simple Nazi sheet, heartily supporting and no doubt part of Fritz Kuhn's organization in the United States.

Nobody who reads the Nazi propaganda here can possibly believe that its readers have American interests at heart—except as they see those interests completely merged with those of Germany. This is not the standpoint of most German-Americans, but the war makes it possible to graft Nazi ideology upon the firm American will to keep our boys out of Europe.

This needs to be realized when we hear passionate pleas for "America First" from people and organizations whose allegiance is elsewhere.

THIS WAR is being fought in a very peculiar way. It is in the first line a war of ideas. In this war of ideas no neutrality is respected. On the other hand, neutrality itself and the various interpretations of neutrality are part of the strategy of the war.

At this time when the Nazis in the United States are insisting that to repeal the embargo on arms and to return to traditional international law would amount to an act of war against Germany, they interpret the Russian action as "neutrality." And the German concept of neutrality as applied, for instance, to Rumania and to Italy, is of a neutrality wholly benevolent to Germany—whereby Germany profits more by their neutrality than by the actual participation of these countries in the war.

The campaign of those who wish this country to aid Germany consists entirely in presenting the war as a purely internal European struggle—in spite of the fact that it is already being waged on every continent of the world except South America, where it is still in the "cold" stage.

It also consists in attributing the entire cause of the war to the Treaty of Versailles—which again in Col. Lindbergh's view—and this despite the fact that the Treaty of Versailles was as extinct as the dodo before this war began.

Every effort is made to minimize the revolutionary character of Naziism and to present Russia as a purged nation and no longer menacing world ideology—despite the fact that Premier Molotov on the day that the Russians marched into Poland hailed the triumphal procession of the world revolution.

No Commitment Advisable Now

TO LIFT the embargo on arms by no means indicates that this Nation is going to plunge into the war. This column, wnich advocates the lifting of the embargo and has done so for two years, strongly hopes at the same time that we reserve all further action most carefully, while strengthening our defenses and watching the day-to-day developments. They may be very different from anything at present anticipated. Under no conditions should we commit ourselves as yet.

But we would do very well to take a look at some of the things that are going on within our own borders.

For the worst possible place to have this war fought out would be on our own soil. There are minor riots going on in this country at this minute.

And it would be well for some of those who quote Washington's Farewell Address to read all of it and to recall the conditions under which it was delivered. It was preeminently a denunciation of foreign revolutionaries seeking to divide this country. It is more pertinent today than at any time since it was uttered.

Betts Named Montgomery Fiscal Aide

Rockville Attorney Appointed Counsel To Treasurer; Succeeds Peter

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. 7313 Clark Ave., Silver Spring. Md. Telephone Sligo 1750

Appointment of David Earle Betts, of Rockville, as counsel of the county treasurer was announced yesterday by John B. Diamond, Montgomery County treasurer. He succeeds State Senator Robert Peter, who resigned because of pressure of his private practice.

BETTS

Betts has been practicing law in Rockville for several years and is considered an authority on title searches and other work of a nature akin to that handled in the treasurer's office. He is a native of Chicago, moving to Chevy Chase with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Betts, in 1919. His father is manager of the Association of American Railroads.

The new counsel, who is 28, has resided in Rockville since he married Maude Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Valentine Wilson, in 1936. He attended McKinley Technical High School in Washington, Norwich University, oldest military college in the United States, where he was awarded the degree of bachelor of arts and a second lieutenancy in the United States Cavalry Reserve, and George Washington University, where he was associate editor on the Law Review staff, and was given a degree in law. He was graduated in 1935, later passing both the District of Columbia and the Maryland bar examinations.

He served as title officer with the Central Title & Insurance Co. in Washington from 1934 to 1936, when he joined the staff of the District Title Insurance Co. Both the new counsel and his wife have been active Democratic workers. He is a member of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church and sings in the choir of the Christ Episcopal Church, Rockville.

2 Autos to Every 5 Persons in County

Montgomery County has two automobiles to every five persons in the county, County Treasurer John B. Diamond reported yesterday in a report on the tax base to State Comptroller Millard Tawes.

The national average is one car to every four persons. Montgomery County's 60,000 residents owned 15,500 automobiles in 1934 while today it has 25,000 valued at $5,484,300. A total of 2,000 new automobiles have been registered by county residents since July 1.

Diamond's report shows the same steady growth in other lines. Real and personal property in the county is valued at $105,849,080 for State tax purposes while securities held by county residents are valued at an additional $21,723,160.

"It appears that the State will receive nearly $360,000 from Montgomery County taxpayers this fiscal year," Treasurer Diamond said yesterday.

The 1939 Maryland State tax rate of 23.35 cents per $100 assessed value is calculated o yield $247,187.53 this fiscal year and the reported securities which are subject to tax will realize an additional $32,584.74 through a tax rate of 15 cents per $100, Diamond estimated.

Cattle Judging Honor Captured By Maryland U.

College Park, Md., Sept. 21 (AP).—University of Maryland students know their cows as well as the three R's.

Competing against teams from ten Eastern States, the university's cattle judging team won first place in the Eastern States Exposition in Springfield, Mass., the animal and husbandry department announced today.

The winning team was composed of Mason Butler, of Dickerson; William V. Redding and Robert L. Stevens, of Street; Louis Ahalt, of Middletown. They were coached by Prof. K. L. Turk.

Butler was high man for the contests and also finished first in judging Ayrshires. Redding was tenth and Stevens finished eighteenth. Ahalt is alternate member of the team.

Judging as a team, the university group placed first in the Ayrshires class, third in Brown Swiss, third in Jerseys, fourth in Guernseys and seventh in Holsteins.

Home Demonstration Club to Meet Thursday

The Navy Home Demonstration Club of Herndon, Va., will have its September meeting on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Coleman Shackleford. Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamans, superintendent of nurses in Fairfax County; Miss Lucy Blake, Fairfax County Home Demonstration Club agent, and Miss Belle Burke will discuss home nursing.

The club will make plans for the annual achievement day sometime in October.

Katz Given 2 Years

Judge Joseph C. Mattingly yesterday sentenced Jack Katz, 19, of Hyattsville, Md., to two years in the penitentiary for violation of probation. The youth was indicted by the grand jury in 1938 for grand larceny. He pleaded guilty and was given a suspended sentence.

Neutrality Mail Swamps Senate Postoffice

In the vegetable classes the winners were Mrs. Edward S. Smith, Mrs. Warrie Proffitt, Mrs. James Caudle, Warrie Proffitt, Mrs. Jasper Hunt, Mrs. Walter Proffitt, Mrs. John Griffin, Harry Crosen, Walter Proffitt, James Caudle, Charles Bailey, Maurice W. Fox and Thomas Lesse.

Winners in the flower classes were Miss Jane Nachman, Mrs. Edward W. Smith, Mrs. Walter Proffitt, Miss Mary Virginia Miller, Mrs. Florence Jodzies and Mrs. James Caudle.

Joel Miller won the sweepstakes prize in the farm produce class, the prize having been offered by Mrs. Florence Jodzies. Other winners were Maurice W. Fox, Spencer Lee, Warrie Proffitt, Thomas Lesse, Mrs. Arthur Crosen, Mrs. Jack Clarke, Mrs. Joel Miller and Mrs. Maurice Fox.

In the poultry department Mrs. Arthur Crosen won the sweepstakes, with Coffer Proffitt second.

The 4-H Club sweepstakes prize, offered by Mrs. Edward S. Smith, was won by Miss Catherine Lee. Other winners were Miss Ruth DeJarnette, Miss Thelma Loveless, Miss Dorothy Scott, Miss Wilma Fox, Miss Jane Nachman, Miss Mary Loveless, Miss Thelma Scott, Miss Ella O'Roark, Glenn Albrecht and Spencer Lee.

Judges were Fairfax County Agricultural Agent Joseph E. Beard and J. T. Blevins; members of the board of supervisors from Lee District, Mrs. Edna Davis, Mrs. M. B. Merchant and Mrs. George C. White, all of Burke, Va.

Mrs. Ada Beavers Funeral Conducted

Funeral services for Mrs. Ada Beavers, of Kensington, Md., who died at the Takoma Park Hospital after a long illness, were held yesterday at the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, Bethesda, and were conducted by the Rev. Clarence E. Jones, pastor of the Kensington Baptist Church. Burial was in Western Cemetery, Baltimore.

Mrs. Beavers is survived by a son, Robert Wagner, Kensington; two sisters and two brothers. Before coming to Kensington eight years ago, she lived in Baltimore.

Report System Changed At Alexandria School

A new system of issuing report cards at George Washington High School, Alexandria, Va., will be put into effect this term, Principal Henry T. Moncure announced yesterday. Grades will be released every nine weeks, instead of on a six-week basis as in the past.

The plan also provides that parents of students behind in their work will be notified by their teachers at the half-way mark of of each semester.

Kindergarten Held Daily

A kindergarten for neighborhood children is being held each week day from 8 to 12 in the Parish Hall of St. Paul's Episcopal Chapel at Baileys Cross Roads, Va.

Bus Line Plans Pushed by Group In Montgomery

Failure of the Capital Transit Co. to accept a proposal of residents in the area north of Silver Spring, Md., to inaugurate bus service from Silver Spring to Wheaton and Olney has resulted in negotiations with private concerns to establish the bus line.

William F. Carlin, chairman of a special committee appointed to confer with the company, said yesterday that despite the transit company's unwillingness to accept the route on the basis that it would be unprofitable, the campaign to obtain a bus line will not be halted.

The committee consulted yesterday with Lee Jones, head of the Silver Spring Taxicab Association, on the feasibility of running private buses from the District line to Silver Spring over the route extending through Wheaton, Glenmont, Norbeck and Olney. Jones is considering the proposal and will discuss the matter at a general meetin October 3.

Transit Co. Yields On Bus Changes In Prince Georges

The Capital Transit Co. has withdrawn most of its proposals for reorganizing bus and street car service in Prince Georges County, it was announced last night at a meeting at Hyattsville of the county committee on transportation.

The proposals had been bitterly opposed by civic and municipal groups. The company's plans involved the substitution of shuttle service for the present direct routes to downtown Washington.

C. D. Anderson, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said the only change now advocated by the company was to install shuttle street car service between Beltsville and the new $70,000 terminal at Mount Rainier in nonrush hours. The committee voted to oppose this change also, and will send a delegation to a hearing before the public service commission in Baltimore, September 27.

The committee also announced it had drawn up a plan of its own for improvement of bus service in the metropolitan area. A public hearing on this proposal will be asked, members of the committee said.

Funds to Provide Jobs for Pupils

Principal L. Fletcher Schott, of Richard Montgomery High School, Rockville, Md., has announced that Federal funds have been appropriated to provide jobs for high school graduates who are unemployed.

These positions, he stated, will consist of work in the high school library, office or cafeteria and will have nothing whatsoever to do with relief. The eligibility requirements are that one must be between 18 and 24 years of age, unmarried and without permanent employment.

Alexandria Host Sunday To Holy Name

200 Expected From 75 Units in Virginia And West Virginia

Approximately 200 members representing 75 Holy Name Society branches in Virginia and West Virginia are expected in Alexandria Sunday for the nineteenth annual Diocesan convention at George Washington High School, starting at 10 a. m. The St. Mary's Catholic Church unit is official host.

Preceding the convention, the delegates and visitors will attend mass, to be conducted by the Rev. Thomas E. O'Connell, Diocesan director of the Holy name Society. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Harry Graham, national director of the society, and immediately afterward, breakfast will be served in the high school cafeteria.

City Manager Carl Budwesky will welcome delegates to the morning business session, led by Frank H. Nowland, of Alexandria, Diocesan president. Reports from standing committees and an outline of last year's work will feature the session.

At noon, visiting delegates will be guests of the Alexandria society at luncheon at the high school. The afternoon business session, scheduled to start at 2, will feature an address by the Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Virginia, and the annual election of officers.

After the final business session, the delegates will return to St. Mary's Church, where the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be celebrated.

As a finale, Fitzgerald Council, No. 459, Knights of Columbus, will entertain delegates and visiting members at a reception in the K. of C. Home, at Cameron and St. Asaph streets.

25 Take Electrician Tests

Approximately 25 applicants underwent examination for certificates to operate as journeyman electricians in Alexandria last night at the offices of Electrical Inspector W. Edward Dunn. The examinations were conducted under terms of a new electrical code, which provides that all electricians must secure certificates from the board before continuing work in the city.

Examinations for journeyman applicants will be held again Monday evening at 7:30, Dunn said. No date has been set as yet for the examinations for master electricians.

The ordinance provides that all contractors or others who employ electrical workers must secure master electricans' certificates, while journeymen are classified as those who are employed by the master electricians.

St. Agnes School Opens

St. Agnes School for Girls opened for the 1939-40 term yesterday with a record enrollment of 152 students.

Among new additions to the school is a building for the primary department, constructed during the past summer at a cost of approximately $7,000. A prominent addition to the curriculum is a course in diction and speech, to be conducted by Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, of Washington. Classes will be held once each week, beginning October 2.

Mrs. Appleton Heads P.-T.A. in Arlington

Mrs. Frederick O. Appleton has been elected president of the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School Parent-Teachers Association of Arlington, Va. Othere officers are Mrs. N. W. Biddle, first vice president; Mrs. Charles Walsh, second vice president; Mrs. Lena Wolf, secretary; Mrs. Arthur Orr, treasurer; Mrs. I. W. Ranson, historian, and E. B. Fields, parliamentarian.

Committee chairmen are: Membership, Mrs. George Watt; finance and budget, Mrs. Noland Mitchell; hospitality, Mrs. Franklin Little; publications, Miss Nancy Himes; publicity, Mrs. Ruth Apple.

Silver Spring Library

Due to rapid increase in the patronage of the Silver Spring, Md., Public Library, a new schedule of hours has been announced by Mrs. Louise Ferguson, librarian. Hereafter, the library will be open from 2 p. m. to 9 p. m. every day except Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday it will be open from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Maryland U. Will Have Flying Coeds

Two Girls Already Have Applied For Civil Aeronautics Training Course

The University of Maryland probably will have several flying coeds when the Civil Aeronautics Authority's pilot training course is inaugurated October 1.

Dean S. S. Steinberg, of the College of Engineering, revealed yesterday that two girls already had applied. The class is expected to include 50 or 75 students; and, under the Government's regulations, three per cent may be girls.

Students interested in taking the course have been invited to attend a meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. in the Engineering Auditorium. A representative of the Civil Aeronautics Authority will explain the procedure and requirements for applying.

Freshmen Excluded

Dean Steinberg announced that freshmen students will be excluded. Applicants from the sophomore, junior and senior classes will be selected on the basis of seniority and scholarship, he said.

All applicants must also pass a physical examination and obtain consent of their parents. Students from 18 to 25 years are eligible.

Dean Steinburg said the students will be given a month of ground flying instruction before being permitted to go up. The College Park Airport will probably be used because of its proximity to the university.

The course will be strictly an extracurricular activity. Classes will be held at night twice a week and the student must get his flying experience in his spare time. For this reason, Dean Steinburg explained, it was imperative to select students who rank high academically.

A meeting of Prince Georges County high school teachers will be held at the Hyattsville High School next Friday, Supt. Nicholas Orem announced yesterday.

Speakers will include Earle T. Hawkins, State high school superintendent; R. Floyd Cromwell, State supervisor of educational and vocational guidance, and Dr. James H. Fox, dean of the school of education, George Washington University. A series of round-table discussions will be held.

County Suspends Beer License

The Prince Georges County Board of License Commissioners yesterday suspended for 60 days the "on sale" beer license of Thomas R. Brogan, proprietor of Uncle Tom's Cabin on Edmonston road near Defense Highway. Brogan appealed to the State Board of License Commissioners.

Two applications were approved by the board. They were those of Wendell E. Bailey, of Piscataway, for a beer, wine and liquor license, "off sale" for Boswell's Store at Piscataway and Walter Susini, for a beer, wine and liquor license, "on sale", for the Laurel Diner.

O'Conor Speaks In Prince Georges

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland last night praised the humanitarian work of the Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club. He was a guest at a carnival near Mount Rainier sponsored by the club to raise funds for its camp for underprivileged children.

The Governor was introduced by John S. White, of Colmar Manor, majority floor leader of the House of Delegates. Other notables attending included Francis Petrott, secretary of state for Maryland; Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, of the circuit court; George C. Schmidt and E. M. Jackson, both members of the Legislature from Anne Arundel County. The carnival will continue through Saturday night.

O'Conor Ships Box of Md. Soil To Deflate Idaho Governor

Annapolis, Sept. 21 (AP).—It would be a safe bet that Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor is fully as popular as a bad cold in Idaho today.

Yesterday, Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen of Idaho invited O'Conor—as a neutral governor whose state was not concerned with potato production—to referee a potato digging contest between Bottolfsen and Gov. Lewis O. Barrows of Maine at Blackfoot, Idaho.

O'Conor refused to stay neutral, and forthwith wrote back that Maryland potatoes were fully the equal of those raised in Maine or Idaho. And today he really did sink the harpoon in Idaho pride.

The soil chemists at the University of Maryland reported Garrett County soil was ideally adapted to the production of outstanding seed potatoes. So what does Governor O'Conor do but arrange to have a box of Garrett County soil shipped to Gov. Bottolfsen and Gov. Barrows to "show them what top-quality potato soil looks like."

If this keeps up, the potato-digging contest in Idaho will no doubt include hanging a Maryland governor in effigy as an unscheduled attraction.

Uniform Tax Year Set for Md. Counties

Payer to Get Bill Few Months Earlier Under New Act

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 21.—Another kink will be taken out of Maryland's archaic tax laws next year when a statute providing for a uniform taxable year goes into effect.

It won't make much difference to the tax-payer—he will get his tax bill a few months earlier but he won't have to pay the tax any sooner.

But it will make a difference to the State departments which deal with county funds. J. Milton Patterson, director of State relief, said the measure was "the best thing that could happen to us." Albert W. Ward, secretary to the State tax commission, said it would simplify tax laws.

Difficulty Seen

The State board of education said it would make county financing a little more difficult, especially for rapidly growing counties, but that they would manage to adjust themselves to it.

In the past, different counties have had varying dates for making up a county budget, deciding how much money will be needed, and fixing the county tax rate to provide it. The "levies," the county tax rates, were fixed any time from January to June. As a result, a county might have to levy for relief in June, although it would not know until fall how much was needed and how much the State would furnish.

April 1 Deadline

In the future, all counties will have to fix their levies "as soon as practicable" after January 1, and not later than April 1. Counties will still have their same fiscal years and they are given permission to levy less than a full year if this is necessary to make adjustment. County taxes will not come due until October 1, which will give some taxpayers an extra month.

Ward said the earlier levy would help many Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland farmers, who sell truck crops or tobacco during the spring and summer. In the past they could not pay taxes until later in the summer when the tax bills were sent out. Now their bills will be ready when the money is available.

Baltimore and Harford counties have had the taxable year coinciding with the calendar year for some time, and the practice was put in more recently in Anne Arundel, Garrett and Frederick counties.

Body of Stark, Pioneer Flier, Found in Utah

Alexandrian 6 Miles From Where He Was Forced Down in 1936

A body found in the Wasatch Mountains of Utah has been identified as that of Howard Stark, of Alexandria, Commerce Department inspector and pioneer in the development of blind flying, who disappeared three years ago, it was learned here yesterday.

Stark's body was found by a sheepherder Wednesday, 6 miles from the point where his plane was forced down in a snowstorm while flying from Rock Springs, Wyo., to Salt Lake City, Utah, January 16, 1936, it was reported here. He was identified by a United States marshal of Huntsville, Utah, through a pilot's license found near the body.

A native of Pawling, N. Y., Stark helped develop much of the science of instrument flying, with Eastern Airlines, the Royal Dutch airlines, and in South America. In 1935 he was employed by the Bureau of Air Commerce, now part of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Stark's widow, who remarried, is Mrs. James Williamson, of 1010 Prince street, Alexandria, Va. Also surviving is a son, Carl Stark, freshman at the University of Virginia, and a brother, James Stark, of Pawling. Mrs. Williamson said funeral plans had not been completed.

Arlington Relief Clients Get Cod Liver Oil

With the approach of fall weather, the Arlington County Welfare Board yesterday began distribution of cod liver oil to about 150 needy families on relief, Supt. James Moody announced.

Ten gallons of the oil have been obtained and more will be purchased as needed, Moody said. The distribution of the cod liver oil is an effort to ward off colds, especially among children, he pointed out.

Fairfax Grade School Is Accepted

Building Inspected For Dunn Loring; Viewed by PWA Aide And Board Delegates

Final inspection was made yesterday by representatives of the Public Works Administration and Fairfax County school board on the Dunn Loring Elementary School Building. The building was accepted by J. E. Brunner, resident PWA engineer.

The building, containing five classrooms, auditorium and cafeteria, was constructed by Alvin E. Leake, contractor. It was designed by the State school architect, Raymond V. Long. The cost was $42,000.

The building was made possible by an outright grant from PWA of $18,900.

Brunner said buildings still to be completed include the Fairfax and Mount Vernon High Schools and the Burke and Fairview Elementary Schools.

Falls Church Play Slated

The Falls Church Community Theater has selected "One Mad Night," three-act mystery comedy by James Reach, as its first major presentation of the year. Mrs. J. H. Chambliss, who will direct, will hold tryouts tomorrow at 2:30 in Madison School auditorium. If the cast of seven men and seven women is not filled tomorrow afternoon, the tryouts will be completed Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

The theater will open its third season with a business meeting Monday night, followed by the one act play, "Quiet, Please," directed by James Martin. The cast will include Mrs. W. S. Hinman, jr., Mrs. John Ball, Mrs. J. O. Martin, Loren Pope, Charles Pendleton and John Melby.

Baptist Rally Sunday

Falls Church Columbia Baptist Sunday School will hold its annual rally and promotion day Sunday at 9:45 a. m. Revival services will start Sunday at 11 a. m. and continue each night except Saturday at 7:45. The Rev. Henry W. Tiffany, D. D., of Norfolk, will be in charge. Music will be directed by Urbert P. Gibson.

Girls Now Can See Selves As Others See Them!

'Women' Opens With Palace Midnight Premiere; Ann Sheridan Coming to the Earle Stage; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

It seems inevitable that the bevy of beautiful back-biters who gang up to spell out the title of "The Women" will prattle their way into immediate and overwhelming popularity on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater this week.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film version of the Clare Boothe field day of distaff tongue-wagging tells the same story as the original stage comedy that set New York by the ears; utilizes the same major characters, magnifies every aspect of spectacular and sartorial beauty and is modified only by a slight dilution of the vitriol in some of Miss Boothe's most pungent dialogue. Even so, the substituted words are fully as expressive as those Miss Boothe thought up. Anita Loos and Jane Murfin have performed an uncommonly deft, delirious and intuitively understanding job of adaptation. The fruits of their labors are given explosively effective interpretation by 100 or so of the cinema's most alluring and loquacious lovelies.

BELL

If Mary Haines hadn't given that luncheon for "the girls," everything would have been all wrong. I mean, there would have been no play. But she gave the luncheon and everything was immediately all wronger. Because Sylvia Fowler was there. Sylvia had just heard that Stephen Haines was stepping out with a nifty bit of fragrance from the perfume counter and all did not look well for a happy marriage that had lasted for ten years. That perfectly adorable item of "dearest friend" fidelity is snowballed into a domestic crisis that would have been pretty terrible, had not Mary done a little cagey post-Reno work on her own account.

This entire adventure in girlish garrulity is carried on in purlieus no male is permitted to enter—beauty parlors, femme physical culture plants, private Pullman compartments, powder rooms in swanky night spots and finally the back lot of a divorcee dude ranch on the outskirts of Nevada's machine shop for the removal of the ball-and-chain. You never see a man. You never hear about much else.

Into the middle of all this is plopped a fashion revue, in Technicolor, that dazzles the senses to obscure the fact that it is slowing down the action. The action is of such a nature that it can do with a bit of slowing down, now and again, what with Sylvia and Miriam Aarons, the show girl, staging a rough-and-tumble, hair-pulling-and-leg-biting barnyard brawl. Mary Haines bearding Crystal Allen in her gold-digging den and the like. All very delicate, devastating and mildly demented!

Full of Mild Slanders

No lady will recognize her type in any character but Mary Haines, the play's pillar of virtue, but all types of the enigma known as woman are there—the devoted wife, the gilded gossip, the shallow shopgirl, the acquisitive chorine, the marathon mother, the female gossip-columnist, the knowing novelist, the bewildered small daughter, her sagacious grandmother, the elderly professional bride, even down to the ranch cook, the champion realist of them all.

Norma Shearer does a beautiful piece of work as Mary Haines, ballasting the whole giddy business with a true and telling performance. Joan Crawford, in the infinitely less sympathetic role of Crystal, the seller of scents, likewise contributes an authentic bit of characterization. The comedy burden is borne by Rosalind Russell in one of the "fattest" parts she has had on the screen and one which, it seems to me, she perpetually overplays. Her portrayal, nevertheless, is as amusing as it is extravagant.

Among others in the Amazonian cast, Mary Boland, in love with l'amour; Paulette Goddard, Phyllis Povah, Joan Fontaine, little Virginia Weidler, Lucile Watson, Florence Nash and Marjorie Main do most to make "The Women" the impolite riot it is. George Cukor's direction is by way of being a minor miracle and the settings are so very ultra-ultra that one wonders occasionally if he may not be looking at "The Wizard of Oz."

Last night's "Leap Year," midnight premiere must have given the boys their girls full money's worth!

Despite the fact that this pageant of pulchritude consumes two hours and a quarter of running time, space has been found on the new bill at the Palace for one of John Nesbitt's "Passing Parade" subjects, "Unseen Guardians;" a single-reel devoted to "Filming the Fleet" and the new issue of the "News of the Day." If it is sheer entertainment you are looking for under all those war clouds, you will find it at the corner of Thirteenth and F. And who ever dreamed up that "gentler sex" swindle?

Ann Sheridan, seen on the screen last week in "Angels Wash Their Faces," will come to Washington for a week of "in person" appearances on the stage of the Earle Theater, beginning a week from today, September 29. Announcement of the definite booking was made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers interests in this territory.

The girl who made "Oomph" a household word in 23 languages, including the Scandinavian, is on a brief "vacation" from the Burbank studios after having completed her role with John Garfield in "City of Forgotten Men." Her Washington appearance will inaugurate a brief personal appearance tour that will include only three other cities.

Hot ziggity!

Sidney B. Lust's Bethesda Theater (formerly The Boro) will inaugurate its new Saturday combination vaudeville-and-picture policy tomorrow. Headlining the stage bill will be "Vogues of 1939," a dance revue, featuring Arden and Renard. Supporting acts will be supplied by Raymond Baird, the "saxophone king," and McGrath and Deeds, in a comedy skit, "The High and Low of Any Show." The stage bill will be in addition to the double-feature screen program, consisting of the Three Mesquiteers, in "Heroes of the Hills," and Jane Wyman and Allen Jenkins, in "Torchy Plays With Dynamite."

The vogue of living entertainment, incidentally, is spreading in Bethesda. Phil Lampkin and His Orchestra will be the featured attraction at the Hiser Theater (formerly the State) when it stages its gala reopening, after extensive rebuilding, next Monday night. Earlene King, vocalist, will be heard as Maestro Lampkin's solo artiste.

After an absence of 10 years, Pearl Hauer, the theater's first organist in the old silent days, will return to the console to offer a specially arranged organlogue. Assisting her will be Dave Manley, tenor.

Famous-Last-Words Note

How did it ever get to be THAT time?

Look Out for Those Claws, Mary!

ROSALIND RUSSELL AND NORMA SHEARER as Sylvia Fowler, high priestess of the gossip-mongers, and Mary Haines, principal victim of her wagging tongue, in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of Clare Boothe's sharply barbed comedy of "The Women," the new attraction on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Joan Crawford completes the triumvirate of stars

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 21.—The present-day picture audience is much more intelligent than it used to be in the old days. Now, fine performers always get a hand, regardless of their billing. And not only when they've finished their scenes, but when their faces first pop on the screen. Joseph Schildkraut, Madame Ouspenskaya, Kay Johnson, Reggie Owen, Mary Nash, Russell Hicks, Marjorie Rambeau, Henry Travers, Laura Hope Crews, Jane Darwell, Nigel Bruce, H. B. Warner, George Bancroft—these are the people who sustain, give life and vitality to every picture. Audiences love them, depend upon them, for no matter how small the part, they rise above it and give of themselves. Producers at last realize this—hence Spring Byington's being cast as Shirley Temple's mother in "The Blue Bird." Spring's one of the grandest actresses we've ever had here. Funny thing, she was all set for "First Love" with Deanna Durbin, when Jones Family schedule intruded. It was then they got Leatrice Joy, and after a few days' work part was cut down to a bit.

HOPPER

Did you know that it costs $500 if you sing "Happy Birthday to You" in a picture?

Did you ever stop to think of the training a telephone operator goes through to get that wonderful cadence in her voice for sad news and the gay lilt when she relays a happy message? It's highly specialized work.

Hugh Herbert sings for the first time in "Little Accident" also tries to teach Baby Sandy. Song is "This Is The Way We Wash Our Clothes." And they go to a laundry to take shots. Hugh plays Miss Bertha Teedsley, an expert who runs a baby page for a newspaper. He's not proud of that part.

In talking to Ray Massey as "Lincoln" he told me that on his first tour of "Abe" in Washington, D. C., no colored people were allowed to see it! Which makes us wonder what we fought a war for? It takes a long time for prejudices to die.

Leo Carrillo's preparing his ranch for a coming out party for Irvin Cobb. It's a lovely place with babbling brook called "Tears of Santa Monica," the red-brown house with long, cloistered walk, a room of mementos which equals that of Will Rogers. And a 16-month Palamino colt so full of mischief you'd think he was a screen star. It will take at least a year to train him. Then I'm thinking both he and Leo will be ready to run for Governor.

Edgar Bergen told me his reception in Honolulu was so wonderful that for the first time, Charlie had no ad-lib ready. He's already got a lease on a house over there.

Like the Arabs, the Cobina Wrights have "folded their tents—and as silently slipped away." 'Twas money trouble—our producers didn't offer poor little Cobina enough to linger in Hollywood.

Marlene tells me she gets very little fan mail compared to other stars. Explains that hers is adult appeal. It's adolescents who write fan letters. Wonder if those epistles are still a factor at option time?

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 21.

STRENGTH: The March of Time soon will release a newsreel about the British navy. In preparing this screen story the March of Time camera men exposed 30,000 feet of film—showing, for American consumption, the detailed operations of this, the greatest navy in the history of the world . . . The film was brought to this country on the last trip made by the Nazi boat, the Europa.

CELEBRATION: The American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, commonly known as ASCAP, arranged to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary by holding a music festival in New York City . . . The popular songs were to have been played by such famous orchestras as Paul Whiteman's and Fred Warning's. . . The Boston Symphony was to have played the classical music . . . Because the Boston Symphony is a non-union organization, Local 802 of the Musicians' Union ordered its members not to perform—and so the festival probably will be called off.

NECESSITY: William Shirer, the Berlin correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, telephoned the CBS offices here yesterday to discuss his broadcasts . . . "By the way," Shirer warned when he was asked about the reaction to the Soviet-Nazi pact, "I'm growing a beard—but there's nothing politically significant about it. It's just that no shaving cream is being sold in Berlin."

SWANK: Lionel Stander had an appointment in Washington last week-end and decided to travel by car . . . Stander invited Civil Service Commissioner Paul Kern to accompany him, and Kern volunteered to share the expenses . . . Stander arrived at Kern's office—driving a $21,000 bulletproof Isotta-Fraschini which once had belonged to Owney Madden . . . They drove a few miles and discovered that the heavy car was consuming one gallon of gas for every 3 miles. "That's too expensive a way to go to Washington," Kern announced, left the car—and went home.

OFFER: Belle Livingston, who reigned in the night clubs during the prohibition days, went to the French Consul's office here and volunteered her services . . . She exhibited a citation presented to her by the French government for the hospital service she rendered during the World War. . . . "I'm ready to do the same thing again," Belle declared . . . "It may be ungallant of a Frenchman to ask," the official apologized, "but how old are you?" . . . Belle Livingston is 73 . . . "France," she was told, "has no urgent need for your services—as yet."

QUERY: When Ben Marden, proprietor of the Riviera, appeared before the Federal Grand Jury to be questioned about alleged gambling at his night club he was asked to name some of the customers there—but he couldn't remember . . . "Haven't you got some of their checks?" the interrogator asked . . . "Yes, I have," Marden confessed, "but they're checks which bounced—and the customers couldn't have been very important if their checks bounced."

EDUCATION: The Encyclopedia Britannica invited Arthur Murray to write an article about modern dancing for the 1940 edition . . . "Make it a point," the editors advised, "to trace the origins of recent jitterbug dance steps" . . . Murray has completed the article, and it will contain descriptions of the Shag and the Lindy Hop. No reference, however, will be made to their origin. It would not do, Murray decided, for such a staid publication to inform its wide-eyed knowledge-hungry readers that these swing steps originated in houses of ill-fame.

CHATTER: Sidney Kingsley signed a new contract with Paramount. It's a three-way pact, calling for him to produce, direct and write . . . Sam Leibowitz has been invited to succeed the late Clarence Darrow, as counsel to the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws . . . Howard Lindsay has decided to play the role of Father in his dramatization of "Life With Father" . . . Former Alderman Walter R. Hart, who retired from politics two years ago, will be one of the Democratic candidates in Brooklyn for city councilman. The other designees will be Sharkey, di Giovanni, Vogel, Cashmore and McCarthy.

DEFEAT: Orson Welles' new movie will include a brief but important role which few of the Hollywood stars would accept. Welles finally decided upon Dita Parlo, whose performance in "Grand Illusion" excited all the film reviewers . . . Welles finally succeeded in locating Miss Parlo, who was in Paris, where she had just completed a new movie. Miss Parlo was delighted to accept the opportunity, but the French government won't issue a visa to her. She's practically interned—because she's a German citizen.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 21 (1935).—The war-time economy trend at the studios has its moments. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is rounding up all the mid-time cowboy heroes who are not under contract—William S. Hart, Tom Mix, Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey, Buck Jones and dozens of others who did fast riding in the days when the chase over hill and dale was the piece de resistance in all these thrillers.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The lads are wanted for "Go West" which will star the Marx Brothers. Most of the picture will be made outdoors in God's country and while it is not estimated that it will be one of these lavish million dollar spectacles, it ought to be chuck-full of excitement for all that. Sylvan Simon, who megaphoned "The Dancing Co-Ed," has been handed the directorial assignment. Young Simon came from New York's Federal Theater project and is regarded as the Garson Kanin of the M-G-M lot.

Cecil B. DeMille has never liked the word economy. It irks him. Even in the days when Gloria Swanson and Leatrice Joy were his top stars, he used to build bigger and better bathtubs than his competitors. Now he's going to build his biggest production, all because he hates the sound of the word economy. His next picture, 'Northwest Mounted Police,' he very frankly says, will be the most expensive picture he has ever made. It will be filmed in Technicolor and he is now assembling a cast, headed by Joel McCrea and Robert Preston, with two important women stars yet to be chosen. This is C. B.'s sixty-sixth picture and he and his entire troupe take off on a long jaunt which will also add up to a pretty penny.

Ursula Parrott's play, "For All of Our Lives," will have Herbert Marshall as its star when it opens in New York this coming season. Bart, who has been conversing with John Wildberg, producer of his former wife's drama, every day at the Beverly Hills Hotel, has finally okayed the contract. Wildberg is still trying to persuade Loretta Young to try the stage, which would be interesting if she consents, since she is essentially a movie product, never having had any training before the footlights. But our movie folk are great draws in the big town—and why not?

Apparently I put my neck out when I summed up the Academy Award prospects for 1939. Janice M. Swarner, Cleveland literary critic, says: "For many years now, I have been depending upon you to set Hollywood right with the world. Imagine my surprise to find in your column appearing in the local Plain Dealer these words: 'We can't keep handing top honors to Bette Davis every year.' In the name of heaven, why can't you, if she keeps on giving such obviously surpassing performances? Are we to infer that acknowledgment of an amazing genius becomes monotonous? You can't seriously mean that you think Greer Garson's comparatively brief appearance in 'Mr. Chips,' excellent though it was, compares in any way with the sustained excellence of Miss Davis in 'Dark Victory' or 'The Old Maid.'

"As for Rosalind Russell's Sylvia in 'The Women.' That is a triumph for the casting director rather than Miss Russell's ability as an actress. The part was tailor-made for her—it personifies the clever brittleness which is a goodly part of Rosalind Russell herself.

"Don't, I beg of you, desecrate your own critical ability by lending the weight of your name to any movement against the repeated recognition of the acknowledged actress of her generation."

Who's next? The discussion is interesting.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Eddie Albert and Jane Bryan are keeping pace with the thermometer; Wes Ruggles has taken a house at Malibu and is giving out with a big party Saturday night; Sam Goldwyn is the hero of Hollywood since he said that the solution to the trouble here is not firing people. My telephone rang constantly from old timers who expressed appreciation of Sam's stand; Spencer Tracy is spending a few days at a local hotel, but don't get excited—it's because he had a few retakes to make and it was too tough commuting in the heat.

Laura La Plante is back in town renewing old acquaintances; Bob Burns' wife is only now sitting up in a wheel chair—she was so badly hurt when she fell on the deck of their yacht; Adrienne Ames and Alex Tiers, an interesting twosome at the Seven Seas; Hollywood continues to be amazed at the Addison Randall-Louise Stanley mixup. After two matrimonial splitups they were at the Tropics all smiles; Brian Donley, a heat victim, was rushed to the hospital; poor Al Wertheimer, who was so seriously injured in the automobile accident that killed Mrs. Eddie Mannix, had a major operation today.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Earle Star Stricken

Stricken ill in New York yesterday, Garfield Swift, barytone, well known in Washington, late last night was forced to cancel his engagement to appear on the Earle Theater stage for the week beginning today. He recently completed a five-week engagement as guest artist with Ben Bernie at the Astor Hotel in New York. His marriage to Miss Elizabeth R. Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Smith Hempstone, wife of Capt. Hempstone, U. S. N., took place on September 16.

His place on the bill will be taken by Lysbeth Hughes, for the past six years soloist with Horace Heidt's Orchestra. Mr. Swift will appear at the Earle at a later date.

20,000 Here To Celebrate Yom Kippur

24 Hours of Fasting And Meditation Start At Sundown Today

As the sun sets today on the Nation's Capital, 20,000 Jews will join world brethren in welcoming their most sacred occasion—Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

Leaving their homes following the evening meal, they will file into the holy hush of synagogues, where the low and solemn chanting of the Kol Nidre rites will open a 24-hour period of fasting and meditation.

Among the festivals evolved from an ancient harvest feast, Yom Kippur, which falls on the tenth day of Tishri, first month of the Jewish calendar, was marked with great ceremony in the days of the second temple at Jerusalem. Conducted by the High Priest of Israel, and requiring a week's preparation, services drew pilgrims from all corners of the globe.

Yom Kippur services, which will end at sundown tomorrow, will be centered principally at the Washington Hebrew Congregation, Adas Israel, Tifereth Israel, Beth Sholom, B'Nai Israel, Ohev Sholom, Southeast Hebrew Congregation, Beth El, Kesher, Talmud Torah and other synagogues. Rites also are planned for the Hebrew Home for the Aged, the Hebrew Travelers Sheltering Society, and for the Jewish patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital and other institutions.

Ventilating Engineers To Resume Sessions

The Washington chapter of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers announced yesterday regular meetings will be resumed October 11. Officials said that the chapter had honored its first president, Col. W. A. Danielson, now in the Canal Zone, in a meeting at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Inquiry Witness Evading Subpena, Dies Declares

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat-Texas), of the House committee investigating un-American activities, said yesterday Charles Recht, a New York lawyer and "an important witness sought for questioning, is still evading service of a subpena."

Dies said he hoped Recht would put in an appearance in time to permit his examination tomorrow.

Recht was said to be a "preliminary witness" who would pave the way for "a complete story of the tremendous amount of Soviet money that found its way into the United States." Dies declined to identify the witness to follow Recht.

Both Sides Meet On Truck Strike

Representatives of the Dump Truck Drivers Union, Local No. 639, and of the Operators' Association held seperate meetings yesterday, both sides seeking settlement of the strike which began September 12.

No statements were issued, however, and there was no indication of the date of the next joint meeting. Approximately 400 truck drivers are involved. Their walkout has resulted in the tieup of construction operations on many large building projects, Government and private.

Pendergast Offers To Settle With U. S.

By the Associated Press

Tom J. Pendergast, former Kansas City political boss, was reliably reported yesterday to have offered to settle for $200,000 the $700,000 back tax claim of the Treasury against him.

It was in connection with this claim that Pendergast recently was convicted of tax law violations and sentenced to 15 months in Leavenworth penitentiary.

Heat Kills 39 On West Coast

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 21 (AP).—Thirty-six deaths in the Los Angeles area and three in San Francisco were attributed to a six-day heat wave as California temperatures today once more hit above 100.

The temperature here touched 104. It was 102 at San Diego and 107 at Oceanside. Prostrations in Los Angeles exceeded 200.

President May Spend Week-End at Hyde Park

President Roosevelt has made tentative plans to leave today for a week-end at his Hyde Park (N. Y.) home to help celebrate belatedly his mother's eighty-fifth birthday which was yesterday.

Italian Press Campaigns for 'A Hitler Peace

Rome Concerned Over German and Soviet Attitude on Rumania

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Sept. 21.—The Italian newspapers opened up again today full blast on Hitler's behalf for peace in Europe, despite Chamberlain's clair statement that England will fight on. This is presumably an oblique method of saying that Mussolini would be glad to use his good offices for peace if he were asked to do so, and it may even mean that he has a definite proposal to offer, supposing the Allies wanted to hear it.

There is great excitement here about the assassination of Calinescu, but judgment is being reserved until more precise news comes in. Although the first reports are somewhat reassuring, the Italians are keenly concerned about Rumania. Some days ago, they expected the Germans to make a move from the outside, but obviously the same results could be obtained by an internal overthrow. If the Germans can get everything they want without invading Rumania, that would be preferable for them.

Worried About Bessarabia

The Italians are even more worried about the possibility of Russia taking Bessarabia, but the best information available now is that the Soviets do not plan to take action under present circumstances.

The Popolo d'Italia, Mussolini's newspaper, leads the great peace campaign today with a two-column front page editorial. All the newspapers merely repeat the same argument.

"After a useless war of three weeks," says the Popolo d'Italia, "the Poland of Versailles is finished. As everyone could see, the guaranty was not a guaranty. Why, therefore, have new mourning and new destruction? A war appears today like nonsense. Let Poland be reconstituted not like a new Austria but in its legitimate national confines. A Poland of the Poles will arise without Germans, without Little Russians, Ukrainians or Lithuanians. And it will be a relief for Europe. Extremists and democratic rulers can say what they please but the truth is that the people are beginning to reflect for themselves. The people are thinking that they are facing impregnable walls of steel bristling with artillery."

The Style Is Duce's

The style of this editorial is so much like Il Duce's that many think that he must have written it. The argument has some subtle differences with yesterday's. Those two words "useless" and "senseless" appear in all editorials and it is clear from the Popolo d'Italia that England is being told she is beaten and had better give up. For the rest one finds the German arguments in all their nakedness.

If Chamberlain and the British considered Hitler's speech as historical distortion and a subject of indignation and rejection they certainly can feel the same way about Italy's open attitude in the press. One may well ask why, after having been so friendly and cautious with regard to the allies, Italy is now—at least in her newspapers—playing Germany's game? It does not mean that Italy is joining Germany in the war but it does mean that Italy wants to see the war end now as Germany wants it to end. If it cannot end that way then Italy is resolved to go on with her neutrality.

Swiss Reject Bids for Partial Demobilization

Berne, Sept. 21 (AP).—The army high command today rejected requests for partial demobilization of the Swiss army, it was learned authoritatively.

Concentrations of other nation's troops along the border forced the army to remain ready for "any eventuality," the source reported.

Rejection of the demobilization proposel was a victory for President Philippe Etter, who closed parliament with a warning that Switzerland stands ready to resist any invasion.

Opponents of President's Policies

Shortly before President Roosevelt appeared at the Capitol yesterday to make his opening address to the special session of Congress, 17 Senators opposed to repeal of the arms embargo, met to plan their strategy of opposition. Leaving the meeting, Senator Gerald Nye (left), Republican, of North Dakota, and Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican, of California, in whose office the meeting was held.

Frankfurter Says We Can't Be Neutral

Non-Coombatant, Yes, But it Is Our Duty To Think, Justice Avers

Boston, Sept. 21 (AP).—Felix Frankfurter, associate justice of the Supreme Court, tonight told Americans they cannot be "neutral in thought" when the bases "of our common life, our entire civilization" are challenged.

Justice Frankfurter spoke at a banquet at Ford Hall Forum, liberal discussion group which awarded him its annual gold medal for "preeminent public service."

"We can," the associate justice said, "agree to be noncombatant. But it is our right and duty to have thoughts on issues involving human destiny.

"No man who thinks really is neutral," said the Vienna-born justice, as he termed neutrality "one of those slogans and catch words that cover up thought."

Referring to a recent speech in which he said Adolf Hitler "made it an accusation against the democracies that they permitted freedom of speech and freedo mof the press," Frankfurter demanded:

"How can we be neutral on an issue like that unless we close our minds to the cardinal, basic doctrines of our civilization?"

Americans, he said, must be ready to uphold a civilization which denies "that reason is a farce and force alone has validity."

He expressed "deepest gratitude for thetruth of the President's remarks" in his first radio speech on neutrality recently, in which he said the President pointed out that American people cannot be neutral in thought.

He urged a "passionate belief in the basic faith of a democratic society, and a moral worth for the ordinary man and woman."

"One must," he said, "utter the simple faith which we believe."

Gdynia Renamed After the Goths

Berlin, Sept. 21 (AP).—Gdynia, Polish-built Baltic seaport captured by German forces in the invasion of Poland, was disclosed today to have been renamed Gotenhafen by the Nazis. Gotenhafen, translated literally, means "harbor of the Goths." The Goths were an ancient Teutonic race who originally lived between the Vistula and Elbe rivers.

Pope Adopts Ascetic Life in Peace Prayers

Pius Sleeps on Floor, Wakes Often to Ask God for War's End

By the Associated Press

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Sept. 21.—Pope Pius has adopted a regimen of monastic severity and self-denial as a personal offering to God that peace be restored to Europe, persons close to the Papel household said today.

While the pontiff lives amidst artistic splendor at the summer palace here, his daily routine was described as almost as austere as that of a Trappist monk.

The means he has taken to beseech God for peace are not suprising to those who know him best, since before his election to the papacy he had hoped to end his career by retirement to a monastery.

Informants said the Pope spends long hours in prayer, especially addressing supplications to the Virgin Mary. He endures long fasts and lives mainly on green vegetables.

He no longer sleeps in a bed but on the floor of his little bedroom without a mattress, these persons said. He arises several times during the night from his tormented sleep and goes to an adjoining chapel for prayer.

The Pope also rises early each morning to say a mass for peace.

The war has weighed heavily on the pontiff and these days his face is more ashen in color than ever and his expression is one of worry.

Otherwise, however, his health is unchanged, persons who see him frequently say.

Germans Lead Allies 3 to 1 in U-Boat War

Kensington Court of South American-African Trade Latest Victim

By the Associated Press

Sinking of the British freighter Kensington Court yesterday sent the known wartime shipping losses to 43 and gave Germany's U-boats a 3-to-1 lead in their fight against the British and Frenen.

At least 27 English vessels have plunged to the bottom. Germany has lost nine, including three wrecked on shore, three victims of mines (possibly their won) and three destroyed by British warships.

Neutral losses stood at 6, French 1.

The tonnage loss, exclusive of valuable cargoes, rose to 204,475 tons. Loss in lives, including the estimated 515 on the torpedoed British aircraft carrier Courageous, stood at 722.

An unconfirmed report from Malmo, Sweden, said the German auxiliary schooner Lianne had been destroyed by a mine near Falsterbo on September 4. The 125-ton steel vessel was built in 1914, was 92 feet long and owned by E. Waller, of Hamburg.

In announcing the destruction of the Kensington Court, a 4,863-ton ship in the African-South American trade, the British ministry of information said it was the first case in which an entire ship's crew (34) had been rescued by flying boats. Two Royal Air Force patrol boats effected the rescue somewhere in the Atlantic.

Owned by the Court Line, of London, the ship left Rosaria, Argentine, August 15 for Dakar, West Africa. It was believed she had been diverted from her course and ordered to England.

Other developments:

Berlin reports (unofficial) announced for the third time in a week that the missing liner Bremen had reached Murmansk, Russian port on the Arctic Ocean, and the British admiralty called "absurd" reports in London that the $20,000,000 ship had been captured by English warships.

Marseille authorities removed 53 Germans from the Italian liner Virgilio, bound for South America.

England announced she had detained approximately 200 vessels for a contraband search. Eighty were released with their entire cargoes.

British Act Against Shortage Of Shells Like Last War's

Lack of Such Ammunition Caused Cabinet Shake-up in World Conflict; Halifax Stresses Victory as Final Goal

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 21.—Parliament heard government assurances today that Britain's World War shell shortage would not be repeated, while Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax warned against losing sight of the main objective—victory.

Supply Minister Leslie Burgin said 700 firms were making shells for the British forces and that war supplies worth 70,000,000 pounds (about $280,000,000) had been ordered since the fight with Germany started.

Six thousand five hundred contractors were working for the ministry of supply, he added, and a number were being added each day.

Country Made 13 Districts

Shortage of shells for Britain's army in France in the World War caused a government shakeup.

The supply minister further stated that the country had been divided into 13 districts, each under a trained engineer, to "insure that the whole capacity of the country is utilized."

Arthur Greenwood, acting opposition leader, criticized the latter setup as bureaucratic and said "the dead hand of officialdom is going to throttle the national effort."

Lord Halifax's statement was made in the House of Lords in commenting on Poland's failure to receive effective help in time from Britain and France.

Poland a "Major Tragedy"

He spoke of Poland's position as "one of the major tragedies of the last few weeks," and added:

"We must not lose sight of our main objective in this war—victory—and we must not undertake anything that does not directly contribute to that victory."

Yesterday Prime Minister Chamberlain warned against undertaking military projects which did not have an excellent chance of success.

King Receives Ministers

Other developments of the day included:

King George received Lord Halifax, Burgin and Defense Minister Lord Chatfield.

War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha reported British troops in France were in "fine condition and good heart."

Home Secretary Sir John Anderson warned those complaining of inconveniences of the nightly blackout that the menace of air raids was "just as threatening as ever."

Jutland Is Quiet After Battle Scare

Frederickshaven, Denmark, Sept. 21 (AP).—Inhabitants along the east coast of Jutland, strategic point for belligent navies, settled down to their tranquil existence today after a scare over reports of heavy cannonading at sea.

There was no report of a naval battle in the Baltic, and some of the fishermen who reported hearing heavy gun fire yesterday decided the acoustics around the islands were playing them tricks.

War Dept. Advertises For Army Dentists

The War Department announced yesterlay that an examination for appointment in the Regular Army Dental Corps will be held Feb. 12-17, 1940, in connection with an expansion of the Army medical department recently authorized by Congress.

Graduates of accredited dental schools between the ages of 22 and 31, who have had at least 23 months practices are eligible.

Leftover Bread Gives the Cook Many Opportunities to Fashion Delicious Tid-Bits

Ruth Fullmer Wins Prize For Apple Brown Betty

Diminutive Doughnuts Also Presented As Delicacy From Stale Loaves, Along With Chocolate Crumb Waffles in Contest

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

ANY SPECTOR of failure cease haunting the kitchen if "fail-proof" recipes are used. Some housewives seem to have a talent for misunderstanding recipes. A cook one time read a recipe saying, "Put a cupful of water into the pan of meat. She put the water in the pan IN the cup, and the result was charred meat.

Before any of the recipes in this week's recipe contest won its way to the finals, it had to meet four specific requirements. They were: Is it easy to follow? Is it thrifty? Is it sure to turn out well? Is it good to eat?

These requirements were found in the winning recipes, and the recipes certainly tempt one to go out into the kitchen and learn how pleasant it is to cook with stale bread. Left-over bread is not a social outcast, but rather equips the cook with a starting point for dishes for all occasions.

A Song of Bread Crumbs

Miss Ruth Fullmer, 2219 Minnesota avenue southeast, Washington, wins the first prize of $3.00 with her recipe for Apple Brown Betty. This nutritious, thrifty and easily prepared dessert is one children and grown-ups can enjoy. Brown Betties may also be made with other fruits, such as peaches, apricots and other fruits. The following is Miss Fullmer's recipe:

Apple Brown Betty

Combine, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup water, ¼ teaspoon salt and the grated rind of 1 orange and simmer for 10 minutes. Mix ¼ cup melted shortening with bread crumb mixture. Place a layer in the bottom of a buttered baking dish. Cover with a layer of sliced apples, alternating with the layers of crumbs and apples, finishing with the crumbs. Three cups of apples and 2 cups bread crumbs should be used. Add 1 teaspoon lemon juice to the sirup made of sugar and water. Pour it over the apples and crumbs. Cover and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 minutes. Uncover during the last 15 minutes to brown. Serve with cream or sauce. Serve 8.

Sophisticated Tidbits

Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2025 Eye street northwest, Washington, D. C., has a unique idea for making diminutive doughnuts, from bread crumbs. Mrs. Orange writes that these midget doughnuts are especially good when unexpected company drops in, for it takes only a few minutes to make them. For this use of bread crumbs Mrs. Orange wins the second prize of $2.00. She gives two versions of the doughnuts.

Mrs. Orange

Midget Doughnuts

Cut left-over bread into 1½ inch cubes. Roll in sweetened condensed milk, fry in deep fat, 370 degrees, until golden brown. Drain on brown paper and roll while hot in shredded coconut. The bread cubes may also be dipped in egg and milk, fried in deep fat to a golden brown, drained on brown paper and rolled in cinnamon and sugar.

The Orange Idea

Cooking is more fun if you try your hand now and then at fashioning new recipes. Miss Helen Murphy, 2515 Thirteenth street northwest, Washington, fashioned an Orange Crumb Pie from bread crumbs and wins a $1.00 prize for it. The following is Miss Murphy's recipe for making this delicious, thrifty dessert:

Miss Murphy

Crumb Pie

Prepare oven-dried stale bread crumbs. Add 2 cups fine, sifted crumbs to 1½ cups hot water. Add ¾ cup butter. To 2 beaten egg yolks, add 1 cup sugar, 1-3 cup orange juice, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 tablespoon grated orange rind. Combine the 2 mixtures and pour into a crumb crust and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees. Cover with meringue made of 3 egg whites and 6 tablespoons powdered sugar. Bake 15 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees.

Crumb Crust—For a 9-inch pie, rub 1-3 cup butter into 1½ cups fine bread crumbs and 2 tablespoons sugar. Pat firmly on the bottom and sides of the pie pan.

Onward With Griddle Cakes

Pancakes when made according to the recipe of Mrs. E. T. Hiehle get beyond the breakfast table and are in the luncheon class. For this luncheon suggestion, developed from bread crumbs, Mrs. Hiehle wins a $1.00 award. This variety of the pancake when served with bacon curls makes an interesting noon-time service.

Mrs. Heihle

Luncheon Pancakes

Peel potatoes and grate or put through very fine knife or food chopper to obtain ¾ cup of potato. Add ¾ cup bread crumbs to potato, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 1 cup scalded milk. Mix well. Then add 2 beaten eggs and 2 tablespoons melted butter. Mix until well blended and fry like griddle cakes on a greased surface. Place bacon slice on rack under broiler. Broil until crisp and brown, turning once. Roll each slice up and garnish crumb pancakes with the curls.

Four In One

Miss Mary Louise Cameron, 2101 Sixteenth street northwest, wins a $1.00 award with a recipe for Chocolate Crumb Waffles which are colored like a brown oak leaf, yet tender within and crisp without. Here is a waffle that will speak to hungry folks in an unmistakable language. It answers the four requirements in a very charming manner.

Chocolate Crumb Waffles

Combine 1 cup dry bread crumbs, 3 tablespoons cocoa, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup sugar and 3 teaspoons baking powder. To 3 beaten egg yolks, add 1¼ cups milks, ½ cup melted butter and 1 teaspon vanilla. Fold in 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake on hot waffle iron. Serve with ice cream.

Ironing Advice Offered For Lace, Embroidery

Laces and embroideries should always be ironed on the wrong side and covered with a cloth to avoid iron catching in mesh of the lace. A Turkish towel or pad should be placed underneath the embroidery so that the pattern will stand out.

Runners, scarfs and small covers are best not folded and should be ironed on the wrong side until they are dry. Then they should be rolled on paper rolls to prevent creases. The cardboard bases of paper towels purchased on a roll are excellent for certain widths of doilies; mailing tubing can be bought in almost any length and diameter

Zestful Dish Made From Noodles

A delicious dish made from packaged and canned goods is a noodle dish flavored with chicken soup and further enhanced by onions, parsley, olive oil and celery. It is as good as its name is intriguing.

Noodles Neopolitan

Heat 4 tablespoons olive oil in a frying pan. Pour in 2 tablespoons chopped onions, 1-3 cup minced celery and 2 tablespoons minced parsley and let simmer for 5 minutes. Add 3 cups cooked noodles and cook them until they are slightly brown. Stir constantly. Add ½ cup canned chicken soup, ¼ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon paprika and let simmer for 10 minutes.

Delicious Apple Brown Betty as made by Ruth Fullmer, school girl (inset, right), is not only a thrifty dessert made from left-over bread, but is also a family dessert which can be served to children as well as grown-ups. A fruit sauce to garnish the pudding will increase its attractiveness and palatability

Trip With Baby Means Travel Like Royalty

No Need Now to Be a Stay-at-Home, Author Points Out

IF YOU are staying at home because you are afraid to attempt a lengthy trip with baby, you should read Eleanor Gale Carroll's recent book, "Is There a Baby in the House?" This authoress has observed that parents traveling with children are given all the courtesies of traveling royalty.

She explains the preparations for train, plane, bus, boat and motor travel, in one chapter. Since food is a major problem in traveling with children this is discussed in the chapter, "Travel, Travel, Toil and Trouble." She declares that the food question is taken care of adequately. Some railroads provide a nurse-stewardess service and in this way the nurses who are wise in the ways of entertaining and feeding children, prepare baby's formula and even watch baby while mother enjoys her dinner. Special menus for children are made on most trains, or half portions are provided.

Since fresh milk is put on board the train at large cities, the nurse-stewardess will make up baby's formula, and the porter will keep the baby's bottle in the refrigerator until feeding time, when he will heat the bottle and bring it elegantly wrapped in a towel. For the pre-schooler's diet the railroads have almost a complete selection. Half portions of cooked cereals, baked potatoes, green vegetables, well-cooked meat, fruits and, of course, plenty of milk are offered on grown-ups' menus, and the children's menus have even more variety.

Mrs. Carroll's baby book, published by Doubleday Doran, is a charming treasury of first aids to parents, for countless questions are answered wisely and amusingly. Here is a baby book so practical in advice and clever in instruction that it will be a great aid to young mothers.

Campfire Steak Adds To Enjoyment of Hike

If you are going to take a hike, pack a robust meal. Campfire steak, cowboy potatoes, corn in husks, chilled tomatoes, jumbo buns, dill pickles, pears and hot coffee will make up such a menu. Make the campfire steak by the following recipe:

Campfire Steak

Mix 2-3 cup flour, one teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon celery salt, ½ teaspoon onion salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard. Pound mixture into two pounds of round steak, ½ inch thick. Brown the steak in hot fat and cook until tender. Serves six.

Menus for Fall Need Sparkle And Substance

May Be Planned To Aid Appetite, Also Meet Budget

When fall arrives with its orange, bronze and russet coloring, and its crisp, stimulating air it calls for meals that have zest and sparkle as well as a little more staying quality. The following menu and accompanying recipe can cope with the most ambitious appetites and still not strain the family food budget.

Menu.

Spiced Tomato Juice
Liver Baked in Sour Cream
Hashed Brown Potatoes Buttered Spinach
Hot Rolls Butter
Green Bean and Onion Salad
Grape Souffle with Custard Sauce
Coffee Milk

Liver Baked in Sour Cream

Dip 1½ pounds sliced calf's liver in flour well seasoned with salt and pepper. Fry in butter until brown on both sides and place in a buttered baking dish. Mix 1½ cups thick sour cream and 2 tablespoons flour until smooth and season with salt. Pour over the liver, cover and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Uncover and bake for about 25 minutes longer.

Using Up the Bacon

If you have any bacon left over from breakfast, cut it into small pieces with scissors and add it to muffin or cornbread. The flavors go very well together.

Blended Soups Give Speedy, Varied Dishes

May Be Served At Bridge Luncheon And Supper Parties

CANNED SOUPS are ideal time savers. They are delicious as they come from the can, but they may be varied in endless ways. To get yourself in the know, serve smartly simple bridge luncheons and suppers to your guests. Main course mergers like soup-salad-sandwich combinations make perfect partners for quick and easy feasting.

While a foursome is clearing off the final rubber of bridge, hustle out to the kitchen for a little last minute magic of your own. Twirl your trusty can opener over a tin of ready-to-serve soup. Ferret salad-sandwiches which have been made ahead of time from the refrigerator. Brew a pot of strong coffee, then bring on the feast. Fat bowls full of ruddy color cream of tomato soup merged with cream of celery, garnished with chips of toasted golden almonds, beautiful big servings of chicken salad sandwiches trimmed with old-fashioned fresh cucumber pickle slices, and cups of steaming hot coffee.

There are many soup mergers to try with various types of sandwiches. The following are some of the combinations in the hurry-up culinary art of soup blending: Potage Velour made from chicken noodle soup and cream of tomato soup; Cooperstown soup made of cream of tomato soup and vegetable soup; Berkshire soup made of corn chowder and cream of tomato soup; Tomato Pepper Pot, made of cream of tomato soup and pepper pot soup; Traymore soup, made of cream of celery soup and cream of tomato soup; Puree Mongole is made of cream of tomato soup and cream of green pea soup. The following is the recipe for making the Puree Mongole.

Puree Mongole

Combine and stir the contents of 1 can of condensed tomato soup and 1 can of condensed pea soup. Add 2 cups top milk or use 1 cup of stock and 1 cup of cream. Heat these ingredients well. Flavor with salt and pepper if needed. One tablespoon of sherry may be added to each portion. Serve the soup sprinkled with ¼ cup grated cheese.

Insecticide on Baseboard

If you are trying to exterminate small insects from around the baseboards, put the insecticide in a small oil can. The fluid can then be easily squirted directly into the cracks more effectively than if a spray is used or the liquid poured from a bottle.

Vine Awning Hint

When considering vine awnings, here are some tips: Use a gas-pipe framework and a vine that runs more to leaf than to woody structure. That means Ivy or Virginia Creeper among the permanent growths, or to a quick annual like morning glory.

Citrus Topping

Add some orange marmalade and a little grated lemon rind to confectioner's frosting and as a topping for tiny tea cakes, so popular for summer serving. Summer seems to call for cakes and cookies that are more tart than those served in winter.

Thousands of Society Visitors to Capitol Lighten Grim Atmosphere of Neutrality Session

Everybody Who Could Get a 'Ticket' Listens To President's Speech; Diplomatic Gallery, Rarerly Filled, Overflows Onto Stairway

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

SOCIAL CIRCLING revolved around Capitol Hill yesterday when virtually everybody who could beg, borrow or demand a pass was in the gallery well ahead of the President's arrival. Harassed Senators and Representatives, worn to a frazzle with requests for "tickets" to the big show, took refuge behind secretarial skirts and were "in conference" most of the morning. But by the time the President's car pulled up to the door, several thousand lucky persons including scores of social and official notables either had a ring-side seat in the House gallery or at least a peep through the doors.

Congressional wives in flossy autumn finery, diplomats, dowagers and debutantes were flocking through Capitol portals for more than a hour before the joint session began. Dozens were on hand to witness the opening routines in either the House or the Senate and stayed on until the "Star-Spangled Banner" drew the joint session to a close.

The diplomatic gallery which rarely has all seats filled was crowded to the walls yesterday. In several instances, envoys arriving only a few minutes ahead of the opening gun followed the example of the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, and sat on the stairway.

While only three diplomatic hostesses were seen in the throng, one of the trio was the first of the entire group to arrive. She was Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, who took a seat in the first row and watched proceedings intently the entire time.

AS THE GALLERY began to fill I spotted other familiar faces. The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close were there; also, the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki; the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Procope, sitting beside the Minister of Lithuania, Povilas Zadeikis. The Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, was an early arrival; as were the Portuguese Minister and Mme. de Bianchi.

Coming along a bit later were the Czech Minister, Vladimir Hurban; the Minister of Thailand, Abhibal Rajamaitri; the Swedish Minister, Wollmar Bostrom; the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih; the Ambassador of Turkey, Munir Ertegun, and the Canadian Charge d'Affaires, Dr. Walter A. Riddell.

APPARENTLY NOT missing a trick were the diplomatic spectators, all of whom never took their eyes off the President and never once joined the remainder of the crowd in applauding him. (Maybe it's not the diplomatic thing to do; I don't know).

Meanwhile, the executive gallery next door punctuated the President's speech with plenty of clapping. Earliest arrivals in that section were Mrs. Henry Wallace, Mrs. Adolph Miller and a Miss Ely whom a lot of people mistook for Mrs. Felix Frankfurter.

MRS. HUGO BLACK and Mrs. William O. Douglas were in the same gallery; also, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wearing a smart brown ensemble; Mrs. James Roosevelt, jr., who has been a White House guest for a few days but left for New York last night; Diana Hopkins, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Charles Edison, in a snappy black ensemble accented with white; Frederic Delano, uncle of the President; Henry Morgenthau, sr., Dr. Louis Hopkins, and Miss Marguerite LeHand, in a handsome wine crepe frock.

Meanwhile, around in other galleries there were also plenty of Important People. To mention only a few I saw—there were Mrs. William E. Borah, who earlier had attended the Senate opening; Mrs. Bennett C. Clark accompanied by her sister-in-law, Mrs. James Thomson of New Orleans; Mrs. Ogden Reid, trimly turned out in a black frock with white touches and a smart purple hat; Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, Mrs. Worth Clark, whose snappy blue suit with a matching hat was one of the smartest outfits I saw; Mrs. Claude Pepper, whose black frock and hat with bright red accents, also made fashion news.

STILL OTHERS seen in the throng were Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. William D. Byron, whose black frock was set off with a black pillbox hat brightened with a red velvet snood; Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer in a black and white ensemble; Mrs. Alice Nibley Smoot.

Taking his share of the spotlight on the floor of the House was Paul V. McNutt, whose gray suit blended becomingly with his gray hair and made him stand out from the crowd of blue and brown suited Congressionals in a big way.

LEGISLATIVE LADIES also had plenty of attention, not only from their Congressional associates, but from their host of friends in the galleries. Senator Hattie Caraway, who rarely wears flowers, had a huge orchid on her shoulder. Representative Edith Nouse Rogers, who rarely appears without an orchid, had a gardenia corsage on her navy blue frock. Representative Mary T. Norton, in bottle green crepe, and Representative Caroline O'Day in black and white, were in their seats half an hour before opening time; while Representative Jessie Sumner, an especially friendly soul, put in an appearance a full hour ahead and shook hands with every other Republican, and almost every Democrat on the House floor.

Arriving yesterday at the Capitol for the opening of the special session of Congress, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was snapped on her way to Executive Gallery

Shower Given By Miss Cahill

Miss Julie Cahill, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Cahill, entertained at a linen shower and tea yesterday afternoon at the home of her parents on Foxhall road in honor of Miss Mary Catherine Mundell, whose marriage to Dr. Robert J. O'Conor Coffey will take place Wednesday, September 27.

Guests at the tea included members of the bridal party—Miss Madeline Cotter, who will be maid of honor; Miss Alice O'Conor, Miss Florence O'Donoghue and the prospective bride's sister, Anne Mundell, all of whom will be bridesmaids.

The ceremony will take place at 10:30 o'clock in the morning at St. Matthew's Church with the Rev. John Wise officiating. The bride-elect is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Joshua Mundell.

Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Fuqua Return

Mrs. Kathryn Fuqua and Mrs. William O. Chapman have returned to their apartments at the Shoreham after spending several days in New York.

They were accompanied on their trip by Mrs. Harmer Reeside and her daughter, Miss Mary Frances Breeding.

Peru Diplomat Arrives in U. S.

A diplomat on a vacation tour—a rare thing for diplomats these days—is Felipe Barreda, Peruvian Ambassador to the Argentine, who has arrived in New York for a visit and is stopping at the Waldorf Astoria. He is accompanied by his two daughters, Senoritas Sara and Isabel Barreda, and the party will come to Washington for a visit shortly.

The Peruvian Ambassador to this country, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, is in New York, where he attended Pan-American Day at the World's Fair yesterday. He will not return to Washington until next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Other Latin-American chiefs of mission who went to New York for Pan-American Day include the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Lopez; the Venzuelan Ambassador, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, the Minister of El Salvador, Dr. Hector David Castro; the Dominican Envoy and Senora de Pastoriza and the Nicaraguan Minister and Senora de De Bayle.

Betty Drayton To Entertain For Debutantes

To Give Luncheon For Group Today At Chevy Chase Club

Many of this season's debutantes and a few sub-debs, will be among the guests at a luncheon which Miss Betty Drayton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Drayton, will give today at the Chevy Chase Club. Miss Drayton was presented to Capital society at a party given by her parents last June.

Her guests will include the Misses Achsah Dorsey, Lucy Marbury, Patricia Hurley, May Byrne Simpson, Mary Lord Andrews, Lucy Clagett, Sita Finkenstaedt, Margaret Townsend, Molly Stonestreet, Agnes Sasscer, Lalla Harrison, Mary Mink, Margaret Gordon, Patricia Knox, Bernice Merchant, Billie Byrd West, Patricia Prochnik, Nancy Glover, John McKenna, Mary Jackson, Nancy Weller, Katherine Addison, Louisa Horton, and Joanna Huntington.

Mrs. Drayton will entertain a small group of friends at another table, and will have with her Mrs. Edward Finkensteadt, Mrs. William Flather, Mrs. William Marbury, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington.

Miss Drayton will leave on Sunday evening for Smith College, and many of her guests at luncheon will also be off shortly to resume their studies.

The Meachams Plan Sail Party

Undaunted by the prospect of chilly winds Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Meacham are planning a sailing party on their sloop Marena this week-end. Guests aboard will be Mr. and Mrs. Granville Borden of San Francisco. The Bordens, with their children, Beverly and Bonnie, are planning to spend several months at the Shoreham.

This will be Mrs. Meacham's first trip this season aboard the Marena for she just returned the first of the week from an extended tour of the West. Leaving the last of June with her daughter, Mary, Mrs. Meacham traveled to Seattle, Wash., where she visited her mother, Mrs. Ella Little.

They were joined for the month of August by Mr. Meacham. After their visit to Seattle Mrs. Meacham and Mary went to California and en route home stopped at Houston, Tex., where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Matthews, who formerly made their home in Washington. Miss Meacham stayed on in Houston but is expected home shortly.

Doris Johnston Will Be Married On October 14

Miss Doris Havens Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Johnston, has selected October 14 as the date of her wedding to Willson Carpenter Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Culbertson Clark, of Takoma Park, Md.

The ceremony will take place at 3:30 o'clock at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church with the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer officiating. There will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Johnston will have Mr. Clark's sister, Miss Clara Marie Clark, as her only attendant. Her brother, Frederick A. Johnston, jr., will be best man. The ushers selected are Culbertson Clark, of New York, who attends Harvard University and is a cousin of the bridegroom-elect, John Guill, James Clark and Joseph Ballard, all of Takoma Park.

The couple were both graduated from the University of Maryland, Miss Johnston being a member of Alpha Xi Delta Sorority and the Junior Women's Club. Mr. Clark belongs to Tau Beta Pi and Phi Kappa Phi fraternities. They will live in Buffalo, N. Y.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Ann Phillips' Coming Out Canceled As War Comes Home to Debutantes

EVEN SUCH THINGS as debutante parties are being affected by conditions abroad. But young American girls who take wars seriously can be comforted by the fact that in London and Paris nobody is "coming out" at all, and that even brides carry their gas masks along to the church.

Miss Ann Phillips, younger daughter of the United States ambassador to Italy and Mrs. William Phillips, has canceled plans for the large dinner dance at which she was to have been presented to Boston society in November. With her mother, Miss Phillips is at Hignover, their place in Beverly, on the Massachusetts north shore. The ambassador was originally to have joined his family there for an autumn vacation, but now, of course, will remain at his post, and Mrs. Phillips will sail immediately to be with him.

Her daughter will entertain instead at a series of small parties. The other evening about forty of her friends were asked to Highover for a brief supper, followed by dancing. The debutante wore pink tulle with paillettes on the shoulders, and her older sister, Beatrice, chose a dress of green taffeta with a tulle sash. Mrs. Phillips, who received with her daughter, wore cardinal tulle with matching slippers.

The Phillips family were very popular in Washington when they lived here while the head of the house was Assistant Secretary of State. Miss Ann Phillips attended Miss Lee's School in Boston, the Madeira School here, and studied abroad.

GAYETY in Beverly is continuing for weeks after most summer resorts have folded for the season, probably because the Massachusetts town is so conveniently near Boston. One of the largest parties of the season will be held tomorrow night when Miss Nancy Leiter, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, of Washington, entertains at Edgewater House, her mother's house at Beverly Farms.

The dance will be in honor of three of the most popular young married couples on the North Shore, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cabot, Mr. and Mrs. R. Bennett Forbes and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Perry, all of whom were married this past summer.

Thomas Leiter, Nancy's brother, has left for a visit in Westchester County after spending a few days at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

THE DIGNIFIED doorman is one of Washington's oldest and most conservative men's clubs is a purist when it comes to English. To a woman sitting in the lobby the other day, he said coldly, "And for whom are you waiting?"

THE UNITED STATES Ambassador to Japan and Mrs. Joseph Grew will sail from San Francisco on Tuesday for the Orient. They have been enjoying a vacation of several months in this country, and at their summer place in Hancock, N. H., held a reunion with their three daughters, Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. Robert English and Mrs. Cecil Lyons. All married members of the United States Foreign Service.

The Grews will sail on the S. S. Tatuta Maru. Mrs. Moffat will return to Washington today.

There hasn't been any Albania since Italy marched in and took the country over last Good Friday, but United States Minister Hugh Grant is still winding up the many American affairs at our legation there. He is expected to return to Washington in October. It looks as though anybody with the rank of Minister or Ambassador would soon have very few posts to be assigned to. With Czecho-Slovakia, Albania and Austria "absorbed" all in less than two years, and now probably with no more Poland, there will be a shortage of countries to be assigned.

And speaking of Poland, as who isn't these days, Edward Weintal is another who hasn't heard a word from his family there since the war began. He resigned from the Polish Embassy several years ago to start a Polish news and information bureau here.

WASHINGTON is still in a state of suspended animation, as far as social activities are concerned, but a few plans are being hatched for events later in the season. The dates for the Friday Supper Club dances at the Sulgrave were set some time ago, but will be rechecked before being announced . . . Officials of the Washington Ice Club expect to send out announcements shortly for the group's second season, which will probably start November 1. Hours are reported to be the same as last year: From 10 to 1 on Sunday mornings and from 6 to 8 on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

Judith Dallett Sets Bridal Date

Miss Judith Dallet, whose engagement to Richard Galliher was recently announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dallet, has selected Wednesday, September 27 as the date of her marriage. Mr. Galliher is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Galliher.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in St. Thomas' Church, with the Rev. Howard Wilkinson officiating.

Mrs. B. P. Anderson arrived here the first of the week from Colorado Springs, Colo., for the marriage of her granddaughter.

Miss Dallet will have her sister, Miss Sally Dallet, as maid of honor and only attendant.

Robert Stabler will serve as best man, and ushers include the bridegroom-elect's three brothers, John, Joseph and David Galliher.

Mrs. Spilman Plans Return to Virginia

Mrs. Stewart Spilman, of New York, is expected to return to The Plains, Va., within the next week or so to see how the renovations on her farm there are progressing.

She bought the house last year, and the decorations are in keeping with those traditional in the Virginia hunt country. Pine walls and old-fashioned wallpaper are interesting features of the first-floor rooms, and only hand-woven materials are being used in the decoration of her bedroom.

Mrs. Spilman had planned to come to The Plains this week, but was detained in New York when her daughter, Miss Anne C. Shaffer, underwent an appendectomy at St. Luke's Hospital.

Boyles to Live In Ann Arbor

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Boyle, who were married on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, will make their home at the Sessions Apartments, Ann Arbor, Mich., after a wedding trip.

The former Miss Olive E. Reed, the bride, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie E. Reed, of Washington, and Mr. Boyle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Boyle, of Omaha. They were married in St. Mary's Chapel in Ann Arbor, Mich., and the ceremony was followed by a breakfast at the University of Michigan Union.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a black suit with velvet trimming and a white satin blouse. A black suede hat and a spray of gardenias completed her costume.

Her sister, Mrs. James A. Kime, served as matron of honor, attired in a wine colored wool dress with a matching hat and a corsage of tea roses and blue delphiniums. Edmund Devine was best man.

Both bride and bridegroom attended the University of Michigan. Mrs. Boyle also studied at George Washington University.

Mrs. Depew Back From New York

Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew returned yesterday to her home on Massachusetts avenue after a stay at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

Mrs. Depew spent the early part of the summer at Hot Springs, Va., and then went to Bar Harbor for the remainder of the season.

Mrs. Blanding Back Home From Florida

She Is Happy Over Birth of New Grandson

Mrs. Albert H. Blanding, wife of Maj. Gen. Blanding, chief of the National Guard Bureau, returned to Washington from Florida on Wednesday and has rejoined Gen. Blanding for the winter at their apartment at the Westchester.

Mrs. Blanding, who left Washington in August has been visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hardin Yarborough, in Miami, Fla., and was on hand to greet her new grandson who arrived just two weeks ago. The baby has been named J. Hardin Yarborough, jr. The Yarborough's other youngster, a daughter, is Louise Blanding Yarborough, named for her mother and grandmother.

Miss Betty Blanding, the other Blanding daughter, visited Washington on two occasions this last season but has returned to Florida, where she is a member of the faculty at the Florida State Women's College in Tallahassee.

Coronation Set Tonight

Cinderella will win her slippers and regal robes this evening, but it will be several midnights before they change back into the drabness of just clothes. Tonight at 7:30 o'clock, aboard a 75-foot patrol boat of the Coast Guard on the Potomac River, Miss Ruth Overton, daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton, of Louisiana, will be crowned queen of the President's Cup Regatta.

Edward J. Noble, Undersecretary of Commerce, will place the crown on the queen's head. The ceremony, which will take place on the boat near the seawall at Hains Point will be watched from the reviewing stand by thousands of spectators, and will mark the climax of the day's speedboat races in which the Nation's speediest drivers, amateur and professional, will seek new world speed records in the various classes. Today and tomorrow will be crowded with racing events, with Sunday the big day when the final heat of the President's Cup will be run off.

The queen and her court and escorts have a full program today. At 1:30 this afternoon they will leave Wardman Park Hotel under motorcycle escort for the reviewing stand at Hains Point. Following the racing events the queen and her ladies will don their coronation gowns and again under motorcycle escort proceed to the Corinthian Yacht Club where official photographs will be taken. Brilliant fireworks displays, illuminating yachts and canoes with multi-colored flares will feature the ceremony. Later the "royal" party will make the rounds of parties planned in honor of Miss Overton at the Willard, Mayflower and Shoreham hotels.

Among the boxholders for the regatta events are John Remon, chairman of the Regatta Association, and Mrs. Remon, who will have a large group of friends with them; Keith Merrill, William K. Ryan, Robert Woods Bliss, Theodore W. Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, L. Howell LaMotte, jr.; Gen. Albert L. Cox, Mrs. Anne M. Steager, Mrs. George Schrafft, Col. Vincenzo Coppola, Air and Military Attache of the Italian Embassy; David L. Maxwell, Jonathan Bourne, jr., E. C. Graham, L. B. Bell and Thomas P. Morgan, jr.

Also Miss Elizabeth Amole, Thomas E. Lodge, Isaac Gans, E. L. Florence, R. Aubrey Bogley, Lawrence E. Williams, president of the Board of Trade; Mr. and Mrs. Ord Preston, John E. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. J. George Wenzel, Mrs. George Bryan and many of Washington's business firms interested in promoting the regatta.

Brig. Gen. Smith And Mrs. Smith Going to Quantico

Brig. Gen. Holland Smith, U. S. Marine Corps, and Mrs. Smith will leave Washington next week for Quantico, Va., where Gen. Smith will take over the command of the First Brigade.

Gen. and Mrs. Smith have been in Washington for 2½ years while Gen. Smith has been on duty in the office of the commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Rear Admiral Lamar R. Leahy, U. S. N., retired, director of the International Hydrographic Bureau at Monte Carlo, and Mrs. Leahy, who returned from Europe recently on the President Harding, are with Mrs. Leahy's mother, Mrs. Charles W. Clinton, at 876 Park avenue, New York.

Mrs. Haywood Newbold and Miss Betsy Newbold, of Washington, are at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

Mrs. Frederick A. Barker, of Washington, is stopping at the Ambassador Hotel while in New York to see the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. John V. Quisler, of Separton, Wisc., are at the Hay-Adams House.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. G. Lucas, of Washington, are at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York. Also stopping there are Mrs. Hargaret O'Connor and Miss Margaret Gollan, of this city.

Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith will spend the week-end with her brother-in-law and sister, Maj. and Mrs. J. VanNess Ingram, at Camp Holabird, Baltimore. Mr. Smith will go to Chicago to attend the American Legion Convention banquet there on Sunday evening.

Mrs. Edward M. Powers, wife of Maj. Powers, of Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, is at the Martinique. Also stopping there are Commander and Mrs. Elmer R. Henning, of Washington.

Miss Viola E. Sutliff, of Cleveland, Ohio, who has been spending the summer with Mrs. William Shoemaker, of Chevy Chase, was guest of honor at a bridge party given earlier in the week by Mrs. William L. Mullikin, jr. Among the guests were Mrs. Shoemaker, Mrs. William B. Horne, Miss Eunice F. Myers, Mrs. George A. Smoot, Mrs. Lawrence Reeves, Mrs. Ralph Berry, Mrs. Francis Hoffheins, Mrs. Ernest Oliver, Mrs. Arthur Fisher, Mrs. Herbert Harris, Mrs. Matthew Fenton and Mrs. Albert Brault.

Mrs. Ernest Jones, of London, is at the Hotel Raleigh.

Miss Rhoda J. Thompson, daughter of Mrs. S. Polly Thompson, of 3121 Sixteenth street, has gone to Milford, Conn., to study at Weylister Secretarial Junior College.

Mr. and Mrs. David Dreyfuss have returned from New York, where they visited the World's Fair.

Washingtonians Flocking Home From Europe

At the rate they're returning to this country now, there'll hardly be a Washington resident left abroad in a few weeks time.

Latest arrivals are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, who came in on the liner President Harding and are at the Carlyle in New York. They left last summer for Paris, where Mr. Southgate represented Pan American Airways. He resigned from the State Department last winter to enter business.

The Southgate children have been in this country several weeks, having been sent home by their parents when the situation became threatening.

Also here because of the war is Mrs. Roy W. Baker, whose husband is United States Consul at Bristol, England. She will spend the winter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker Holcombe, and will send her two sons to the Putney School in Putney, Vt.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

N. Y. Guesses Whether Queen Mary May Make Wally Her Favorite

New York, Sept. 21.

A FEW NIGHTS ago Hall and I fearfully caught a Long Island rattler and went out to have dinner at Lynbrook with Mr. and tler and went out to have dinner at Lynnbrook with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cashman. Mrs. C. is Wilhela, of that name, alert and able fashion editor and one of the most beautiful women I know—not to mention being a driving, spinning, flashing ball of fire, with more ideas than I have gray hairs, which is plenty, thank you kindly.

They took a large, lovely old house out there for the summer, owned by a family of the name of Olney and with such a marvelous library that old Hall at once became anti-social and put on that goofy booksy look of his. During and after dinner we settled some of the world's problems which had baffled us, and turned on the radio to commentators, to whom I have become sadly addicted of late.

After which, while Norm and Len registered extreme boredom, we went into a good old gossip and dirt-dishing session about our particular specialty, for there is more gossip in the fashion business than in ten Broadway columns. Wilhela brought up one interesting speculation, noting that Dowager Queen Mary has never liked her daughter-in-law, the beautiful Marina of Kent, and of course doesn't recognize Eddie Windsor's wife, at all. Now, with that winning Baltimorean again on British soil, Wilhela thought how amusing it would be if the fine old lady should succumb to the undoubted charms of Wally and perhaps even make her the favorite daughter-in-law of the fine old lady!

We spent most of the time about the bed of Wilhela's brother Kingsbury, or Joe, Smith—an able and handsome newspaperman who had a leg badly smashed in England, his station, nearly a year ago, and has been in bed, and hacked at, ever since. Her devotion to him is marvelous—her care perfect.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Odd how Manhattanites, like ourselves, almost dread and fear crossing one of the rivers for a visit, even a pleasant one with good friends. It's a mental hazard, as golfers say, and a real psychological problem. This is one of the most fearful things about being hived up in these canyons. Hall, the helpless helpmate, is the only one I know who doesn't feel that way. He hates this island so much he'd even cross it, I really believe, to be hanged . . .

Gloria Blondell, younger sister of the better known movie star, wife and mother, will be seen on a Broadway stage this winter in a new show called "Hold Your Hats," which is, I believe, one of those new-fangled musical shows where young girls kick up and everything.

SPEAKING of such matters, we are saddened at losing two of the town's hits, "The American Way," big spectacle drama starring Freddie March, and "Leave it to Me," the musical show in which Victor Moore, Billy Gaxton and Sophie Tucker work, and which made the Texas Tornado, Mary Martin, famous last winter . . .

Regatta Queen's Choice

What does a much-talked about Regatta Queen wear when she lunches and shops before her nautical crowning? Miss Ruth Overton, daughter of the Senator from Louisiana, encases herself entirely in plaid silk jersey. It's a real cover-up job she does, her sleeves being long, her neckline high and her collar forming a hood for her blond hair. Bright green and red are the colors of her Highland plaid with a broad, bright kid belt and bright buttons for added local color

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

'Beauty Angle' Pose With Feet Elevated Rejuvenates Face by Aiding Circulation

CAN YOU stand on your head? Any number of beauties do! To mention two — there's Norma Shearer, one of the first ladies of Hollywood, who thinks standing on the head is the best exercise one can take! And then there's Lady Mendl—who is at least twice your age—who stands on her head daily!

A doctor we know solemnly prescribes six somersaults each morning, to be taken before breakfast. He orders it as a general conditioner. We gave it a trial—it's very upsetting! At any rate, when a woman is very much overweight, a somersault is quite a feat.

But you should do something to reverse the flow of circulation. As the director of one Fifth Avenue exercise salon puts it: The blood flows into the face and throat via an artery no larger than a lead pencil, and out again through a vein as large as two mansize thumbs. Besides, you have gravity against you! No wonder the circulation in this area is poor! No wonder faces get old looking!

Try the "Beauty Angle"

The antidote advocated by this salon is the "beauty angle." You lie down on your back with the feet elevated about 18 inches and let beauty go to your head while you rest and exercise. You are supposed to remain in this upsy-daisy position for at least 30 minutes a day.

The ideal way is to have an especially constructed bench with one end raised, the other down on the floor. But you can make shift with your ironing board, propping one end up on a low stool or block of wood and letting the other rest on the floor. Or you can elevate the foot of a light bed or couch—which would allow more freedom in exercise.

While you are getting beautiful in this position, take an exercise to flatten the tummy. First, flex the knees, then expel all the air from the lungs and jerk the chest up. This automatically flattens the tummy. Hold for an instant and release.

Lie on Floor, Feet on Chair

Here's another for the midriff, which includes the hips: Bend alternate knees up toward the chest and try to touch the kneecap to the mattress on the opposite side.

A third exercise which gets excellent results: Turn over on the left side, with the right leg on top of the left, both legs straight. Slowly raise the right leg high in air, making the muscles of the hip and thigh do the work. Hold for a second and then slowly lower. Repeat ten times, then turn over on the right side and repeat.

When you don't have time to drag out the ironing board or stand your bed on end, you can still get in a few exercises of the upsydaisy type by resting the feet on the seat or arm of a chair. When the feet are elevated, stretch the arms straight out on the floor overhead, then very slowly raise the hips off the floor until the body is in a straight line. Hold, and slowly return the hips to the floor.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

To A Floorwalker

I.

Why is it when I am "just looking,"
You trail me as if I were out hooking,
And at my elbow keep on nagging,
While to your clerks you are wig-wagging?

II.

But yet always when I am worrying,
To find a clerk to aid my hurrying,
You're either missing or not caring,
Or you greet me with a glassy staring?

Today's Social Notes
(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Caleo Fossil has returned from her summer cottage at Lake Humid and will reopen her house in Adamtown as soon as the Fumigating Service, Inc., finishes its activities at the place. Mrs. Fossil is also planning extensive repairs and will redecorate the house. It was occupied during the summer by Mr. Bartley Birdhaven, Mr. Mike Steppit and Mr. Fortney (Diz) Razzle, whose delightful parties made it a rendevous for smart Washingtonians.

Career Woman

Mrs. Cecil Smythe-Whiffle will desert the social whirl this season to open a modernistic gift shoppe. This will not be Mrs. Smythe-Whiffle's first adventure in trade, as last season she operated a dress shoppe for a brief period. She has also operated a tea shoppe, an antique shoppe and a pet shoppe. As a debutante and post-debutante Mrs. Smythe-Whiffle went in for a number of interesting activities including esthetic dancing, settlement work, book binding, newspaper reporting, interior decoration, night club singing and Sunday school teaching.

Lovers' Reunion

Mrs. Parmalee Putter entertained at tea yesterday afternoon at her estate, Dabblers' Delight. The event was attended by many of the town's foremost art lovers, music lovers, antique lovers, poetry lovers, book lovers, horse lovers, dog lovers, garden lovers, sports lovers, nature lovers, food lovers and money lovers.

Fall Decisions

Shall she buy some of the fascinating new clothes she sees in the windows, or be thrifty and try to make her old ones do until the after-Christmas sales?

Shall she get an evening dress that will make her look feminine and romantic, or slinky and sophisticated, or—shall she just have her old one modernized?

Shall she devote the beautiful fall weather to having in the cleaners and the decorators, to checking up with the dentist and the doctor, to shopping for all the uninteresting odds and ends she needs, to going over all her clothes, like a woman of character, and sewing on buttons, snappers, etc., or shall she let everything go, and go in for long walks and drives, outdoor picnics, fresh air, meditation and rejuvenation of spirit?

Shall she get a new permanent, some facial bleaches, a hostess gown and some high-priced perfume and make herself an alluring wife for the fireside, or shall she spend the money on the house and the children, and be a perfect mother and homemaker?

Shall she join a dancing class, or take up a study course?

Shall she get a new coat or shall John get a new overcoat?

Shall they both get a new car or a new furnace?

Shall they settle down this winter, live sensibly, and make a desperate effort to save for the future because "everything is so uncertain and you can't tell what's likely to happen," or shall they quit taking life so seriously and have a little more fun as they go along because "everything is so uncertain, etc."?

Black and Red Costume

Paris (AP).—Black and red were combined effectively in a Paquin hat worn recently at a cocktail party in Paris. The broad-brimmed hat was in black Milan straw topped with a shallow round crown of red straw, and flat rosettes of black satin ribbon went under the brim at one side. The dress with this was black wool with white organdie sleeves and neck finish, and a touch of red beads and gold paillettes in the trimming.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Fickle in Love, Man Has Been Engaged Many Times; Why Can't He Give His Heart Permanently?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem, which I am about to state, may sound funny or silly to others, but it is very important to me, and, I believe, rather complicated. I am a young man 24 years old and I have been going with girls since the age of 16. I have lived in Washington for three years and since coming here I have escorted many girls to various places. Some girls I called on only once, but others I continued to see for several months. It is these latter girls who are involved in my problem.

One of the first of these girls was 10 years older than myself. After going with her for a month or so, I became very interested, got serious, and asked her to marry me. She said "yes." Then, after another month or so, I met another girl and after seeing her a few times, I became seriously interested in her. I asked her to marry me, and she also said "yes." This same procedure was followed, time and again, with other girls, always with the same affirmative answer, always coming to nothing, as I would get interested in someone else.

Right now, I'm writing to a girl in Philadelphia. I have gone out with her several times and now, through correspondence, we have agreed to be married. We are planning to be married rather soon but somehow I feel I might be doing the wrong thing in marrying her. What I mean is, my interest in her may die, as it has died in other cases. I came near marrying the other girls, too; but right now I really feel that I want to marry this girl.

My questions are these: What is wrong with me? Why am I this way? Why can't I tell when I am really in love? Can you throw any light on the situation? I discussed the problem with a close friend, who suggested that maybe I was just trying to see how many girls I could marry! But I know this is not true, as it would never occur to me to play a trick as low as that. I read your column every day, even though it is on the woman's page, and I think you are doing some wonderful work. Sincerely yours, BEWILDERED.

An Immature Personality Seeking 'Movie' Romance

DEAR BEWILDERED: Very likely, your headlong impulse—consistently regretted—to become united by marriage with first one attractive girl after another, stems from the fact that you are constantly troubled by an unconscious feeling of emotional insecurity and personal inadequacy. You are groping for ballast—for a stabilizing influence that will bring you a sense of completion, competence and direction. And you think to find this reassuring compound, ready-made, in some other person or through a love relationship.

To add to your confusion, your urge to achieve strong personal integration by painless means has gotten tangled up with a boyish sort of quest for a movie-type romance. According to the moving picture formula, you know, boy meets girl and after a whirlwind courtship, they marry and settle down, supposedly, to a lifetime of heaven-sent happiness and successful teamwork.

One gathers that your whole approach to marriage is distinctly immature. Apparently you regard it as a state of affairs in which husband and wife are continually swooning with delight at each other's nearness. In the initial, exploratory stages of your association with particularly pleasing young women, you experience this heady emotion, and, under its influence, pop the question. It is a case of looking no further ahead than the end of your nose.

But when the cold light of day supplants the witchery of moonlight, and the realistic aspects of marriage—particularly the implied responsibilities of supporting a family and being faithful to one woman for a lifetime—arise to be considered, you back-track in haste. What you are doing, I fancy, is flirting with a proposition which you think, with half your mind, contains the answer to your needs; and which the other half of your mind tells you to beware of—since it seems a heavy burden to carry and since, more especially, you don't know what you want, anyway.

Your stampeding progress from one aborted romance to another is merely an attempt to fool yourself. Rather than admit that you don't know what you want and that you are, in addition, afraid to take a chance, you like to think yourself as falling in love all over the lot. But you haven't been in love, as yet. You have only been attracted by divers attractive women, and your wistful desire for stability—internally and externally—has provoked the ensuing complications.

In my opinion, you shouldn't marry the girl in Philadelphia, or any other girl, until your emotional attitudes have been educated up to a more mature level. You must acquire sufficient emotional balance to be able to evaluate your reactions to womankind with some objectivity. This means that you must be able to say with approximate accuracy, when attracted to a woman, just what it is about her that attracts you. Unless you know that, how are you going to know whether she is a potentially compatible life companion? This is one more care in which a "person with a problem" is obviously in need of psychological or psychiatric instruction of a self-developing kind. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Learn to Speak Well in Public

TO BE ABLE to stand on one's feet and speak easily, convincingly! What a "gift" that may seem to you—particularly if you are new to club life.

Perhaps you have just been welcomed to your club with a gracious speech. As you rise to reply you are in a panic, wondering what to do, what to say!

To be poised at such moments requires no "gift"—but just a knowledge of simple rules for public speaking, addressing the chair.

Stand erect—don't clutch the chair in front of you—and in reply to the welcome speech say: "Thank you, Mr. Chairman and fellow members. It does me good to realize you are my fellow members. I hope to be worthy of the honor you have given me."

To limber lazy lips, tongue and jaw muscles, and thus improve enunciation, start with lips closed, then puff them apart, as for the sound of "p" in "part." Repeat rapidly. By breathing build up volume of sound so that your tones carry. Helpful, too, if you read aloud every day, saying each word distinctly.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Self-Instruction in Public Speaking," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Corsage Trick

Hollywood, Calif.—Julie Stevens, who screen-debuts in "City of Lost Men," has a neat trick to protect her evening gowns from corsage pins. She decides where flowers are most becoming on each gown, then pads and quilts the section. The flowers have a secure anchor and fabrics are not torn.

Perfect Duet

Hollywood, Calif.—Jane Wyman and Ronnie Reagan, now the steadiest twosome in town, wear identical suede jackets on their weekly visits to the midget auto races. Both jackets are chocolate brown, have four patch-pockets, and are belted. Jane teams hers with a lime wool butterfly pleated skirt and beige accessories.

C. E. Worrell Dies; Head of Va. Veterans

Commander, 62, Was Stricken at S. W. V. Parley in N. J.

By the Associated Press

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 21.—Charles E. Worrell, 62, commander of the Department of Virginia, Spanish War Veterans, died early today at his home here from a heart ailment.

Mr. Worrell, who was stricken ill in Atlantic City a week ago while attending the national convention of Spanish War Veterans, has been game warden of Petersburg since 1923.

Funeral service will be conducted in Petersburg Saturday afternoon.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 21.—Charles T. Page, 65, merchant and postmaster of Batesville, this county, died yesterday morning. Funeral rites were held this afternoon at Mount Ed Church. He was a director of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company, this city. He married Miss Mary Barkdale, of the county, who survives, with four children—Mary Allen Page and Charles T. Page, jr., both of Batesville; Mrs. Virginia Mackey, of Buena Vista, and Gordon Page, of Orange.

Mrs. Duth B. Potts

Hillsboro, Va., Sept. 21.—Mrs. Ruth B. Potts, 39, wife of Thruston J. Potts, prominent farmer of this section, died suddenly Tuesday night at the home of her father, Walter C. Brown, near Lincoln. She had just returned from the Winchester Memorial Hospital where she had been a patient. Besides her husband she is survived by two sons, Edwin and Walter Potts. Funeral services were held from her residence today.

Julian Hershberger

Luray, Va., Sept. 21.—Funeral services for Julian Hershberger, 43, World War veteran, and member of a prominent family, were held today. Mr. Hershberger died in Rockingham Memorial Hospital in Harrisonburg on Tuesday as the result of a fall from his porch on Sunday at his home near Luray.

Thomas Short

Luray, Va., Sept. 21.—Funeral services were held today at Stanley for Thomas Short, 65, who died recently in Reidsville, N. C. His death recalls a tragedy of more than a quarter of a century ago, when he was sentenced to prison for the slaying of his sweetheart at her home near Stanley. He recently had been released.

Agricultural Fair Opens in Elkins, W. Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Elkins, W. Va., Sept. 21.—The annual agricultural fair opened here today and will continue tomorrow, sponsored by the local chapter, Future Farmers of America, and Mill Creek-Huttonsville Farm Women's Club.

N. K. Speicher, vocational agriculture instructor at Mill Creek High School, is director of the fair, staged in the high school gymnasium. A wide range of exhibits makes it the largest fair yet held here. It is the only fair in Randolph County.

The Fun Begins
an Hour From Now

THROW down your newspaper, turn off your radio—get your family and grab your hat!

Down on the streets right now is the bright and beaming face of a 1940 Nash. And just looking at it will make you feel good all over!

One sweet sweep of glittering line, it looks gay as a Mardi Gras—and twice as exciting.

But don't waste time staring. You belong in the driver's seat. For that's where the fun begins.

Before you start, turn on the Weather Eye to the comfort you want. (It offers new conditioned air wonders this year.)

Just a nudge of your toe, and in one split-second you'll get a good idea of what a hundred-odd stampeding horses can do. Three finger flicks—and the gears are shifted. Then—a lift, a rush, a click—and a new Fourth Speed Forward lends soft wings to your ride.

Don't worry about that Sunday driver ahead. There's something new in the throttle—the Nash Automatic Overtake. Just press your toe—and leave him dawdling in your dust, wondering where you came from—or where you went.

Then head for a backwoods road where the others dare not follow . . . and feel what happens.

Ruts and bumps rush up to meet your spinning wheels, but—they never seem to reach you. Your hand stays idle on the wheel.

It's riding magic, pure and simple. A ride so smooth, so level, so silent that you might be in your easy chair at home, or sleeping in the Nash convertible bed.

It's the new Arrow-Flight Ride . . . result of an entirely new springing combination . . . and we dare you to say you've ever experienced anything like it, or known steering that was so sure and effortless.

With singing heart, you give the throttle another nudge.

From where you're sitting, the world looks like one straight, unending ribbon of road ahead . . . in a land of perpetual spring.

It is—and always will be, in your Nash . . . long after other cars are parked for good.

• • • •

We're asking you, with nothing but your own preferences, experiences, and instincts, to get behind the wheel of a 1940 Nash. For ten glorious minutes—that's all.

Then decide if any other car today . . . of any power, weight, or wheelbase . . . can give you as much downright fun as this new, lower-priced Nash!

Get your hands on it now—for you'll regret every minute you don't own one! Your Nash dealer is waiting. Come on—it's getting late—let's go!

Again...it's that new NASH

Cards' Rally Beats Brooklyn; Reds Also Win

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Because Joe Louis didn't catch up with Bob Pastor until the eleventh round the tone of the dispatches from the ringside reflected a growing belief that Louis is receding from his peak as a fighter. But to this department, that would seem to be a queer deduction.

POVICH

On the strength of his knockout of Pastor, Louis appears definitely to be an improved fighter. He was fighting the same man he couldn't knock down in ten rounds three years ago, and the other night at Detroit he put the quietus on Pastor with great finality.

The fact that Pastor endured as long as ten rounds with Louis is scarcely any reason to belittle the champion. When Pastor chose to stand up and fight in the first two rounds, Louis promptly knocked him down. That is more than Jack Dempsey was able to achieve against Tommy Gibbons, a Pastor counterpart at the business of clinching and running.

Even as he annihilated Max Schmeling in a return bout, Louis apparently profited from his first fight with Pastor. This time he knew how to fight Pastor, waiting for the open shot that presented itself in the eleventh round. That he didn't keep Pastor down when he dumped him on the floor in the first and second rounds is scarcely evidence that Louis is slipping.

Paying Penalty for Setting High Standard

What do they expect the fellow to do, knock somebody out every time he hits 'em? If Louis is being belittled, he is merely paying the penalty for setting too high a standard as heavyweight champion. His quick knockouts have led folks to expect him to win his bouts with great rapidity all the time.

There is evidence that Louis is a better fighter this year than ever before. In the fight before the Pastor match he showed that he could get up off the floor and still win. That happened in the Galento affair. And he displayed against Pastor that the man who could go ten rounds with him in 1936 could be knocked out in the eleventh.

It's difficult to perceive any reason why Joe Louis should be slipping. He has showed a positive zest for keeping in training both before and between fights, and a positive distaste for the fancy life that has taken its toll from so many fighters. With him the title isn't something to be tossed off lightly. He's fond of that championship and the fear that he may lose it is very real with him.

Evidence That He Hasn't Lost His Ambition

They called him a "hungry" fighter when he was beating his way toward the top and interpreted his fighting ferocity as a consuming desire to win the title and the emoluments that go with it. There was always the suspicion that his zest for the game might recede after he reached the top and that another "hungry" fighter would come along and beat him.

But at Detroit, where we saw him in training for Pastor, Louis was actually routing his trainers out of bed in the morning to start the day's work. That surely wasn't evidence that he had lost his ambition or was taking his title lightly. And as champion for two years now, he is more secure that any other heavyweight titleholder in history. There isn't a figure on the fistic horizon at this writing who figures to give him an interesting fight.

And another thing. It's sort of difficult to accuse a 25-year-old champion of slipping. That is Louis' age. Did you ever hear of Bob Fitzsimmons? When a fellow wins the heavyweight championship of the world, it must be assumed that he has reached his peak. Well, when Fritz knocked out Jim Corbett to win the title, he had just turned 34.

Featherweight Class Active

Louis so completely dominates the heavyweight division and there is such a dearth of activity in most other weight classes that the featherweight division is in a position to make a bid for paramount fight interest. Washington will be the scene on Thursday night of the Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra fight for the feather title.

The heavyweight crown Archibald will be defending has a glamorous sort of background. Some of the ring's finest champions have held the title in the feather division, including George Dixon and Terry McGovern.

Prior to 1890, a fighter who wasn't close to being a lightweight, middleweight or featherweight, was rather out of luck. Those were the only weight classes recognized. Dixon established the featherweight division when he stopped Nunce Wallace, of England, in June, 1890, as a 122-pounder.

The feather limit remained at 122 ringside until Johnny Kilbane began picking up weight and defended his title against June Criqui at 126 pounds, the new limit. It was as a 122-pounder that Kilbane had lifted the title from—Abe Attel.

Terrible Terry McGovern was probably the most famous of the feather champs. But on at least one evening, he was probably the most embarrassed, also. McGovern was touring with his "ten-twent-thirt" show "From Rags to Riches," and would box any volunteer in the audience as an added attraction. At the Gaiety Theater in Baltimore one evening, a young lad named Joe Tipman, climbed onto the stage and hung a punch on McGovern's chin. Down when the champ and also the curtain. The show was over for the night.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 21.—While Rome burns:

Radio accounts of the Louis-Pastor fight indicated that Pastor's tragic mistake was in permitting Jimmy Johnston to talk him into believing that Joe Louis was a bum . . . Robert mixed it a lot more enthusiastically with Joe than he did in January of 1937, and was so fortunate in escaping those Thor-like belts until the opening of the eleventh that he must have come out full of contempt . . . The fight reminded old-timers of the night Jim Corbett danced and flicked at a grim, stalking Jeffries for 20 odd rounds then made the mistake of bouncing off a rope carelessly—and got knocked out . . . Louis, as in the Paolina fight, patiently awaited the one sure opening, the one chance to get that solid left hook in, and when the time came he hit out with the jagged, perfect aim of a bolt of lightning.

CONSIDINE

Saved from a Bad Fall

Bill Dickey saved Lou Gehring from a nasty spill on their last Western trip . . . Lou staggered while walking down the steps of the lower lobby of the Book-Cadillac in Detroit, and would have plunged the rest of the way but for the timely clutch of his friend and roommate . . . Joe McCarthy denies that he will scout the Reds . . . The average American Leaguer believes that such a move would be as super-provi-dential as Louis scouting Shirley Temple's right cross, if they were about to fight.

The professional tennis tour which Don Budge, Ellsworth Vines, Bill Tilden and Les Stoffen were going to make through Egypt, India, South Africa, New Zealand, Australia and Japan was called off on the advice of Walter Pate, former captain of the United States Davis Cup team . . . Pate, who guided Budge into professional ranks, holds $50,000 of Budge's money for him . . . Budge may never go on another pro tour . . . For one thing there is not much of a pro tour field left, and for another thing he is shrewd enough to retire now—so that if some new amateur star comes up and turns pro the promoters will have to make overtures to him, Budge, not the amateur, to go on the tour.

Jones Touted Ward

Bobby Jones began touting Bud Ward, the new amateur golf king, the day he first saw him play . . . He told us at Philadelphia that Ward would be the next amateur to win the Open . . . Weirdest reversal in recent golf history is that of Sam Snead . . . Hailed for the past two years as the greatest in the game, last year's leading money winner is all but forgotten today . . . Illness, and the terrific blow of losing the Open title by taking 13 on the last two holes of the tournament, have combined to crush his game—perhaps beyond repair.

Joe Dimaggio owes his percentage increase to the fact that he has stopped fishing for bad balls . . . The absurdest piece of sports business in the land is the play-off system in vogue in the better minor leagues . . . Even George Weiss, whose Newark team, which finished in fourth place, yet eliminated the Jersey City club, which won the International League season, thinks the system ought to be shelved.

Favorites Win D. C. Amateur Golf Matches

Burnett's Victory Ovre Peacock Only Possible Exception

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

With the possible exception of Volney Burnett's first round triumph over Roger Peacock, favorites were on parade in the District Amateur championship yesterday at Burning Tree as four expected semi-finalists advanced in the two rounds.

Ralph Bogart, the medalist from Wilson High School, qualified as Burnett's upper bracket opponent this morning, while the other match pits Claude Rippy, the pre-tourney choice, against 1937 champion Billy Shea, of Georgetown University.

Indian Spring claimed all the remaining players, although Bogart and Shea are also members of other clubs, Army and Navy and Congressional, respectively.

Burnett had his own way in ousting Peacock in another meeting between two of the city's outstanding simon-pures. The D. C. Fireman was never down, and led by three up at the 9th. He held the margin through the 15th for a dormie three-hole lead, lost the next but won with a halve on the 17th. He was one over par.

Rippy dropped a birdie on the eighteenth against Walter R. Tuckerman to gain the second round. The 1914 and '23 champion, also a National Amateur semifinalist in 1910, held the match even through 17 holes but lost the long, par 4 finishing hole when he couldn't quite reach the green in two shots.

Bogart had trouble with George Molloy in the morning, trailing by two holes at one time, but he was up for the first time on the sixteenth and won the match on the seventeenth. He was 6 up at the eighth against John Miller and won, 4 and 3. Miller accounted for M. Parker Nolan, 1 up.

Burnett lost the first hole to Jim Gipe in the second round, but he

Virginia Will Revise Lineup For Hampden-Sydney Opener

Recurring Injury of McLaughterty, Blocking Back, Results in Juggle for Game Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 21.—University of Virginia coaches were busy today making line-up revisions for the season's opener here Saturday against Hampden-Sydney, starting at 3 o'clock.

Counted out for the Tiger game is Harry McClaugherty, co-captain and blocking back, whose shoulder injury from last year has taken a turn for the worse. Although held out of nearly all rough work for the past three weeks, it was thought that McClaugherty would be able to resume his position.

The loss may be for much of the season, leaving a vacancy which cannot be readily filled. Leroy Neustedter, big sophomore fullback, probably will be shifted to the blocking position for Saturday, with other plans pending. Bucky Morse, junior letterman at tackle, who had some experience on the freshman team of two years ago, is learning the assignments for future games.

At least one sophomore seems assured of a starting role in the Cavalier line. He is Jack Sauerbeck, 185-pound guard from Danville, who will pair with Phil Rothar, a junior who carries the same weight. Veterans will man the other positions, with Tabb George and Nick Gianakos, ends; Lee McLaughlin and Al Frerotte, tackles, and Roscoe Willett, center. Jack Murden, however, may be the final choice at center.

Virginia's starting backfield will average around 180 pounds and the average weight of the line is about 187 pounds.

Newark Bears Beat Rochester, 6-2; Even Play-Offs

By International News Service

Newark, N. J., Sept. 21.—The Newark Bears evened up the International League play-offs at 2-all by downing Rochester, 6 to 5, today. A single by Mike Chartak with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth decided the contest.

A homer by Jack Sturdy with one on in the fifth gave the Wings a 4 to 1 advantage over Max Macon, but Frankie Kelleher's circuit sock, also with one on, climaxed a Newark rally in the home half to tie.

Floyd Beal's homer off Ivy Andrews regained the lead for Rochester in the eighth but again the Bruins came back in their half and evened matters with Mickey Witek smashing out a timely double off John Grodzicki.

Fred Russell temporarily saved the game for Rochester in the eighth but Tommy Holmes singled him off to open the ninth. There were two intentional passes and two outs including a sacrifice before Chartark bounded through the box.

Thompson Resigns Grid Post at Tech

William D. (Rusty) Thompson, head football and track coach at McKinley Tech High School since 1936, resigned yesterday to devote more time to his work on a Ph. D. degree at George Washington University. He will hold his post in the physical education department at Tech, however.

Artie Wondrach, former Maryland University football player, and assistant coach at Tech since Thompson succeeded Hap Hardell three years ago, will succeed Thompson.

Although Thompson's resignation from the non-paying coaching position came entirely by surprise, it was understood he wishes to devote more time to his academic pursuits. He is writing a thesis for his doctor's degree on the history of District High Schools.

Soccer League Set To Go in Frederick

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Sept 21.—An independent soccer league composed of Frederick, Myersville, Mt. Airy and the Fishing Creek Civilian Conservation Corps camp, was organized last night with the election of Dorsey F. Shipley as president. It is hoped to get teams from Emmitsburg and Walkersville before the season opens October 1. Walkersville won the county championship last year.

Outboards Hold Sway As Cup Regatta Opens

Owners and Boats Pour Into Capital For Three-Day Event; 22 Entries Listed Including Several From D. C., Nearby Cities

By Ken Harter.

With 220 entries in the 25 scheduled events, the three-day President's Cup Regatta will move on to the Potomac this morning at 8:30 o'clock. The first race—the initial heat of the Class A amateur outboard event—is scheduled for 11:30 a. m., following the qualifying trials.

Today will be given over entirely to outboards, with the leading drivers in the United States competing in some 15 events.

At a late hour last night the registration office, in room 101 of the Hotel Willard, looked more like a beehive than the pleasant suite it represented a few days ago.

Many Owners Arrive

Gold Cup boat owners, midget outboard racers, doctors, lawyers and the landlubbing gentry sought registration from Jack Anadale, the committee chairman.

The race committee has received not only entries, but also boats—shipped express—for them to keep until the owners arrive.

"Here is a sample," said Aubrey Bogley, chairman of the race committee, as he pointed to a crate in one corner of the room.

The box contained the propeller of the Gold Cup boat Why Worry, which is entered in the President's Cup race. W. E. Cantrell, the owner, had sent the propeller under separate cover so there would be no chance of injury in transit.

Three other Gold Cup boats arrived yesterday. Herbert Mendelson, of Detroit, launched his Notre Dame at the Corinthian Yacht Club and L. J. Fageol, of Los Angeles, put his boat, So Long, in the water at the Navy Yard. Zal Simmons, of Greenwich, Conn., arrived at the Navy Yard with My Sin a short time later.

Only Two Missing

That only leaves two boats, Harold Wilson's Miss Canada and E. T. Chase's Artic Turn, to be accounted for today.

An added starter in the 225-cubic-inch-displacement class is 79-year-old Robert Jaite, of Jaite, Ohio. This veteran vice president of an Ohio business concern will drive his Apache II. This event, no doubt, will rival the President's Cup race for spectator thrills because of the unequaled entry of 18 boats.

The entries are, of course, headed by the veteran Jack Cooper, of Kansas City; Gibson Bradfield, of Barnesville, Ohio; T. R. Chatfield, of Danbury, Conn.; W. R. Gatewood, of Norfolk, Va., and George Schrafft, of Newton, Mass.

Two more local drivers entered the 135-cubic-inch displacement class yesterday. They are Ralph N. Smith, who will drive his boat, Fire Ball, and J. E. Fuller, of Washington, who will drive Miss Pudd. The Smith craft was designed by the Ventnor Boat Works, of Atlantic City, and is powered with a Willys motor.

Incidentally, Commodore Apel, head of the Ventnor Works, designed models which were sent to

Indians Score All Runs in 8th, Beat Nats, 6-3

Rookie Pitcher Bass Blows Up Suddenly; Gelbert Gets Homer

By Shirley Povich.

The unfeeling Cleveland Indians, bent on finishing in third place with their late-season rush, rudely jolted a 31-year-old Washington rookie out of dreams of conquest yesterday. Irked by seven innings of shut-out pitching by Dick Bass, they smited him with great vigor in the eighth, wiped out the Nats' 2-0 lead, and won the ball game, 6 to 3.

Fresh from Chattanooga, and getting his chance at a big league job after toiling a dozen years in the bushes, Bass was on the threshhold of an impressive debut for the Nats. Exhibiting little besides a knuckler but wriggling out of predicaments invited by his wildness, he allowed the Indians only three hits in the first seven innings, and no runs whatsoever.

And then, sad to relate, came the eighth. With the ladies' day guests whooping it up for him, the blond right-hander lost his effectiveness, his control, his lead and the ball game. The first three men to face him in the eighth ripped off singles. He hit one batter, tossed in a wild pitch, and served a damaging double to Ken Keltner.

Left-handed Al Milnar who dueled Bass doggedly for seven innings, yielding only seven hits. The only fellows in the predominantly green-pea Washington lineup who caused Milnar any serious annoyance were the veteran Charley Gelbert and Rookie Eddie Leip. Three of the Nats' hits were accumulated, went the distance for the mulated by Leip.

A freak home run by Charley Gelbert with Taft Wright on base set the Nats up in a 2-0 lead in the seventh inning. After Wright opened the inning with a single to right, Gelbert touched off a series of exciting events with a line drive to deep left field.

St. Louis Scores Two Runs With Two Out; Derringer Wins 22d for Leaders

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 21.—With two out in the ninth inning the raging Redbirds strung together four successive hits today to come from behind and beat the Brooklyn Dodgers 6 to 5 in their final intersectional feud of the season.

The victory kept the Cardinals within 2½ games of Cincinnati, National League leaders, who pummeled the Phillies, 8 to 3.

Credit for the triumph went to Curt Davis, who worked the last three innings and gave up Gene Moore's first home run of the season in the seventh. It was Davis' twenty-second win.

Luke Hamlin went the route for the Dodgers, giving 14 hits, including a home run by Country Slaughter in the first and hit the first circuit blow of his own career in the third.

Shortstop Jimmy Brown started the ninth-inning rally with a single, and Lynn Myers, running for him, raced to third on Don Gutteridge's blow to center. The tying run scored as Country Slaughter beat out a roller down the first-base line and Medwick lined a double down the leftfield line for the winning marker.

Derringer Wins 23d As Reds Beat Phils, 8-3

Cincinnati, Sept. 21 (AP).—The other half of the Reds' "Me and Paul" team—Paul Derringer—delivered today to give the Reds an 8-to-3 triumph over Philadelphia and his own twenty-third hurling victory of the year.

Just as Bucky Walters, his star mound mate, turned the trick yesterday, Derringer breezed in today for his eighth straight despite being hit rather freely. He aided his own

Four District High Schools Open Football Seasons Today

Catholic Prep Grid Rivals Co-Featured

St. Johns-Roosevelt, Gonzaga-Anacostia Meet on Rider, Central Gridirons at 3:30

St. John's and Gonzaga grid teams, bitter Catholic Prep rivals, will be co-featured today as schoolboy football undertakes its first faltering steps of the season.

The Johnnies pair off with Roosevelt, making its first start under the tutelage of Artie Boyd, former Eastern coach, at the Rider stadium. Gonzaga tangles with Anacostia's midget Indians at Central stadium. Both games start at 3:30 p. m.

For the Catholic schools these games will be in preparation for the annual St. John's-Gonzaga clash at Griffith Stadium on Sunday, November 12, but the public squads will be sounding out their material for the long interhigh series grind starting October 6.

Of the four teams involved in today's hostilities, Gonzaga probably has overcome its graduation losses best. It's backfield prospects are legion and its line, though inexperienced, is large and fast enough to suit any coach.

Coach Pleased

At any rate, it pleases Coach Orrel Mitchell. Ralph Simone, Bob Mulvihill, Jack Walsh, Fred Rice, Bernard Raba, Johnny Skully and Benedict Cosimano are included in a smooth ball-carrying, kicking, passing and blocking department. Davey Walsh will hold the center spot and the line will be picked from among Ed Seiler, Johnny Mullaney and Joe Veith, guards; Lane O'Donnell, Jack Harrington, Phil Koontz, Jim Fitzgerald and Bill O'Keefe, tackles; and Jimmy Costello, Ed Hurson, Bob O'Donnell and Allen Garland, ends.

Anacostia, making its second start in the interhigh scramble this year, hasn't near the club it had last year, but may be heard from if "scrap" makes any difference. Art Faircloth, a triple threat man, will be forced into the starring role held by "Flash" Gordon and his main assistant will be little Joey Farmer, a plunger of no mean ability. Other backs include Bill Spencer, George Dyer, Joe King, Walter Foley, Roy Selph and Eddie Hoffman. Veterans Francis Fillius and George Abshur will be ready for flank duty; James Turner and Bill Earnshaw are small but speedy tackles, and guards will be picked from among Fred Tizard, a letterman, Bernie Lubin, Bruce Hulett and Bob Curtis. The center post belongs to Archie Edington, another letterman.

Veterans Start

Coach Gene Augusterfer, of St. John's, has already picked a tentative starting eleven which lists three veteran backs and four 1938 linemen. "Fibber" McKee will start at center, flanked by Guards Sansalone and Shields. Herb Munhall and Johnny Record take the tackle spots, and Fogarty and Hathaway the ends.

Frank Cady, the yodeling triple-threater, is Augusterfer's big backfield gun. He will be assisted by Bill Casere, an importation; Joe Brogan and Joe Daly.

Bayd's starting Roosevelt eleven may hinge on the "fight" shown by candidates rather than their experience. He has seven lettermen, however, to hurl against the Johnnies if he sees fit. They are End Danny Booth, the cream of the lot; Tackles Warren Fulton and Bob Floyd, Guard Eddie Vermillion, Center Johnny Page, and Dick Metzler and Bernie Kolker, backs.

Greenkeepers to Study Turf Collection Today

The U. S. G. A. Greens Section and the Greenkeeping Superintendents Association will gather at the Arlington Experimental Farm at 9 a. m. today for an all-day program on turf maintenance and culture.

The group will study the largest collection in the world of grasses growing as turf, and other exhibits.

The meeting will adjourn to the Capital Golf Club in the afternoon to visit three experimental greens that have been under play all summer. A dinner-meeting will follow.

The Defibaughs, Motorboat Racing's Leading Sister Act, Bemoan Death of Texas Cowboys

Frances, Irene and Betty are going to drive their craft over the Potomac in the midget class amateur races of the President's Cup Regatta today at 3:30 p. m.

But that is all beside the point. The Defibaugh sisters are mad, meaning angry, because there are no cowboys in Texas—at least, that is the impression they conveyed yesterday.

Frances, Irene and Betty, who calll Woodside, Del., home, were in Fort Worth Sunday and Monday. They raced there in the national championship outboard races. Then, just to show their seriousness about this motorboat business, they hopped into their auto-trailer, with "Pop," H. C. Defibaugh, at the wheel, headed toward Washington, and hove to in the Washington Aourist Camp's section for trailers.

You would think the three youngsters—ages 15, 18 and 16—would be strictly nautical in their trend of thought, particularly since Irene is the Nation's leading woman outboard driver at present, and was national high point scorer for two years. But the dearth of cowboys in Texas is what toubled them yesterday.

"We didn't see a cowboy anywhere in Texas, and I thought they would be all over the place," Frances lamented.

"Oh, we did see one," Irene insisted.

"Yeh, but he was hitchhiking," Betty explained.

"Anyway, he didn't have on those silk shirts and bandannas that cowboys ought to have on," Frances came back. Then "Pop" brought up the subject of boats. Frances, Irene and Betty got their second, third and fourth wind and started anew—roughly, 5,650 words on every subject but boats. "Pop" finally hda to explain how it happens that he has three daughters with such unusual hobbies.

"I've been driving runabouts since 1930, and my old lady was my mechanic until I dumped her overboard in a race up in Harold's bay near Baltimore back in '35," the girls' father explained in reporting to regatta officials at the Willard Hotel.

"I had to have a mechanic, so Irene volunteered and before long she was driving and not much later Betty and Frances were too. There wasn't much I could do."

Although all three have been driving since 1936, none of them swims; that is, none but Betty. Frances and Irene insist Betty can't swim and furthermore doesn't have to, as upsets are rare. Frances had an upset at a Trenton, N. J., regatta last year but was in no danger. All of them have to wear life preservers.

The race today will be the last of the season for the girls, who will return to their home in Woodside and resume their studies in the Wyoming, Del., high school, where Irene and Betty are seniors and Frances a sophomore.

Piloting their bounding outboards has taken them into almost every section of the country. For instance, they were in Philadelphia September 9, racing at the New York World's Fair the next day and in Fort Worth last week and the early part of this week.

You'll know them today by their boats. If it's Double Trouble, Frances is at the wheel; Maggie's Pup, Irene and Me-O-My, Betty.

Central to Hold Grid Assembly

To Stimulate School's Interest

With the twin purpose of stimulating interest in its opening game with Gonzaga High Friday and "to teach the students how to watch a football game," a special football assembly will be presented to the students of Central High School Tuesday morning at 9 a. m., it was announced by Coach Hardy Pearce.

Twenty-two uniformed Central players will be on the stage and will go through the Mt. Pleasanters' formations. Of course, Pearce will not guarantee that the formations demonstrated on the stage will be the ones used in the Gonzaga game, for he is ever aware of alien scouts in any audience.

In addition, Pearce has polled a cross-section of the student body for questions the students would like to know about the game and the results, he said, have indicated an upswing in the interest in football of the average high school student. He plans to answer the students' questions by demonstrations on the stage. For instance, one student wanted to know what takes place in the huddle. By way of answering this query, Pearce will install a microphone backstage and the 2,500 Central students may hear and see all.

Other questions asked by the Centralites were: What are the different formations? What is a first down? What are the different positions and who are the Central players. In answer to the latter question, Pearce will introduce the various players to the audience.

Regatta Opens Today

Sir Malcolm Campbell in England before he built his famous Bluebird which set a world record a few weeks back of over 140 m. p. h.

The boats designed were of the three-point design and several of these craft will be seen in the 225 races tomorrow.

These drivers will give competition to the other two local drivers, Andy Crawford and Jack Hyde, jr., who will be battling for honors in the 135 class. Both Crawford and Hyde have broken the existing world records this year. Another noted driver in this class is Edison Hedges, of Atlantic City, who will drive his boat Eagle.

Arno Apel, son of the Ventnor boat designer, will drive his boat Aguila II in the 91-cubit-inch displacement class. Aguila is the Spanish word meaning Eagle. Young Apel holds the existing record in this class.

Competition Galore

In the Class A amateur outboard competition today, Frank Desmond, of Short Hills, N. J., in his craft, Drastic Stuff, may give such drivers as Clint Ferguson and Gar Wood, jr., a run for their money.

Another driver that may be among the winners is Mel Smith, of Rougemont, Quebec, Canada. Smith has two boats entered, Hornet and Baby Hornet, and either boat he decides to drive will give Ferguson and young Wood plenty of competition.

I. E. Hale, of Washington, has entered his Step'n Fetchet in the class event. Gerard Sheeran, of New York, has his boat Patgerita IX here. This boat is twice winner of the Sir Thomas Lipton Trophy. In the event this year, Sheeran broke his arm in the first heat and Jim Mullen, who also has a boat entered in the event, drove the boat on to victory in the final heat.

Buckman Intered

In the Class A professional division, Les Buckman of Baldwin, N. Y., seems likely to give Fred Jacoby, the North Bergen, N. J., boat manufacturer, plenty of competition. Buckman, who is noted for his nerve, will drive his boat, Bucky.

Ed Brautigam, jr., of Chester, Pa., who will drive Trouble Ahead, is another serious contender for the Class A title here.

Frank Schmutz, of Merchantville, N. J., may cause considerable trouble in the Class B professional outboard event. Although he will be competing against such drivers as Jacoby, Buckman and Brautigam, his craft is listed as a possible winner.

Thomas E. Cundey, of Westville, N. J., will again try to break the jinx in the Class C outboards professional division. He set a course record at Clementon, N. J., but since that time has had motor trouble in every race and has never finished an event.

Regatta notes—It was requested last night that owners of pleasure craft and their guests refrain from throwing anything overboard that might foul the propellers or hulls of the competing boats . . . Owners are warned to carry at least 50 feet of anchor chain as the channel has been deepened by the Gravely Point dredging operations . . . Many choice seats for the remainder of the regatta, including tonight's illuminated pageant, are still available at the Willard Hotel headquarters.

Hoyas Warned By Hagerty For Loafing

August and Picco Star at End for G. W.; 2 More Join Squad

By Jack Munhall.

Addressing his Georgetown squad in the dressing room before practice, Hagerty hinted that the first string line-up picked for the opener with Temple may be subject to drastic evisions unless certain players show a change of heart.

"We're going into a new season with last year's undefeated and untied record behind us and a tough schedule ahead, but even so, certain players among us appear entirely too self-satisfied," he warned.

Temple Looks Good

"Temple has a great ball club and will be ready for us, you can depend on that. And unless we get together and play the inspired ball we are capable of playing, I hate to think what might happen."

Oddly, Hagerty's charge of lack of winning spirit among his players preceded a big student pep rally at which the players were introduced amid a great ovation. School songs and cheers resounded over the campus as the freshmen, slowly getting into the swing, joined the upper classmen in the demonstration.

One of the most popular players presented to the student assembly was Francis (Reds) Daly, senior end an dthe only Washington boy on the regular team.

After the locker room conference the Hoya squad engaged in punting and passing and blocking drills. Mike Kopcik, a sophomore back, continued to show the improvement that has made him one of the best kickers on the squad. He is expected to see considerable service this fall.

G. W. Pleased With Ends

Lending strong argument for the retention of Sam Babich, converted end, at quarterback on the George Washington elevent, is the brilliant play of two sophomore wingmen who are bidding for Babich's vacated position.

Frank August and Johnny Picco both showed great promise Wednesday as they participated in the Colonials' first scrimmage against Maryland and thereby eased Coach Bill Reinhart's pains at having to shift Babich, who was a sensation at end last year.

Nor is Babich doing anything that would cause Reinhart to doubt the advisability of his shift to the important and difficult signal-calling job. Considering that Wednesday marked his debut under fire, Babich handled the assignment nicely against the Terps, directing the second-string backfield to the only touchdown recorded in the two-hour scrimmage.

Selected Plays Well

Reinhart didn't attach much significance to the score since Maryland's line-up at the time was composed mostly of scrubs, but he was more than pleased with Babich's selection of plays.

The Colonial squad will be brought within two players of the expected 36 limit today as Lud Urick, junior fullback, and Einer Wahl, sophomore tackle, report for the first time. The pair arrived late due to motor trouble en route from their Duluth, Minn., homes.

Fred Sartore, another fullback, is in the George Washington Hospital, following a divorce from his tonsils and is expected to come out early next week. The other absentee is still another fullback, Sophomore Floyd McGlinn, from St. Helens, Oreg.

Hanson, Navy End, Injured

Annapolis, Sept. 12.—Navy coaches were so low they couldn't touch bottom with a stepladder for about half an hour today.

Big Harold Hanson, 225-pound end, went down writhing in pain in blocking practice, and Navy stock plummeted. Coach Swede Larson is short on ends, and the big fellow is a standout in the heavyweight Navy line.

Careful examination — they wouldn't have handled the Kohinoor more gently—disclosed nothing worse than a bad ankle sprain, and the coaching staff could breathe again.

The Swede continued to shepherd his hefty flock through hours of tough blocking drill in preparation for the varsity-plebe game Saturday. The Scandinavian mentor believes in plenty of shock troops ahead of the ball carrier, and he wants plenty of shocking done when the boys go in with their hips.

Dave Justice, the 195-pound rookie find, continued to have first call as reserve blocker. Vic Blandin, another varsity prospect, also returned to practice today, but failed to oust Justice from his berth.

Post Football Contest Fans Scenting Pair of Upsets

South Carolina and Roanoke are the teams most favored to score upsets in Saturday's college football battles, according to the trend of selections in The Post's Football Contest.

Contest entrants who shy at picking all the favorites as winners are scenting a South Carolina victory over Wake Forest and a Roanoke triumph over V. M. I. In most other cases, the home teams are given the edge, according to the scores submitted.

To each of the five persons selecting the most winners in the following list of ten college football games scheduled for Saturday, The Post will award two choice seats to the Washington Redskins-New York Giants Professional League game on October 1 at Griffith Stadium.

Army Team Strong, Despite Many Losses

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Considering the losses, it would seem that the Army's biggest need this fall might be a hustling recruiting sergeant, but Capt. Bill Wood, coach of the cadet football squad, thinks it will do all right, thanks.

In fact, those who have watched the stalwart young men cavorting on the practice field by the Hudson believe the embryo officers might do a little better than all right, despite the loss of 16 lettermen, including eight starters, from the 1938 squad.

To begin with, the three holdover starters are better than average performers, and the remaining lettermen are A-1 material. And in the second place, the yearling or sophomore crop is something to bring the trace of a grin to the face of the stocky, gray-eyed tutor.

Capt. Wood has sliced the varsity squad to 44 men, or four complete teams, and 18 of the 44 are newcomers. Two of them are performing on the first team right now, and may stay there, and five more are on the second eleven.

This abundance of fresh fodder assures the Army of better reserve strength than it has had in some time, and encourages Capt. Wood sufficiently to permit him to venture cautiously:

"I think we'll have a fairly representative Army team. The squad is potentially strong. The boys are big enough and fast enough, and should improve as the season goes along."

The only backfield regular on the squad is Art Frontczak, a husky buckeroo who is a cinch for fullback. He's the only cinch behind the line. Right now Moon Mullin and Jim Dubuisson, reserves last year, have the inside track at the wingbacks, and Jere Maupin, a 170-pound triple threater who looks like money in the bank is leading the candidates for the fourth position.

The line shapes up as heavy and fast. Francis Yeager, who suffered a broken arm last season, and Stan Hutson, with a year's experience at Illinois and year on the junior varsity behind him, are at the ends.

Big Harry Stella, captain, and one of the best performers in the nation last year, will handle one tackle nicely, and Jim Lotozo, letterman, will be his running mate, so Captain Wood is letting the other teams worry about his tackles.

Everett Light, a former tackle, and Jim Rooney, seasoned with two years of college competition at Loyola of the South, are at the guards right now, and Bill Gillis, one of the three 1938 starters left is at center, and undoubtedly will stay there.

The schedlule:

September 30—Furman at West Point.
October 7—Centre at West Point.
October 14—Columbia at New York.
October 21—Yale at New Haven
October 28—Ursinus at West Point.
November 4—Notre Dame at New York City.
November 11—Harvard at Cambridge.
November 18—Penn State at West Point.
December 2—Navy at Philadelphia.

Terps Expecting First Night Game With Terrors Oct. 7

A shift in time for its game with Western Maryland October 7 is expected to send the University of Maryland football squad into the first night game in the school's history, it was announced yesterday.

Because flood lights ... recently been installed in the Baltimore Stadium, Western Maryland authorities asked Maryland if it would be agreeable to hold the game at night instead of afternoon. The permission was given reluctantly by Maryland President Curley Byrd who frowns on the idea of nocturnal grid doings.

Meanwhile, Terrapin gridmen enjoyed a comparative day of rest following their first scrimmage Wednesday against George Washington. The squad, reported in good shape, went through signal drills and worked at length on passing and punting.

33 Pitt Gridmen to Fly To Coast to Meet Huskies

Pittsburgh, Sept. 21 (AP).—A squad of 35 football players and coaches will fly to Seattle, Wash., next week for the game September 30 with the University of Washington, Pitt authorities announced today.

They will leave here Tuesday, arriving in Seattle on Wednesday.

Mrs. Pray Wins Manor Golf Title in Upset Over Miss Brown

Champion's 2-Year Reign Ended, 5 & 4

Mrs. Clark Winner At Army and Navy; Sally Whipple Is Youngest Champ

Mrs. L. G. Pray scored the biggest upset of "Women's Club Championship Week" yesterday, not only beating Marion Brown, but winning the Manor Club title by a decisive 5-and-4 margin. The defeat ended Miss Brown's two-year reign as champion.

Mrs. Pray played the woods nine in 37, two over men's par, for a 4-up lead and added a hole to the margin by the fourteenth.

Otherwise the favored players were crowned club champs. Mrs. David Clark won the Army and Navy title again, with a 4-and-3 victory over Mrs. M. K. Barrol, while Sally Whipple succeeded Marion Brown as the youngest champion in the city by winning the Washington Golf and Country Club title, 2 and 1 over Mrs. Don Johnson.

Kenwood Winner

Mrs. E. C. Lupton, three-times a runner-up while playing tournament golf in Kansas City, won her first championship at Kenwood with a 7 and 6 victory over Mrs. J. C. Dale, including an out nine of 41.

Mrs. J. F. Gross, co-medalist at Columbia, lost a dormie two-hole lead to Mrs. J. A. Marr, but won the nineteenth with a four for the title.

Mrs. Myron Davy and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy advanced to the final round at Congressional, while the club tourney at Woodmont also advanced to the finals, with Mrs. Henry Goodman seeking to repeat over Mrs. Milton Harris, upset victor over Medalist Mrs. Gilbert Hahn.

Mrs. Richad Mothersheaad advanced to the title round at Argyle with a 19-hole triumph over Mrs. Edward Widmayer, and will try for three in a row in Sunday's final against Mrs. Stuart Smith.

Mrs. Meckley won the Indian Spring title earlier in the week, while the Belle Haven play is in the first round. Capital starts Sunday and Chevy Chase is scheduled the week of October 2.

K. of C. Horse Show Appears Colorful Event

Steps Taken to Put More Color Into Fifth Annual Event

Steps designed to put some of the color of the Inter-American Show, which has been canceled, into the fifth annual Knights of Columbus horse show will be taken by officials of the show, to be held September 30 and October 1 at the Meadowbrook Club grounds.

Attorney General Frank Murphy, Gov. O'Conor of Maryland, Gov. Price of Virginia, and District Commissioner George Allen have been invited to officiate at flag raising ceremonies preceding the Sunday part of the program.

A class open to members of the Potomac Redland, Manor and Howard County Hunt clubs has been added to the show, in which $1,200 in trophies and prizes will be awarded. The class, working hunters, will be scored according to Amreican Horse Shows Association rules over jumps not to exceed 4 feet, and a "challenge trophy" will be awarded to the hunt club represented by the winning rider. A special class for employes of the Federal and District governments only—the departmental comic class—will be staged, with $150 in prizes offered winning riders.

Dusek Beats Singh Again

Ernie Dusek became undisputed champion of Nanjo Singh last night at Turners' Arena, winning in 23 minutes after a hectic bout which saw first one and then the other contestants tossed out of the ring. Referee Casey Berger was thrown out on one occasion.

The decision, the second for Ernie in as many meetings with Nanjo, was loudly protested by some of the 1,500 spectators who claimed Dusek's winning hold was the illegal strangle grip. Referee Berger defended himself by saying he couldn't see just what kind of a grip Dusek was using because at the same time Dusek was encircled by Singh's lethal cobra clutch.

Otherwise the evening was comparatively tame. Ralph Garabaldi won the semifinal by disqualification over Bob Wagner in 12 minutes. In other bouts Bibber McCoy pinned Rudy Stromberg in 16½ minutes with a body press; Jack Hader threw Joe Campbell in 12 minutes with the crab hold taught him by Promoter Joe Turner, and John Katan beat Ernie Powers in 23 minutes with a figure four leg lock.

Merchants Practice

The Southeast Merchants will practice Sunday at 10:35 a. m. on the Fairlawn Field.

Marty Gallagher Drops Decision To Fiorentino

Baltimore, Sept. 21 (AP).—A wide margin piled up in the early rounds carried Nick Fiorentino, Philadelphia, to a ten-round decision tonight over Marty Gallagher, Washington veteran. Fiorentino weighed 214, Gallagher 210.

Rough Time Wins Feature At Belmont

Maryland Horse Ridden by Faust, District Jockey

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Rough Time, flying the silks of J. Y. (Yancey) Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md., and ridden by Freddie Faust, of Washington, D. C., turned in one of the most brilliant races of his career when he won the twenty-sixth fall Highweight Handicap and a purse of $6,100 before an opening-day crowd of about 8,000 here this afternoon.

One of the topweights under 129 pounds, the 5-year-old gelding stepped 6 furlongs of the Widener straightaway in 1.09 2-5, equalling the track record made by Balko in the same fixture under 136 pounds in 1930.

Samuel Bachrach's 3-year-old Golden Vyage, carrying 130 pounds and highest weighted of the dozen starters by the scale, bowed by a neck while beating H. P. Headley's Preeminent, winner of the stake two years ago, by five lengths for the place. Golden Vyage was a 4-to-1 favorite.

Nonsalaried Race Commission Drive Fails

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 21 (AP).—The drive for a nonsalaried commission to regulate horse racing in New Jersey met with apparent failure today as an Assembly committee voted to retain the salary provisions of the bill now awaiting legislative action.

The committee likewise rejected proposals made at the September 11 public hearing that breeders be permitted to be members of the new racing commission.

Police No. 6 Nine Wins

The Police Boys Club No. 6 nine defeated its brethren from No. 8, 27-6, yesterday at Potomac Park Playground in a game shortened to seven innings because of darkness.

Chevy Chase Show Opens Tomorrow

Youngsters to Take Over Meadowbrook Club; Events End Sunday

The younger generation will have a day all their own at the Chevy Chase Horse Show across East-West highway from the Meadowbrook Saddle Club Saturday and Sunday. Saturday is the kids' big day, and a record turnout of bantamweights is expected.

Among them will be Dean Rathbun, jr.'s Chit-Chat, pony champion of last week's Suitland show; George Rexrode's Iron Duke, Iron Duchess and Good News, three top-ranking ponies; Billy Harris' good mare, Patsy, junior champion of last fall's Chevy Chase show; Mrs. Peggy Kriz' Greatheart and Jane, which will be ridden by little Shelley Warren, and many others.

The horses will go into action Sunday at 1 p. m., when all conformation horses will be led into the ring for judging, thus eliminating the usually dull conformation scoring at the end of each class.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

WJSV Staff Baseball Announcer

The veteran Charley Gelbert and the rookie, Eddie Leip, were the outstanding performers for the Nats yesterday and make appreciable gains in the Man of the Month contest. Points were distributed as follows:

To Gelbert, five points, because he lashed out a two-bagger and a homer, the latter clout scoring two of the Nats' three runs.

To Leip, three points, because he made three of the Nats' seven hits, scored a run, and played a flawless game in the field.

To Taft Wright, two points, because his seventh-inning single led to a run and because his catch of Keltner's long drive in the sixth inning saved at least one run. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	20	Bobby Estalella	6
Taft Wright	20	Rick Ferrell	6
Ken Chase	19	Morris Aderholt	6
Johnny Welaj	19	Hal Quick	5
Dutch Leonard	16	George Case	5

Providence Promoters Bid for Title Fight

Local Group Blocks Move to Transfer Archibald-Jeffra Bout—Here Thursday

The most kicked-around world championship fight in boxing history—the Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra match scheduled for next Thursday night at Griffith Stadium—took another punch yesterday in the form of a move to "purchase" the bout for Providence, R. I.

The blow was neatly blocked, however, by a coalition of Promoter Joe Turner, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, the District Boxing Commission and the National Boxing Association—despite the fact that Turner and Ahearn were offered $1,000 and a percentage of profits for the "sale."

From Manny Almeida, promoter in Featherweight Champion Archibald's Providence headquarters, came the following telegram early yesterday:

"Late in the season for you to run outdoors. You might run into bad weather. Will take Archibald-Jeffra championship fight off your hands. Match will draw more here in Providence. Indoor arena capacity 15,000. Will give you $1,000 expenses and small percentage of profits for match to be transferred here. I feel sure I can secure permission from both managers for the transfer."

Full of respect for the telegram's fourth sentence, Ahearn rushed into conference with Turner and then notified the District Boxing Commission before answering Almeida's message.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman of the commission, immediately issued a proclamation that the District body "fully expects the title bout to take place in Washington and disapproves of its transfer to Rhode Island or any other jurisdiction." This brought prompt action from Ahearn.

"All dis iss Al Weill's tricks," he insisted. "When we get dis telegram I told Joe, 'what's a lousy $1,000 after all the money we spent. What's the use taking a gamble at dis late date.'

"You know what happened when dey pulled Leo Rodak in up dere in Providence. I understand dey give him de woiks. You know dat's Archibald's own grounds.

"Dis iss positivel de last stuff we're taking from dat guy Weill. Dat fight is going on right here—we got obligations to the peepul. Ain't nothing gonna stop it now but some oitquake," Goldie finished triumphantly.

Whether the fact that the National Boxing Association is to get a 10 per cent "take" off the top of the championship fight gate had any influence on Ahearn's vehemance was undetermined. He explained he had talked to Heinie Miller, new president of the N. B. A., and that Heinie had said such a thing as a transfer would be "unheard of."

Meanwhile, the two principals are steadily getting in shape for the battle which was to have been September 11. Archibald is training at Stillman's gymnasium in New York, while Jeffra, the former world's bantamweight champion, is taking on a couple of lightweight sparring partners in Baltimore to get in condition for the rugged little champion.

Chevy Chase Golf Team in Playoff

Rolling Road Club and Chevy Chase will replay their tie of last week in the first round of the Maryland State Golf Association team championships, over the Chevy Chase course on Sunday.

It will set the play in the upper bracket back a full week, as the winner was scheduled to play Manor in the second round. State golf officials ordered a replay of the 9-9 deadlock yesterday.

The visitors from Catonsville will be strengthened by Ernie Caldwell, but Page Hufty and C. Ashmead Fuller will also bolster the Chevy Chase lineup.

WE WANTED to make sure that this new cigar has a true Havana flavor . . . so we took it all the way to Havana for a test. Certainly smokers in Havana would know if our new cigar actually had the taste of true Havana. We also asked prominent Cubans—real connoisseurs, such as Senador Enrique Recio and Senador Wifredo Albanés, to try our new White Owl. Without exception they all praised the rich Havana flavor of our new cigar.

Why shouldn't we be proud of this cigar? We know the Havana tobacco that goes in it is a choice grade. Maybe that sounds unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar? But, we're America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, this Havana is the same type tobacco used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this good Havana in each White Owl, too.

Gilbert Rides Conquer to Close Victory in Feature at 'Graw

Reinstated Jockey's Fast Finish Wins

Savage Beauty Loses By Neck; Boston Pal Third; Timber Lady Pays $125 in 3d

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 21.—Jockey Johnny Gilbert rode his first winner since his return to the saddle after an 11-month suspension today when he put up a sparkling finish aboard Conquer in the Penn Athletic Club Handicap, the Thursday feature here. At that, there were those, including yours truly, who believed Gilbert rode Savage Beauty close in the final stages of the mile-and-sixteenth test.

A neck separated the pair at the end. Racing in the colors of Mrs. Louise Viau, Conquer paid a $8.40 mutuel after being away from the races for more than a month. Third Money in the field of seven was annexed by H. G. Bedwell's Boston Pal.

Gilbert took advantage of a "break" at the first turn to win the race. Savage Beauty, first to show in front when Starter Jim Milton pressed the button, held the lead to the clubhouse turn, but swung out enough to allow Gilbert to shoot Conquer through and into the lead.

From that point to the end it was a case of trying to catch the flying leader and Savage Beauty, jammed in on the rail, just failed to get up in time.

The racing here continued to present a mixture of short and long shots. In the "moonshooting" class was the surprising victory of W. D. Jones' Timber Lady, of half-mile fame, in the third race. With R. Duncan, an unfashionable apprentice, in the saddle, Timber Lady came to the wire with her nose up to gain a photo verdict over Radio Gold and provide a $125.20 mutuel to her scattered backers.

For the fourth day, the daily double brought a healthy pay-off. The lucky holders of ticket "5 and 11" collected $119.70 for the usual deuce investment. Coursing, paying $7.20, won the first race and Interlace, a $17.40 shot, survived a thrilling photo finish to take the second event.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COURSING, $7.20, $4.10, $3.30; ANNIKIN, $6.20, $4.20; SHALAKO, $3.50.

COURSING, lacking early speed and allowed to settle into best stride, came to outside for racing room while improving position readily leaving backstretch, responded to intermittent punishment to close with rush and won going away. ANNIKIN saved ground from start while forwardly placed and finished with good energy along rail. SHALAKO raced wide from start while close up and came boldly when placed to drive.

Interlace (with head over wire) wins the second race at Havre de Grace yesterday. Millshow is second and Danny's Folly, shown between leaders, is third

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:21. Off 3:27½. Winner, W. D. Jones' b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIMBER LADY, $125.20, $51.80, $23.50; RADIO GOLD, $15.50, $8.90; HASTY STAR, $7.90.

TIMBER LADY, rushed up on inside to get closest to pace going into turn, was steadied along to stretch, came to outside of HASTY STAR to take command and barely lasted ahead of RADIO GOLD'S closing bid. The latter, slow to begin, was taken to outside for racing room and closed a gap. HASTY STAR, first away, set strong pace, but weakened right at end.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Bel Air. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:55. Off 3:58. Winner, G. D. Widener's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DR. WHINNY, $5.00, $4.00, $3.20; TEDDY'S GIRL, $7.40, $4.40; ROBESPIERRE, $3.10.

DR. WHINNY, first away, was rated while setting pace, drew out and won with speed in reserve. TEDDY'S GIRL, distant trailer for 3 furlongs, came wide for racing room and closed with belated rush. ROBESPIERRE was forward factor from beginning, but faltered when placed to punishment in midstretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,500. The Penn Athletic Club Handicap, Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:25. Off 4:30. Winner, Mrs. L. Viau's b. g. (6), by Victorian—Note o' Love. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONQUER, $8.40, $5.50, $3.20; SAVAGE BEAUTY, $8.20, $3.90; BOSTON PAL, $2.50.

CONQUER saved ground at first turn to take command, set good pace while saving ground and came gamely through stretch to last ahead of SAVAGE BEAUTY. The latter went out at first turn to lose lead, was steadied along to stretch, responded when shaken up to improve position along rail, but was in tight quarters inside winner at end. BOSTON PAL, well placed from start, went to outside while moving up, but hung in final drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:05½. Winner, Mrs. E. C. Bosley's ch. g. (3), by St. Germans—Friar Song. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:55 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OCTOBER ALE, $11.90, $8.30, $8.60; WOODWAAC, $6.70, $6.60; MISS CANRON, $8.50.

OCTOBER ALE, slow to begin and saving ground to backstretch, swung out for racing room, circled horses at far turn while improving position with bold rush to take command and won with speed in reserve. WOODWAAC, steadied along while closest to pace of MAEWHISK for half, came willingly under punishment through stretch, but was no match for winner. MISS CANRON came with belated rush in closing sixteenth. GRAND DUKE was well placed for half and weakened gradually thereafter.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 6:27. Off 5:37½. Winner, A. C. C. Stable's b. m. (5), by St. Germans—Zetide. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:43 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE SAND, $4.00, $3.10, $2.50; ODESSA FRANK, $5.00, $3.40; ROYAL BUSINESS, $3.60.

WHITE SAND, allowed to settle into best stride and not hurried for half, went to contention with good energy when called on and took command in midstretch to open long lead without effort at end. ODESSA FRANK was in clear of contention from start and came gamely in closing test. ROYAL BUSINESS went to knees at break, was rushed to leaders, came around on outside to take brief lead and closed with good speed.

Daily Double, COURSING and INTERLACE, Paid $119.70.

Horses to Watch At Havre de Grace

Winning Mark—Closed well in that last effort. Should score over a distance of ground.

Artist—Tired when asked to go a mile and one-half, but should take care of a field of $1,000 routers.

Dan's Folly—Showed nice effort while racing with good 2-year-olds. Stable has been going good at this track.

Reserve Cuts Purchases of U. S. Bonds

Drastic Reduction Revealed by Board In Past Week

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed last night that the 12 Federal Reserve banks drastically reduced their purchases of Government securities in the last week.

The banks made a net addition to their holdings of Government securities of only $2,000,000 in the week ended September 20, compared with a net increase of $230,000,000 in the preceding week, when the banks were making heavy purchases in order to stem the decline in Government bond prices.

In the last week the banks bought $39,000,000 worth of Government bonds and notes, but this was offset by a decline of $37,000,000 in the banks' holdings of Treasury bills.

Reflecting continued gold imports as well as a cashing in of some of their Government securities by commercial banks, the lendable excess reserves of banks increased $10,000,000 during the week to a new record high of $5,280,000,000.

Earlier today, the Federal Reserve Board revealed that six Federal Reserve banks had reduced their discount rates for advances on Government securities, in order to discourage banks from selling Government bonds.

Bank of England To Pay Dividend

London, Sept. 21 (AP).—The little old lady of Threadneedle Street—the Bank of England—serenely conducting business as usual, declared today the same dividend of 6 per cent, less tax, which has been paid twice every year since 1923.

The bank's profits for the half year ended August 31 were reported at £633,923 (about $2,494,487 at today's rate of exchange, "after making provision for all contingencies." The profit for the same half-year in 1938 was £633,727.

When one director praised the decision to pay the dividend despite the war and said "expenses are going up in every direction," Montague Norman, governor, said with his usual loquacity: "They are."

Wheat Prices Rebound After Early Slump

Close Is More Than One Cent Higher; Corn Also Up

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 21.—The wheat market bounced up quickly today after an early drop. Prices lost as much as ¾ cent in the first half hour but then rallied more than 2 cents above the lows, closing at or near the highs of the session.

Traders who had sold "short" previously were quick to take the buying side at the slightest sign of firming prices and this accelerated the upturn. Milling interests also were in the market.

Assassination of Rumania's premier, strength in securities and reported withdrawal of Federal Reserve support of Government bonds attracted much attention and created uneasiness among previous sellers. Flour prices were advanced in the East.

Wheat closed 1¼@1½ cents higher than yesterday, December 86¾@86⅞, May 87⅞@88; corn ⅝@⅞ up, December 55½@55⅝, May 58½; oats ½@¾ higher; rye 1⅜@1⅞ up and lard 5@13 higher.

Corn prices were higher most of the session and closed at or near the day's best levels. While no export business could be confirmed, exporters were understood to have taken large quantities into position for shipment abroad, awaiting improved inquiry in view of the fact that Argentine prices are now higher than American corn. The longer ocean trip from Argentina is to the disadvantage of the United States' principal competitor for the European corn market in time of war.

Oats and rye were higher most of the session, closing around the best levels. Commercial interests were buyers.

Revenue Freight Up 145,570 Cars for Sept. 16 Period

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended September 16 totaled 805,733 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 145,570 cars or 22.1 per cent above the corresponding week in 1938 but a decrease of 17,062 cars or 2.1 per cent below the same week in 1937.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of September 16 was an increase of 138,324 cars or 20.7 per cent above the preceding week which included Labor Day holiday.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 318,311 cars, an increase of 51,491 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 53,163 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 162,856 cars, an increase of 27,086 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 6,048 cars above the corresponding week of 1938.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 50,112 cars, an increase of 13,815 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 14,216 cars above the corresponding week in 1938. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week of September 16 totaled 31,352 cars, an increase of 8,440 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 8,209 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

All districts reported increases compared with the corresponding week of 1938. All districts reported decreases compared with the corresponding week in 1937 except the Eastern and Pocohontas.

Building Spurts To $69,348,000

New York, Sept. 21 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday totaled $69,348,000, a gain of 37 per cent from the previous week but 16 per cent below a year ago, Engineering News Record reported today.

Private construction spurted ahead, topping the previous week's total by 94 per cent and the same week a year ago by 154 per cent.

State and municipal contracts increased during the week but were less than half as large as the corresponding week last year.

Comparisons follow:

U. S. Smelting Net Rises to $2,657,306

Boston, Sept. 21 (AP).—Estimated net earnings of $2,657,306 after all charges, taxes and property reserves deductions, were reported for the first eight months of 1939 today by the directors of the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Co. This compared with net earnings of $2,364,086 in the first eight months last year and $4,485,894 in the same period of 1937.

The earnings were at a rate of $2.96 for the period on each share of common stock outstanding, compared with $2.41 during the same eight months of 1938 and $6.41 in eight months of 1937.

The directors declared a dividend of 1¾ per cent, equivalent to 87½ cents a share, on the preferred stock and $1 per share on the common, payable October 14 to stockholders of record October 2.

$100,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gave notice yesterday that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 91-day bills and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks, or the branches thereof, up to 2 p. m. Monday.

Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department, Washington.

Stocks Hold Firm Prior to President's Plea For Embargo Repeal; Buoyant Tone in West Reflects General Market Reaction

New York, Sept. 21.—Moderate gains in the stock list today carried the market slightly more than a half point higher on the average and, at the best for the day, the composite topped its best of Wednesday. Trading was of normal proportions for these days of excitement, a total of 1,731,300 shares changing hands. Favorable news from the realm of business and the assumption that the present war will be a long affair, in which European purchasers will be forced to seek the products of America's industrial machine, kept sentiment bullish.

With Federal Reserve support lacking, United States Treasury bonds moved sharply lower in the listed market, and other money market securities were similarly affected. The declines in Treasury issues ranged to a point and more. Foreign dollar bonds continued their downward readjustments to the foreign wars. Speculative domestic bonds were quietly firm, with a few issues showing large gains. Turnover was $15,470,000.

Speech After Close

Major news of the day was the President's speech on neutrality. This was not delivered until after the close but traders, along with others in the country, stayed close by their radios. The market reaction to the message came from the West Coast, while trading was still in progress, due to the difference in time. San Francisco reported that stocks firmed after the speech, with so-called New York issues, particularly the steels and aviations, affected noticeably. Gains ran around ½ to ¾ point.

The President's demand for the repeal of the present neutrality legislation was entirely in line with expectations. He coupled it with the expressed belief that such repeal would help rather than hinder the maintenance of peace by this country and it is doubtful if there is anyone who could have expressed the case for this school of thought with a better and more realistic appeal to reason than did the Chief Executive.

The President indicated also that he would prefer to have such questions as foreign loans floated in this market, travel by American citizens on foreign boats, payment and delivery of munitions of war and similar subsidiary matters, left to executive action rather than to legislation. There may be considerable debate in Congress before any additions are made to the powers of the executive branch of the Government, and for the moment the President is not seeking any additions.

Repeal Expected

The Wall Street point of view is that this is not essential or important in the present instance; the major question is repeal of the embargo provisions. It is the consensus down town that the repeal will be voted, after lengthy debate, and it is also believed that the President will have his wish that the debate be carried out without resort to partisanship and a full realization that we are all in the peace "bloc." Equally sincere individuals will differ with each other as to methods to be employed within this bloc. The majority of those who are in direct contact with the business interests of the country find themselves in agreement with the President that repeal of the embargo provisions will aid rather than hurt the welfare of this country.

Business news today was uniformly favorable, and thus far the indices have been able to point upward without direct aid of war orders. Engineering construction awards for the week ended September 21 increased 37 per cent over the previous week but were 16 per cent below the like week a year ago. Private awards, however, improved over both previous periods the betterment being 94 per cent over the preceding week and 154 per cent over a year ago.

In the field of finance there was further improvement in sterling, which crossed $4 by a small fraction and closed at $3.99½, up 7½ cents for the day. Tending to slow up liquidation in United States Government bonds was the action of a number of Reserve banks in reducing their discount rates for Government bonds to 1 per cent. This follows similar action taken a few weeks ago by New York and other Reserve districts, which action makes it possible for commercial banks to borrow on their Government bonds at the lowest possible rate of interest and thus avoid the necessity of liquidating.

U. S. Steel Leads

United States Steel led the stock trading today, closing up 1¼ points, the same as Bethlehem. Douglas, in the aircraft division, added 2¼ points and there was general support for the equipment issues, which are being buoyed by the new orders being placed by railroads.

Among the commodities, wheat rallied after early softness on short covering and buying ascribed to mill interests. The close was 1¼ to 1⅝ cents higher. Cotton traders marked time awaiting the President's speech and the price trend was mixed. The close was off 4 to 7 points.

The Treasury bond problem easily outranks all others of the market. Although the downward tendency promptly was resumed at the start today, Federal Reserve authorities held aloof. The selling came from smaller private investors and out-of-town banks, chiefly of the smaller types, dealers reported. There was little distress liquidation, and therefore no apparent reason for further market intervention.

Treasury Bonds Off

Long term issues of the Treasury fell from small fractions to 1 19-32 point, in the formal market, but the larger recessions were in inactive bonds and really reflected developments of the last two days. The guaranteed issues were soft, short-dated obligations, direct and indirect, reflected some buying interest on the part of large institutions. In counter trading, where the actual situation is best reflected, Treasury bonds showed declines for the session of 1-32 to 1 18-32 point.

The parade of long term Treasury bonds under par value was continued. As against two issues that touched levels under the previous session, six long bonds moved under that figure today, regardless of the assurance that both member and non-member banks are able to discount the issues at the Federal Reserve at par. All six of the issues affected were quoted at the finish of the counter session at 99 14-32 bid, 99 18-32 asked. Longest bonds now show recessions from the highs of the year of just under 10 points.

Cotton List Dips As Traders Step To Sidelines

New York, Sept. 21 (AP).—Cotton traders evened up commitments in futures and took a sideline position today in advance of President Roosevelt's address to Congress.

Final prices were 4 to 7 lower.

Hedge selling through Southern co-operative interests and professional liquidation caused a setback from opening sales. A rallying attempt failed despite fair trade and Wall Street demand.

Liverpool and Far Eastern accounts supported the list at the start, but hedging broadened toward noon and prices gave ground as buying interest diminished. Occasional Wall Street support was attracted by reports from the West that crop deterioration was continuing, due to lack of rainfall.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to 5 lower as hedge pressure and local selling overbalanced early foreign buying. New Orleans futures weakened after an early advance, to finish 2 to 7 points down.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures rose gradually and finished 10 to 18 points higher on sales of 174 contracts.

Firmness of crude oil, the late upturn in lard and evidence of a sustained export demand for actual oil furthered the recovery and carried final prices to the day's best levels. October finished 7.30, December 7.45, January 7.51, March 7.65, May 7.78.

Crude oil was quoted 6¼ cents bid in all Southern sections. However, the advanced bids failed to bring out any oil of consequence.

Yanks Top Chisox; Russo's 7th in Row

2 Home Runs Lead Champs To 5-2 Win

Gordon Clouts 26th, Dickey Socks 23d To Beat Dietrich And Sweep Series

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 21.—The World Champion Yankees made a clean sweep of the series with the Chicago White Sox by taking the final game of the year, 5 to 2, today for Rookie Marius Russo's seventh straight victory.

He allowed only eight hits, three of them coming in the third when the Sox scored all their runs.

The Yankees also bunched their scoring into this inning, finishing bespeckled Bill Dietrich's labors with a five-hit barrage that included Bill Dickey's second homer in two days and the twenty-third of the season with one on, and Joe Gordon's twenty-sixth with the bases empty.

First Major League Circuit Drives Made By Kramer, Neighbors

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 21.—The first major league homers of Pitcher Jack Kramer and Bob Neighbors, rookie shortstop, accounted for all of the St. Louis scoring today as the Red Sox took the odd game of the final series by a 6-2 margin. The crowd of 600 set Fenway Park's 1939 low.

The Sockers made nine hits off Kramer, including Manager Joe Cronin's eighteenth circuit drive of the season, which came in the seventh with one aboard, and a pair of singles and a double that gave Gene Desautels a perfect day at the plate. Desautels also drew one of the eight passes handed out by Kramer.

York's Homer Paces Tigers' 7-6 Victory

Rudy Also Gets Single To Drive in 3 Runs; A's Waste Big Lead

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—Rudy York drove in three runs with a homer and single in the last two innings today to give Detroit a 7-6 victory over the Athletics.

The A's took a long lead by scoring six runs off Henry Pippen and Dizzy Trout in the first four innings but after that Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges held them scoreless while the Tigers tallied twice in the fourth and fifth, once in the eighth on York's four bagger and twice more in the ninth when York singled with the bases filled.

Pirate Rookies Defeat Bees 6-4 and 7-0

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 21.—The Pirates displayed two promising rookie hurlers today as they virtually clinched sixth place in the National League by slapping down the seventh place Boston Bees twice, 6-4 and 7-0.

Johnny Gee, $70,000 southpaw obtained from Syracuse, yielded a dozen hits, five by Johnny Cooney, but fanned 11. Elbie Fletcher's double cleaning the bases helped Gee win his game.

spear Gelbert's drive, but suceeded only in tipping it into the left field boxes on the fly. Unable to check his momentum perilously close to the retaining wall of the box seats, Weatherly crashed heard-first into the concrete and stunned himself.

As his Cleveland pals rushed to his rescue, both Wright and Gelbert rounded all of the bases. Manager Oscar Vitt protested that Gelbert's hit should be ruled as a ground-rules two-bagger, but he was outvoted by Umpire in Chief Basil that the ball had hit Weatherly's glove in fair territory and had popped into the stands on the fly.

Bass Wild

Weatherly, more surprised than injured by his accident, rubbed his head ruefully and returned to his post in left field.

Rookie Bass displayed a tendency toward wildness in the first seven innings, walking five batters, but in the pinches he was unfathomable and in the sixth, Leftfielder Wright rescued him with a fancy catch. After Campbell had doubled to left with one out, Wright dashed far toward centerfield to haul down a tremendous drive by Ken Keltner a few feet in front of the bleacher wall.

It was a stand-off between Milnar and Bass for six innings, with each pitcher yielding only three hits. And then, after the Nats had acquired their 2-0 lead, Bass proceeded to give the game back to the Indians.

Weatherly, showing no ill effects from his crash of the inning before, opened the eighth with a single to left, and Chapman also delivered a single to left. Sammy Hale, who has batted .500 on the Indians' 11-game Eastern trip, scored a run with a single to center. And then, with two strikes and no balls on Bruce Campbell, Bass hit him on the foot to fill the bases.

Keltner chose this point to deliver the game's longest swat—a double to the wall in center that scored the second and third runs of the inning. Run No. 4 scored on a squeeze bunt by Hemsley which Vernon muffed and run No. 5 came home lickety split from third base while Milner grounded into a force play. Boudreau's infield grounder delivered run No. 6.

Cubs Defeat Giants, 9-3

By International News Service.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Hank Leiber again made life miserable for his old boss, Bill Terry, as the Cubs trimmed the Giants today, 9 to 3.

Hank hits his twenty-second homer with two aboard in the first inning when Bill Lohrman was chased to the showers. Later he added two singles and drove in five runs.

Showing much the same form as in July when it piled up a 12-game lead, Bill McKechnie's crew exploded a three-run, four-hit attack in the fifth to come from behind; added two more in the sixth on little Lonnie Frey's eleventh homer—his second in two days, and another trio in the seventh on three singles, a walk and a wild pitch by Relief Pitcher Kerksieck.

The bat work of Roy Hughes, Philadelphia second sacker and Cincinnati boy, continued as a thorn in the side of the league leaders. He garnered three safeties in five times at the plate and drove in his mates' final tally in the seventh.

Closing the books on the Phils, the league leaders entered their nineteenth victory of the year over the Quakertowners, a record unequaled by any other club.

Sale—Farms, Land 73

A CHEAP FARM,
BECAUSE THE BEST ONES PAY FOR THEMSELVES, while you are fixing a run-down place up. With present prices of farm products up and rising, this is the kind to buy. We picked the best we could find. If you disagree we have the other kind also.
Consider this:
270 acres, located between Baltimore and Washington with long frontage on Federal highway No. 29; has good 6-room dwelling in a beautiful setting; 3 tenant houses; complete set of barns and other buildings; 3 corn houses; except 16 acres woods balance of land in good field mostly in clovers or grass; ready for heavy production; one of the smoothest farms to be found; price, $100 per acre. During last war would have brought $200 an acre. Address Paul E. Johnson, Clarksville, Md., or inquire at local bank.

BARGAIN, 200 ACRES, large house, 3 barns, 30 miles out in So. Md. Good tobacco and truck soil. $3,000. Easy terms
THE MARYLAND REALTY.
915 Tenth St. N.W. National 8086.

BORDERING THE PATUXENT RIVER, on high land. Howard Co. between Baltimore and D. C. This ninety-one acres (91), $5,700. Exceptional appeal as home site, yet practical farm with around 70 acres smooth field and pasture. Small rocky streams; two sides in woods. Old-timey house. Fireplaces. Usual outbuildings. Pavement near. Good drive-in. Terms, mostly cash. Here bargain hunters won't especially care for this. Discriminating folks will. For driving directions inquire at first house in view across Patuxent River Bridge via Route 29, toward Baltimore. Write Paul E. Johnson, Clarksville, Md., or ask at local bank.

WARRENTON, VA.—327-acre farm, large dairy and horse farm. Numerous outbuildings, 2 tenant houses, 1-mile frontage Lee Highway. 10% and assume trust $10,000. Fairfax 254-J.

127 ACRES north of Lee highway, close to Bull Run stream, $22 per acre; or 125 acres $22 per acre. BUELL FARM AGENCY, Herndon, Fairfax Co., Va.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

"JUSTUNION," the tiny paper published by Justice Department Lodge 334, American Federation of Bovernment Employes, runs an ad:

"For sale, two very slightly used steamship tickets to Europe; holders got off at first stopping place on September 1."

The same organ takes its stand in a blast at somebody: "The recent proclamation by the President with reference to the strengthening of the Army, Navy, FBI, Marine Corps and Coast Guard is particularly appropriate at this time of national emergency and is of vital importance to American labor. We commend our President for his straightforward statement and position against all things subversive and un-American. The Communists and those radicals and pink associates of Communists comprising the leeches on the body of American labor now know definitely where they stand in the national picture.

"The American Federation of Government Employes, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has fought consistently, courageously and unrelentingly for many years against those subversive, behind-the-back enemies of American labor who do not have the courage to work openly, acknowledging the unholy allegiances, but seek to destroy through assumed friendship, mock honesty and despicable tactics, always behind the back and in Stygian darkness. We pledge our continued efforts to combat all un-American and subversive elements until these weeds and their roots are destroyed."

INFORMED sources see industry booming if the neutrality act is revised and in consequence an off-flowing of many Federal employes into private industry. It might go so far that Government jobs would go begging. The Civil Service Commission is looking at this very possibility.

"To live close to nature is to wonder at her infinite variety and matchless economy; to desire to know her better. In this modern age of machinery and stepping-up processes we may all profit from a closer acquaintance with the good earth."

This idyllic note, lifted from a three-year-old statement of Secretary Ickes, yesterday headed a gentle reminder from the National Park Service that life goes on in its parks.

Deer are coming out to graze in the moonlight in Zion and Bryce Canyon Parks. According to a wildfire census, many deer come out from their protected hiding places about sundown, keep on eating as late as 1 a. m. But sometimes, a new kind of death ends their grazing—autos are taking the place of cougars in reducing the population of deer in our mountain parks of the West," one technician reported.

THE RED-TAILED hawk is upsetting the calculations of bird experts. The experts say the hawk does not visit the Rocky Mountains very often in winter; the park naturalists say it does. The naturalists say the bird is frequently seen at the winter sports in Tuxedo Park.

THE FEDERAL Workers School is offering a course in economic and other problems of the New Deal, with Dr. Max J. Wasserman, former professor of economics at the University of Illinois, instructing. Dr. Wasserman is now chief statistician in the bureau of old-age insuance. Social Security Board. He has presented several courses in economics at Agriculture Department School and is well known in educational circles nationally. His lectures now will include "How to Read Newspapers and Listen to the Radio," "Why They Hate Roosevelt" and "How Prices Are Made." Classes are held on Fridays at 8 p. m.

Station PDS Presents Musical Comedy Singer

This morning, the guest on the PDS program over station WMAL will be Miss Dorothy Skinner, 49 Sycamore avenue, Takoma Park. Miss Skinner has sung in vaudeville and in New York clubs, and also appeared in Joe Cook's "Hold Your Horses." She will present a program of popular songs.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Store Studios, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday mornings from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in co-operation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Masonic Lodge Elects

Staunton, Va., Sept. 21.—Elbert N. Sheets, Augusta County banker, has been elected high priest of Union Royal Arch (Masonic) Chapter here, succeeding L. F. Shelburne. Other officers include J. Earman Bryan, king; R. Wallace Rosen, scribe; C. Wallace Wiseman, treasurer; G. Finley Brand, secretary; H. G. A. Siple, captain of the host.

NUTS AND JOLTS

Private Lives

By Edwin Cox

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Amateur bridge players are getting a break at Washington tournaments. Special sections are being made up in the regular duplicate games for them.

"Everybody likes a chance to win: that's human nature," says Thomas Hamlin, newly elected president of the Washington Bridge League whose idea it is. "The only way to win is to play in your own class."

An ordinary player might say that South had "stuck his neck out" in making a bid of five diamonds on the hand shown in today's box.

He would decide that declarer had three losers, two spades and a club, and that there was no way to avoid conceding these tricks. An expert would disagree. He would say the hand could be made by a squeeze.

Here is how it can be done. West leads the king and ace of spades, then shifts to the four of hearts. Declarer plays on the hope that the heart lead is from the doubleton and that East holds the remaining hearts as well as the king-queen of clubs. He wins the heart with the ace, leads a spade and overtrumps East's diamond jack with a queen. He plays the diamond ten, overtakes with dummy's king and leads back spade, trumping with the eight.

He next plays the ace and a low diamond, putting North in the lead. This is the situation:

	♠ None ♡ J ◇ 6 4 ♣ J 3
♠ 9 ♡ 2 ◇ None ♣ 8 7 5	NORTH / WEST / EAST / SOUTH	♠ None ♡ Q 10 ◇ None ♣ K Q 10
	♠ None ♡ K 9 ◇ 5 ♣ A 6

On the lead of the last diamond from dummy, East is squeezed. He must give up his heart protection or blank down to the king of clubs. Either play lets declarer take the remaining tricks; the jack of clubs or the nine of hearts wins the game.

South makes five diamonds, losing only the ace and king of spades.

Today's Radio Highlights

Secretary of State Cordell Hull makes a widely anticipated speech in celebration of Pan-American Day at the New York World's Fair. Thomas J. Watson, chairman of the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission, will present the Secretary with a medal during the ceremonies—WMAL, 2 p. m.

Idaho natives attention: A "Gem State" Potato contest—WRC, 4:15 p. m.

SEASONED TIMBER

Around Timothy Hulme, respected school principal deeply in love with young, dark-haired Susan, Dorothy Canfield weaves the theme of this stirring novel. Her Vermont is symbolic of an America where human values and freedom supersede power and wealth.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

Chapter 41

ADRIANA got her dog's whole attention and then pressed his nose against the handles of the oars. He sniffed thoughtfully, and looked a question at his mistress.

"Follow," said Adriana, "follow, The MacGlashan!"

He licked her hand, and grinned, and began to cast about on the beach. When he hit the tracks stamped into the damp sand above the boat, he put his muzzle down on them and began to pace hurriedly inland. The girl went after him on the end of the leash, and the rest of us tagged along after them. The MacGlashan of Rannoch trailed without giving tongue.

Day was now breaking fully over the sea and the islands. The fog had begun to lift, promising later to melt into a sunny sky, and you could see under it for miles.

The footprints on the sand vanished into a drift of cobbles and gravel on the upper beach, but the dog went on with the certainty of a bloodhound. From place to place it was possible to check his findings as the steps of the fleeing men had fallen upon softer ground. He never checked once and, as a matter of fact, he reached trail's end long before we expected it.

The two men we were pursuing had cut straight inland from the beach, along natural pathways worn through the low brush of the foreshore and the larger trees upon the foothills of Gay Head. Then they swung eastward, and it became clear that it was the intention of the man in the lead (whom we took to be Raskin from the better quality of his footwear and the extra depth of his imprints) to skirt the little cluster of houses known as Lobsterville and so follow the concealment of the woods to the plant of the Sea Reduction Corporation and his automobile.

The climax of that flight must have been reached with as little warning as we had when we came upon the evidences of it. The MacGlashan was tracking with his nostrils almost touching the earth, when suddenly he raised his head, and began to trail on a scent evidently breast high.

The difference in his behavior was so marked that Bronson and I, without conversation, ran forward and closed in on either side of Adriana. The elderly artist also slipped from its holster the army pistol with which he had held me up earlier in the night. It looked reassuringly big in the dull light; but it was not needed.

THE DOG FIRST, and then the three of us abreast, burst through a screen of elderberry and black alder and came upon Mr. Haskin. Being stone dead, he was in no position to do us harm.

The broad body sprawled face down in a long-napped carpet of moss, among tall ferns sickening with autumn to a greenish yellow. It had fallen in a little clearing among huge twisted oak trees, whose branches were interwoven overhead and forbade entry to the direct light of the brightening sky. A pocketful of earlier dusk lay caught within their burly trunks.

Mr. Raskin had been stabbed in the back, just under the left shoulder blade, in midstride, with no preliminary discussion. He had gone down on his knees like a felled tree, and died where he landed with his face hidden to the ears in the thick covering of the floor of the glade.

We approached slowly, our footfalls noiseless in the deep moss. The MacGlashan smelled the body and sat down on his haunches as if he had finished his work.

For me, it was not the spot of shining wet on the back of the promoter's blue serge yachting jacket that held the eyes—it was the crown of his head. A neat circle of hair and scalp about the size of a silver dollar had been lifted from the skull, right down to the bloodshot bone beneath.

This was a twin to the mark that I had noticed on the body of the dead Japanese, and I knew now that neither had been an accidental injury.

"This is going to save every one an awful lot of bother," reflected Bronson, gazing down upon the man who had thought to betray a nation, and had not even escaped with his life from the betrayal of one citizen of one township.

The artist put up his gun and added sharply:

"Here, we must get the other man, the man who killed him. This one will wait for us here. Quick, Miss Blake, put your dog on his trail."

Then Adriana did a surprising thing.

"I can't go any farther," she said, and leaned against my shoulder and burst into tears.

"There, there!" said Bronson, in dismay. "Never mind. Don't worry. He won't be able to get off the island."

But Big Jack, with $4,500 (or whatever the amount actually was) to help him escape, did.

So watch your child . . . the way he acts and eats at mealtime.

It is not necessary to suggest that strength . . . good health . . . and endurance leans heavily on a keen appetite.

S.S.S. Tonic is great for whetting the appetite and in helping build sturdy health. Further, it helps change weak blood cells to strong ones . . . a very important step back to health.

If you need such a tonic, try S.S.S. and we believe that you, like thousands of others, will be enthusiastic in praise of it for its part in making you "feel like yourself again."

Combining STYLE and SERVICEABILITY in a

KNIT-TEX 'British Knockabout' $30

STYLE: There is an idea behind this topcoat. It wasn't just slapped together. Notice the full set shoulders that drape smoothly over the modern, broad-shouldered lounge suit. Notice the flared skirt, the slash pockets, the easy, comfortable "hang" of the coat. It's an all-purpose coat for day or evening. Right at home for football games or after 6.

SERVICEABILITY: The unusual feature of this nationally famous Knit-tex coat is that the fabric is knitted for warmth without weight. It's wrinkle-proof, wind-proof, shower-proof, and light on the shoulders. It takes a beating without a whimper and comes up smiling.

SHIRTS IN THE 5 MOST POPULAR COLLAR STYLES

The collar styling of your shirt is just as important as keeping your bridge partner's opening bid of two in play. Both are demand bids. Because the collar of your shirt is always prominent you should demand a collar that looks right, fits right and wears right. No matter which style you prefer, Manhattans are always right.

And another thing, you should demand a collar that will not shrink below its indicated size. Manhattan collars are so guaranteed.
